TO FIGHT GRAFTERS

Heney Takes Charge in Bay City.

Secret Service Agent Burns Is His Chief Assistant in This Work.

Rudolph Spreckels Supplies Funds to Prosecute the Big Boodlers.

Slogan Is to Protect no Man Guilty of Malfeasance in Office.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—Attorney Francis J. Heney, who obtained a national reputation through his successful prosecution of the Oregon land-fraud cases for the government, has been appointed deputy district attorney for city and county of San Francisco for the purpose of undertaking the prosecution of charge of graft made against numerous public officials in this city. He will be assisted in this work by United States Secret Service Agent William J. Burns, one of the best-known operators in the government secret service, and who was associated with Heney in working up the land-fraud cases.

Rudolph Spreckels, it is said, has undertaken to collect the necessary funds, and the prosecution will be made through the office of the District Attorney. For this purpose Dist.-Atty. Langdon today appointed Heney a deputy and turned over to him the full conduct of the case.

The preparations for this campaign against alleged graft and malfeasance in office have been quietly under way for some weeks. Heney was approached some time ago and agreed to undertake the task, providing he should have the assistance of Burns. Leave of absence for Burns was obtained from the Treasury Department, and he came to San Francisco and quietly commenced the work of investigating and gathering evidence about two weeks ago.

In an open letter, announcing the appointment of Heney, Dist.-Atty. Langdon says:

"In view of the present extraordinary conditions prevalent in the city and county of San Francisco, the unusual increase in crime which threatens to grow worse as the winter sets in, and in view of the numerous charges of official graft and malfeasance in office, I have determined to seize the opportunity presented by the impanelment of a new grand jury which has been set down for next Wednesday to inaugurate systematic and thorough investigation into these conditions.

"This is to be an honest, fair, thorough and searching investigation. We shall protect no man. We shall persecute no man, but we shall prosecute every man who is guilty, regardless of position or standing in the city. It is unfortunate that this work should be commenced during a political campaign, but the conditions in San Francisco today require that radical action be taken at once and though I may be charged with instituting this investigation at this particular juncture for political advantage, I must ask the public to judge me by the results attained, which will be the best answer."

SORORITY DONS TROUSERS.

College Girls Hold "Jinks" on Campus That Shock the Good People of the Town.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This town is buzzing over "jinks" held last night at the gymnasium on the university campus by seventy-five members of Theta Epsilon Sorority. All men were excluded by aid of two police officers. The girls borrowed all the masculine garments available and stylishly cut trousers of evening dress clothes graced extremities usually hidden. What the nature of the fun was is being kept secret, as the girls are somewhat abashed at the notoriety given their escapade.

PYTHIANS ADJOURN.

Seattle Wins Two First Prizes for the Best Drilled Company in Competition.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—A proposal to raise the age limit of entry into the Knights of Pythias from eighteen to twenty-one years was voted down today by the committee of the whole Supreme Lodge.

The Supreme Court, however, will continue to hold sessions for several days.

First prize of $1500 for being the best drilled company in camp was awarded to Seattle Company No. 1 of Seattle, Wash. This company also won the distance prize, making its total winnings $2100. Capt. Otto A. Case of the Seattle company was awarded the medal as the best officer.

PACKERS DO NOT MERGE.

Leaders of Meat Industry All Deny Consolidation With the Englishmen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A story purporting to come from Wall street, which declared that the big packing interests of Chicago had been taken over by an English syndicate, was absolutely denied by the packers last night.

The story involves the name of Sir Thomas Lipton, who is said to have come to this country to perfect the arrangements begun by T. J. Lipton & Company. The visit of Sir Thomas to Chicago recently is mentioned as a significant circumstance and it is added that while here he had many conferences with the packers. The capitalization was placed at $400,000,000 and altogether the project would be a gigantic one if the story were true.

At his home in Lake Forest, Louis F. Swift flatly denied the report. "It is absolutely false," said he, "I cannot imagine where such a story came from."

"I never heard of such a thing," said J. Ogden Armour. "I wish to deny the entire story."

Edward Morris also contradicted the rumor. "Nothing in it," he said.

COUNSEL WARNS POLICY HOLDERS.

SAYS H. H. ROGERS WILL GET CONTROL OF INSURANCE.

Harlow N. Higginbotham Issues Pronunciamento Stating That the Names of Good Men on So-called "Administration Tickets" of Great Companies Are Lures for Unwary.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. H. Rogers will control the Mutual Life Insurance Company if the administration ticket is elected, according to Harlow N. Higginbotham in charge of the interests of independent policy holders in the Mutual and New York Life companies.

"It is simply an attempt to foist the old régime on the policy holders," said Mr. Higginbotham today. "The names of George Gray of Wilmington, Del., and Benj. F. Tracy are used upon the administration ticket of the Mutual company simply as a lure. Neither of these men is a policy holder and they are now too old to take a physical examination and become policy holders. They are a rich bait for voters who know them as men or reputation and integrity who will be misled by seeing their names on the ticket.

"The majority of men on that ticket are Rogers men and the ancient rule will be reëstablished if they are elected. This is the only chance the policy holders will ever have to vote for a full board of directors and if they go wrong now they will find themselves floored for all time."

TEXAS OIL IS RUNNING LOW.

SHORTAGE IS OVER ONE MILLION BARRELS TO DATE.

Consumers Seek New Fields. Accumulated Storage Is Reduced from Twenty to Ten Million Casks. Wells Go Dry and Salt Water Appears in Many Good Pumpers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GALVESTON (Tex.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rapid decrease of the oil production is driving three companies from the Texas field. The decrease foots up 1,000,000 barrels, notwithstanding twenty-three light producers were brought in as pumpers within the past six weeks. The output for the month just ending was 1,483,500 barrels, which was 1,065,000 barrels less than the demands, and necessitated many consumers seeking other fields. The steady drains on the accumulated storage has reduced the surplus in storage from 20,000,000 barrels six months ago to 10,000,000 barrels today.

At the present rate, this surplus will be exhausted in two or three months.

The Louisiana field has been shipping its surplus to supply the Texas market up to now, but the shortage in Louisiana cuts off this supply. The certain decline of the Texas oil fields is responsible for the construction of the pipe line from Tulsa, I. T., to supply the refineries in Texas.

While the Standard declares it is not interested in the pipe line, which is an assured project, the Gulf and the Guffey companies, who are promoting the $4,000,000 pipe line are recognized in Texas as Standard interests. Some of the wells which were giving 500 to 700 barrels under pumps have quit producing, and in ten wells salt water has appeared.

MOB PURSUES NEGRO.

LIGHT OF VICTORY.

Gillett's Campaign Is Brilliant Hit.

Republican Majority in the Southland Likely to Exceed Hopes.

Leader's Tour Ends With a Demonstration at Ventura Last Evening.

Now Goes North to Spread Gospel of Independent Republicanism.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VENTURA, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Gillett and Porter finished their Southern California campaign tour with a tremendous meeting at Ventura tonight: From San Diego to San Luis Obispo they have been greeted by greater crowds than local committees believed could be induced to turn out in an off year, and they have left the Southland ablaze with Republican ardor and full of confidence in them and in the result of the election. Wherever Gillett has met the people and talked to them his rugged manliness and unmistakable independence of character have made friends of the doubters, and the puerile talk of corporation control of the stalwart man from Humboldt "has been heard to cease."

Gillett and Porter have made a clean, dignified campaign, appealing to the intelligence and broad patriotism of their hearers, treating the voter as a rational person and abstaining from the petty personalities which have been the only argument advanced by the nominee of the jawsmiths. The contrast between Gillett's campaign and Bell's has been a considerable factor in the noticeable Republican gain following the Gillett meetings in southern counties. Local committees that were counting on normal off-year majorities before the meetings have been surprised by the increase of interest in the campaign following the visits of the candidates, and have revised their estimates of the votes likely to be polled. The large increase of registration in the South introduces an unknown quantity into the problem, but it is the judgment of experienced campaigners that a very heavy vote will be cast and that the Republican majority south of the Tehachepi will exceed the number which the most sanguine forecasters figured out two weeks ago.

Gillett has made a campaign which would tax the powers of endurance of most strong men, yet he is as buoyant, energetic and imperturbably good-humored as when he started out. While he has been in the Southland his wife and 5-year-old son have been in a hospital up North under surgical treatment, and he has received daily advices as to their condition. Happily, both are getting along well and the strain of anxiety under which Mr. Gillett began his tour of the South is relieved.

Gillett's speeches have dealt chiefly with questions of State and national policy, and the claims of the Republican party to continued confidence and support. They have indorsed President Roosevelt's efforts to remedy the evils of corporate greed and unfair discrimination, and approved particularly the Railroad Rate Bill, which Mr. Gillett advocated and for which he voted. All the measures enacted by Congress at the last session for the protection and benefit of the public have been explained and cited as proofs of Republican trustworthiness and the importance to California of maintaining a protective tariff has been dwelt upon with emphasis in all the addresses delivered by the candidates.

Mr. Gillett has declared his belief in the necessity of a direct primary system, and his purpose to assist in its establishment by law as a check to bossism in politics. He has approved the Owens River project, which he championed in Washington when Representative Smith was trying to block it, and has pledged himself to do all in his power to aid Los Angeles to carry it out.

Mr. Gillett has dodged no question, evaded no issue. He has been plain, positive and frank in all his declarations and has made manifest to all his independence, his loyalty to the party and to the State, and his entire agreement with the policies and the spirit of the Roosevelt administration. As George Knight has said: "The Almighty writes a legible hand, and he has written upon the face and frame of James N. Gillett, 'This is a man.'"

Ventura welcomed Gillett tonight with fireworks, music and a big meeting at the operahouse. Republicans from other towns in the county came in on special trains and helped to celebrate the visit of the next Governor. The operahouse was filled to its seating capacity and the audience manifested a lively interest in the questions discussed by the speakers. Mr. Gillett referred particularly to the importance of the protective tariff to the industries of Ventura and recalled the fact that he voted against the proposition to admit Philippine sugar free of duty to compete with the beet sugar product. He said he deemed it the duty of a Congressman to consider not only the interests of his own district, but the interests of every part of his State and country. His reference to ex-Senator Bard elicited hearty applause. He spoke of his deep appreciation of Mr. Bard's recent words of commendation and said he desired only to justify the good opinion which Mr. Bard had expressed. "If elected Governor," said Mr. Gillett, "I want to do my duty so that you may say of me what has been said by your neighbor that I have been faithful to my trust."

Frank Short of Fresno struck a responsive chord when he said to the men of Ventura that he believed it would be difficult for Mr. Bell to convince them that a man who has the confidence of Ventura's grand old man is a corporation creature. There was not one act in all the public record of James Gillett that was not the act of a clean-cut, honest, true representative of the manhood of California.

Frank Dominquez aroused enthusiasm with a speech in Spanish and Warren Porter made a plain, earnest appeal to to the Venturans to stand by Republican principles and help swell Southern California's vote for "Honest Jim" Gillett.

The Republicans of Ventura are awake this year and they promise to give at least 800 majority for their candidates.

BAY CITY'S ACTION AROUSES JAPANESE.

Exclusion of Children from Schools and Congressman Kahn's Utterances Create Excitement in Mikado's Empire—Papers Urge Trust.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOKIO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] All newspapers here devote leading editorial articles to the subject of the anti-Japanese sentiment in the United States. The excitement, which has been growing for the last three days, centers upon the exclusion of Japanese children from the public schools of California, John D. Rockefeller's utterances on Japan's "commercial treachery," and Congressman Kahn's bellicose threats, coupled with his declaration that Japan is "unprepared for a fight."

Three of the most responsible of newspapers, Asahi, Jiji and Kokumin, depreciate taking the anti-Japanese movement in California as representative of public opinion in the United States, despite the extensive participation of the clergy. They advise the Japanese public to trust to the liberal sentiments of the American people to prevent rupture of the historic friendship of the two nations.

Jiji today, however, changes its attitude, and points out the absurdity of the debarment of Japanese children from the American schools. It apprehends that Japan's appreciation of the traditional friendship may cool.

The Hoshi openly urges retaliatory measures.

The Kokumin takes the strongest pro-American stand; but, while urging continued confidence in the just dealing of the President and Secretaries Root and Taft, and the American people's appreciation of what Japan's future friendship means, it nevertheless confesses the exclusion of children, supplemented by Congressman Kahn's remarks, to be a severe shock to the Japanese nation.

The anti-Japanese agitation in San Francisco, which was at first received here quietly, being considered as purely the work of labor interests, has evidently culminated in stormy indignation throughout all grades of Japanese society.

Some of the newspapers call the action of the San Francisco authorities an insult. The Japan Hoshi, in its leader this morning, also advocates reprisals. More moderate papers ridicule the action as an anomaly against the pronounced humanitarianism of the United States.

FILE PROTESTS.

MAY CONTEST SEGREGATION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—The Japanese Imperial Consul, K. Uyeno, and the secretary of the Japanese Association of America, Goroku Ikda, have filed protests with the Board of Education against the segregation of Japanese children from those of white parentage in the public schools. Awaiting the board's decision, the Japanese are prepared to contest the legality of the proceedings.

HIDES NAME AND HOME.

Millionaire's Daughter, and Society Leader, Arrested and Sentenced to Workhouse.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WELLSVILLE (O.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Marie Myers, reported to be the only daughter of a millionaire mine owner of Colorado, refuses to tell the name of her parents or what part of Pueblo they reside in.

The woman has been arrested here and has been given a sentence to the Canton, O., workhouse by Mayor Wallace L. Fogo.

It is admitted that the woman once possessed rare beauty, and that she was a society leader in Pueblo. She left her home to wed, and the couple has fared badly. Letters requesting the woman to return to her mother's home have been laughed at with scorn.

"I would not tell the name of my parents, for it will break my poor mother's heart," the woman said.

STANDARD WANTS RETRIAL.

FINDLAY (O.) Oct. 20.—Attorney J. O. Troup for the Standard Oil Company today filed a motion for a new trial with Judge Banker in the case of the State of Ohio against the Standard Oil Company, in which the corporation was found guilty Friday of violating the anti-trust laws. The move was a formal one and will not be contested. The case was carried up immediately.

WOMEN OUST MALE CHEFS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 20—An innovation this season is the ousting of the male chef by the female cook. The Society of Male Cooks is in a flutter of excitement and indignation. The Marlborough Club, the most exclusive in London, has been invaded by the female cook. Though this appointment is more or less experimental, it is naturally regarded with dismay by male culinary artists.

THOUSAND KILLED.

Hurricane in Keys Reaps Hundreds.

Death List Grows, and Damage Runs into the Millions of Dollars.

Searching Parties Scour Florida's Coast in Quest of Human Flotsam.

Railways' Loss Heavy; Many Dead and Homeless at Batabano.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MIAMI (Fla.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The death list, as a result of Thursday's hurricane, will exceed 1000. Some estimates go beyond 1500.

Millions of dollars' worth of property was destroyed. Every hamlet along the coast, and of the higher keys that escaped the fury of the storm has been turned into a place of refuge. At each of these places are dozens of injured ones, while each incoming steamer brings bodies of the dead.

Searching parties have started out along the coast to look for dead and injured. Workmen on the extension of the Florida East Coast Railway, from Miami to Key West, suffered the most.

Ten barges, each bearing 150 men, were torn from their moorings and carried out to sea. Of these barges two were blown across Biscayne Bay, and went aground with a loss of only a few lives. Another barge was broken up by heavy sea.

MANY UNHEARD FROM.

Forty-nine men were picked up by the Austrian steamer Jennie yesterday. Other barges, each with 150 workmen, have not been heard from and it is feared they have been destroyed.

Fears are entertained also for the entire fishing and fruit fleet, as no word has been received from any of the vessels.

The Florida East Coast Railway will suffer heavily from the storm and much work on the extension, out over from key to key, between the mainland and Key West, will have to be done over again. There is also a possibility that the plans of the builders may be changed on account of the danger.

The Miami steamer, St. Lucie, which was crushed against Elliott's Key by the high waves, lost thirty-five out of one hundred passengers on board.

HAVOC AT HAVANA.

TOBACCO CROP DAMAGED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

HAVANA, Ict. 20.—Reports of the damage done by the storm in the interior of the island continue to come in slowly. The extent of the damage done to the tobacco crop in the province of Pinar del Rio is not yet fully known, but it is believed to be great. The tobacco was planted late this year on account of the continued rains—hence the plants have not yet sprouted, and many of the seed beds have been washed out, necessitating replanting, which will retard the crop. The storm is reported to have been very severe in the Vuelta Abajo district of Pinar del Rio.

The principal havoc outside of Havana is reported to have been at Batabano, where seven men were drowned, the American steamers, Campbell and Sara, were wrecked, many houses destroyed and two hundred persons rendered homeless. The Mayor of Batabano has issued an appeal for relief of the destitute and Gov. Nunez of Havana province will proceed there today with funds and food supplies.

The brunt of the storm seems to have been sustained by the city of Havana and its suburbs. No more deaths have been reported.

MARINES ALL SAFE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Brig.-Gen. Elliott, Commander of Marines, today received a communication from the commander of the marines at Havana, saying that the marine camp suffered only slight damage; that there were no casualties among the men, and that all were well.

The army transports sent to Cuba with troops and supplies have been heard from excepting the Robert Wright and the Laupag, which sailed from Newport News on October 15 with horses for the Fifteenth Cavalry. These transports were under orders to go to Isabella de Sagoa, on the north coast of Cuba, east of Havana.

THE PRESIDENT'S SYMPATHY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The President today sent telegrams to Gov. Magoon at Havana and Gov. Broward of Florida expressing sympathy for the sufferers by the recent hurricane.

DISASTER IS MODIFIED.

CUBAN DAMAGE IS SLIGHT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HAVANA, Oct. 20.—Reports received by Gov. Magoon this evening from the provincial governors show that the hurricane was less disastrous than at first believed. The storm was confined mainly to the provinces of Havana and Pinar del Rio. Batabano, thirty-two miles southeast of Havana, was the only town except the capital which suffered greatly.

The Mayor of that place reports that nine persons were killed and that many are missing.

RESERVATION MINERS ARMED FOR TROUBLE.

Thousands Camped Ready to Seize Walker River Indian Lands, and Vast Stampede Threatens—Officials Accused of Conspiracy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 20.—As the date of the opening of the Walker River Indian reservation approaches, all Nevada is in a ferment of excitement.

Four thousand prospectors and mining men are camped on the borders of the reserve waiting the hour of 12 o'clock Monday, October 29, the hour and the day set by proclamation of the President for the formal opening of the reservation. This number will be augmented by other thousands, as it is thought that the reservation is a rich mineral-bearing region.

Even before the tract was set aside for the Indians, mines were being worked in various parts of what is now the reserve, and while under their ownership the Indians have worked several smaller mines and prospects to great advantage.

The Goldfield News came out today in a leading editorial charging "conspiracy on the part of government officials in securing, in advance, the best of the mineral lands of the reservation for themselves and their friends." The News says "a small army of favored ones have been on the reservation for months armed with permits, and they had the aid of the Indians, through bribery, in locating the most valuable mineral deposits."

A dozen Goldfield mining men, with personal and political pull have had their prospectors on the reservation for some time, and they make no secret of the fact.

"Knowing these are facts," says the News, "the people of this section are greatly aroused, and are determined that they will not permit their rights to an equal show on the reservation to be stolen from them.

"Hundreds of miners have left Goldfield for Walker Camp. They go in parties, and all are heavily armed. They expect bloodshed. They will not recognize any location stakes found on any claim at the noon hour of the opening day, and they will respect the claims of no man found on the ground before that hour."

The News further asserts that the opening was not officially advertised, as in other openings, and none of the usual formalities were observed, so that the people generally could be prepared for the opening. It is charged that the early date was set and the usual formalities waived so that the few would not be molested in acquiring the ground already selected by their agents.

BEVERIDGE SCORES MULTI-MILLIONAIRES.

Says Marshall Field's Fortune Will Amount to One Billion Before Trust Upon It Expires and Demands Some Curb to Self-Increasing Wealth.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] United States Senator Beveridge, speaking at Dunkirk this afternoon, took strong grounds in favor of limiting fortunes and declared in favor of an inheritance law. He referred to Marshall Field and Rockefeller and the fortunes their sons will inherit and said in part:

"It has been found that the fortune of Marshal Field exceeds the enormous sum of $100,000,000. This vast wealth he left in trust for fifty years, his only heir being one individual not yet in his teens. At the end of fifty years, when that trust expires, that fortune will amount to not less than $1,000,000,000.

"It is believed that the wealth of John D. Rockefeller now amounts to $800,000,000. If his son lives the allotted life of man, the fortune of $800,000,000 will probably amount to $2,000,000,000.

"When a fortune reaches a point where it is no longer the result of individual effort, but accumulates of its own force, it ceases to become a blessing and becomes a curse. The deadly thing about it is that the managers of this great wealth constantly interfere in and with the people's government.

"There has got to be an inheritance law. It may become necessary to have an income tax. In the end there has got to be a control of the methods employed by the enormously rich in business and commerce."

PITH OF NEWS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A cold wave is headed for Chicago from the northwest and if present indications do not go amiss, ear muffs and heavy wraps will be demanded, for it will be cold enough by Tuesday for ice to form in the open. Tomorrow will be the last day of the baseball season and the beginning of regulation football weather. The coming frigidity is the result of a storm developed up around Medicine Hat, where the temperature is far below the freezing point. Today the maximum for Chicago was 59 deg., minimum 55 deg. DIVORCES EIGHTY-SEVEN PAIRS.

Judge McKewen has heard eighty-seven application for divorce in the last two weeks, and the only consolation he derives from his experience is that the average American does not strike his wife. Many of the divorce suits were founded on charges of cruelty, but when it came to the crucial point in the marital affairs of the candidates for single life, it was found almost always that the so-called cruelty stopped short of actual blows. When the judge had signed his eighty-seventh decree for the fortnight today, he gave vent to a sigh of relief and instructed his clerk to close court for the day.

UNIONS LEVY BLACKMAIL.

Asserting that he has been made the victim of malpractice on the part of labor unions, aided by employés of the architect's department of the Board of Education, J. C. Carrier, a painting contractor, will place sensational evidence before State's Attorney Healy Monday. Charges of queer relations between the board officers who had charge of supervising his work and labor unions, which were interested in getting more money from him, will be made by Carrier. In support of this he will bring forth a mass of evidence that the board, contrary to its rules, failed to give a hearing to charges preferred in writing concerning the practice of one of its employés.

DENIES RAILROAD PROJECT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] President Hughitt of the Chicago and Northwestern road today put at rest all speculation regarding the company and a Pacific Coast line, which has been suggested as one of the results of the company's action in increasing the capitalization from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000.

"The new stock is in the nature of an authorization by the stockholders, not an issue of stock, and it may be some time before it is issued," he said. "As to this talk of a Pacific Coast line, the company has at no time contemplated such an extension or any other large extension of the present system. It does not contemplate it now."

Physicians Dispute While Citizen Fears for Life if Patient Is Freed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HARTFORD (Ct.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Superintendent and physicians of the Connecticut Hospital for the Insane declaring that an inmate of the institution is sane, physicians employed by the State declaring him insane and one of Hartford's most prominent citizens arming himself to protect his life if the Superior Court judge orders the inmate released, is a condition which may result in demand for intervention of the court in Connecticut. Last January Daniel J. Curtis of Springfield, father-in-law of former Mayor Hayes of that city, entered the wholesale liquor house of Hueblin Brothers to get Col. Louis F. Hueblin to sign a paper releasing Curtis from financial obligations. Before the colonel could learn the visitor's desire Curtis had whipped out a short rifle from under his overcoat and tried to kill him. He was committed to the asylum. In a court hearing for release today a conflict of testimony came up.

FOOD AND DRUG RULES PASSED.

REGULATIONS OF MANUFACTURE ANNOUNCED.

Restrictions Under Which the Law Will Be Enforced Are Published by Secretary Wilson—Accepted and Indorsed Unanimously—Five Ingredients Must Be Stated.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture today promulgated the regulations under which the recently enacted pure food and drug act, will be enforced.

The commission appointed to prepare the regulations consisted of Dr. H. W. Wiley of the Agricultural Department; Dr. S. N. D. North of the Department of Commerce and Labor, and James L. Gerry of the Treasury Department.

In a letter to the secretaries of the several departments they say their agreement on the regulations was unanimous. To these regulations, also, Secretaries Wilson, Metcalf and Shaw have given their approval.

The section of the regulations respecting the labeling of products requires that five ingredients of the package shall be stated so that the purchaser may know precisely what he is buying.

In the matter of coloring, the requirement is made that no ingredient known to be deleterious to human health shall be used by manufacturers. This regulation applies with particular force to the manufacture of candies.

Adulterations, particularly of drugs, is prohibited, but standard drugs will not be considered adulterated provided they are branded so as to show their actual strength or purity.

Poisonous or deleterious preservatives shall only be applied externally and shall be of a kind that will not permeate to the interior of the product, and such preservative must be of such character that, until removed, the food products are inedible.

Misbranding of food or drug products is guarded against particularly. The label on every product must bear the name of the product, the place of manufacture and must show whether the article is a compound, mixture or blend, and must designate the ingredients and proportions in cases of drugs and foods. The use of any false or misleading statement, design or device on the label is specifically prohibited.

Champagne is required to be labeled American champagne, or California champagne, so that the purchaser, while he knows that he is getting a certain kind of wine, knows also that the wine is made in America, and not in France. The regulations apply to other products in a similar way.

It was the effort of the commission to secure to the purchaser of any food or drug product absolute purity.

LARGE STEAMER DRIVEN ASHORE.

INCREASING WIND MAKES RESCUE IMPOSSIBLE.

Vessel Lies at Point Where Former Wrecks Loom Ghastly Around Her and Life Guards Are Powerless to Render Assistance to the Doomed Craft.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NORFOLK (Va.) Oct. 20.—A large steamship went ashore half a mile south of the Cape Henry Life Saving Station at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The wind is blowing thirty miles an hour and is steadily increasing in velocity, with a heavy sea running. The vessel, whose identity is unknown, rests with her port bow toward the beach, about 400 yards beyond the breakers.

Life-saving crews from Cape Henry and Virginia Beach stations are standing by, but are unable to do anything toward rescuing the crew of the steamer.

The distance of the vessel from shore makes the use of life lines impracticable, and the high surf prevents a boat being launched.

The wind is from the northeast and the weather at the cape is so thick that watchers on the beach have been unable to distinguish the build of the steamer, but it is the opinion of Keeper Holmes of Cape Henry station that she is a tramp. The vessel was northbound and evidently was seeking to enter Hampton Roads.

The scene of the wreck is about the same place the schooner George M Grant came ashore last March, and the Italian bark Antonio, which was wrecked a few weeks later, is still in the breakers, not 100 yards from tonight's wreck.

REBELS WORRY CUBA.

Small Armed Bands Patrol the Outlying Districts in the Island.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

HAVANA, Oct. 20.—While tranquility prevails generally in Cuba, reports show the existence of roving bands at various places. At Guines armed ex-rebels are hovering about the town. At San Domingo negro ex-rebels threaten to commit depredations, but are overawed by the garrison of seventy-five United States marines. Near Cienfuegos small armed bands are reported being engaged in depradations. Fifty mounted negroes who call themselves insurgents are roving near Lajas.

Czar Abolishes Special Pass System and Confers Right of Husbandmen to Change Vocations and Residence at Will—Poll Tax Is Also Revoked.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 20.—Even the harshest opponents of the administration are agreed as to the importance of the imperial ukase issued Friday, which annulled the most burdensome and irritating restrictions of the peasantry and embodied into law reforms which had been urged for over two decades. Though the ukase was promulgated under the ancient provision for temporary laws, it is in effect an organic reform affecting four of the most important features of the Russian system. These are:

The special pass regulations for the peasantry, the hated rule by local administrative officials known as rural superintendents, the administrative control of Zemstvo elections and limitations on the right of peasants to change their vocations and residence.

Abolition of the poll tax also is a feature.

While the subjects discussed were not involved, official quarters here believe that beyond any doubt the good relations of the powers composing the Triple Alliance and the best means of consolidating the alliance and rendering it more effective in the interests of peace were subjects on which exchanges of views took place. Later in the day Signor Tittoni returned the visit of Herr Tschirsky at the German embassy, where they remained in conference alone for about an hour.

The Duke, according to all accounts, is not blessed with a very amiable temper, and affects an intense dislike for Americans, which is most trying to the Duchess, who has many American friends, of whom she is fond.

Nothing annoyed the Duke so much as the frequently printed reports of his having received magnificent presents from his father-in-law. He never neglected an opportunity to deride these rumors. When Sunderland House was being built it was published that this was being done with money furnished by W. K. Vanderbilt as a Christmas present to the Duke and Duchess. The Duke, angered by the publication, gave out a sharply-worded denial, in which he intimated that W. K. Vanderbilt had never given either himself or the Duchess anything beyond the marriage settlement.

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning—that awful sour, bilious bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as every one knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, freshen your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 60 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

TOLEDO NOW IS AFTER OIL MEN.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY PREPARES TO FOLLOW FINDLAY.

Judge Who Tried Recent Case Against Standard Corporation Is Interviewed and Stenographers' Minutes Are Ordered by Neighboring City for Use in Probable Suit.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TOLEDO (O.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Every indication now points to an action to be brought against the Standard Oil in Ohio by the Federal authorities, under a plan similar to the one so successfully prosecuted against the Northern Securities Company.

What for a time was apparently but rumor, took on the semblance of a reality this afternoon when Dist.-Atty. Sullivan of Cleveland paid a hurried trip to Findlay. First he interviewed Probate Judge Banker, before whom the Standard has just been tried. After that interview Sullivan left orders with a stenographer for the major portion of the testimony in the recent case, and then vanished.

Neither Attorney Phelps nor Prosecutor David were in the city, and it is thought that because of that fact Attorney Sullivan immediately left Findlay. Judge Banker would not divulge the nature of the visit in detail, but left the impression that a Federal prosecution might follow.

Man Leaves Satchel, Forgotten, on New York Street, Containing $17,500.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At the busy corner of Broadway and Thirty-fifth street today, a pale man dashed between the vehicles to the corner of the Herald building, snatched up a satchel, eagerly opened it, and then sank down with a sigh of relief. A policeman inquired what the trouble was.

"I sold some real estate up town, put $17,500 cash in the satchel, sat down to rest, and forgot all about it, twenty minutes ago."

No one had touched it, and thousands had passed it.

After Wild Sybaritic Career That Astounds Broadway, New York, Arthur C. Babbitt Is Arrested, Charged With Forgery—Confesses Crimes. Tale of High Life a Surprise.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After having been forgiven once for forging his father-in-law's name to checks for $5700, Arthur C. Babbitt, a consulting engineer, has confessed he robbed the same man, by the same means, of an additional $60,000.

After seven months of playing the races and astonishing Broadway by his extravagance, Babbitt was arrested tonight for forgery.

Locked up, he told a story of wild living that astounded his hearers. During the seven months he had spent $300 a day.

He confessed that Capt. William H. Wheeler, a retired army officer, and his father-in-law, was the victim of the thefts.

As a fitting climax to his wrong-doing came the return today of Capt. Wheeler, after a ten months' trip in Europe. It was said that Capt. Wheeler's daughter, divorced from Babbitt, and her child, returned also.

POLITICAL.

MORAN STILL JABBERING.

Massachusetts Democrat Has a New Vision

Says He Will Be the Next President.

Will Nominate Himself for High Office

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] John B. Moran continues his remarkable declarations in his campaign as Democratic candidate for Governor. He tells his friends and his audiences that he is sure he will be elected President of the United States when he decides to stand as a candidate.

He says he has crossed the political "Rubicon," and formally renounced both Hearst and Bryan in their Presidential aspirations.

He declares unqualifiedly for a Massachusetts map for that honor and flat-footedly says that if elected two years as Governor he will nominate himself for the Presidency.

"I will see to it when I am Governor that there will be no lynching in Massachusetts, and if in 1908 they want the Massachusetts Governor to show them how to stop lynching all over the country, I'll show them how to do it."

FIGHT ON RUEF BROUGHT HERE.

SAN FRANCISCO BALLOT POINT IN SUPREME COURT.

Its Ruling on Application for Additional Columns for Judicial Nominees Will Determine Fate of Voting Machines and of One Candidate at Election in Bay City.

The fight of San Francisco lawyers and others against the brazen attempt of Abe Ruef to force the use of voting machines at the November election, and at the same time to vent his spite on Superior Judge Lawler, was transferred yesterday to Los Angeles when Attorney Theodore J. Roche of the northern city petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel Registrar Zemansky of San Francisco to place two additional judicial tickets on the official ballot. The court, now in session here, ordered the alternative writ to issue, returnable at 10 o'clock Monday morning in this city.

The tickets which Roche seeks to have placed on the ballot are those of the Non-Partisan party and the Judicial Incumbents' party. On each ticket appear the names of Judges Lawler, Graham, Coffey and Hosmer. The Bar Association of San Francisco is said to be the real backer of the Judicial Incumbents' party.

As the party nominations stand, the names of Coffey, Conlan and Hogan appear on the tickets of the Republican, Democratic and Union Labor parties. Mogan and Conlan at present are police judges and both are Democrats.

Ruef opposed the renomination of Judge Lawler because of his decision that sent ballot-box stuffers to prison, and the curly boss of San Francisco has opposed every effort to give Lawler a chance of reëlection. The Democrats, however, nominated Lawler, and as the matter stands now that is the only column in which his name appears.

The name of Judge Graham appears on the Republican and Union Labor tickets.

Because the names of three of these candidates appear on three tickets, and the name of the fourth on two tickets, their prospects of election are exceedingly bright, while Judge Lawler, having place on but one ticket, is seriously handicapped, as Ruef would have him.

In order to give Lawler a better chance of reëlection, the Judicial Incumbents' and the Non-Partisan parties were formed, each nominating by petition Lawler, Graham, Coffey and Hosmer, and seeking a place for them on the official ballot.

These two parties were denied a place on the ballot by Registrar Adams on the ground that their petitions were filed too late, although for the petitioners it is represented that they presented their applications at the Registrar's office in the evening of the last legal day for the acceptance thereof.

One of the strongest reasons for Ruef's opposition to the placing of the two additional parties on the official ballot is said to be due to the fact that this action would prevent the use of voting machines at the San Francisco election. There is not room on the machine for two more tickets.

Should the Supreme Court decide that the additional tickets shall go on the official ballot, San Francisco will be obliged to return to the old form of the Australian ballot, which also must be used in Los Angeles county this year because of the great size of the official ballot.

The use of the voting machines in San Francisco is preferable to Ruef because of the proneness of the average voter to cast a straight party vote. Inexperienced in the use of the machines, the voters seem to have preferred in the past to pull just one lever, whereby a straight vote is cast, rather than to take the risk and trouble incident to the splitting of a ticket.

NON-PARTISANS TALK.

TWO MEETINGS YESTERDAY.

Candidates of the Non-Partisan County Organization addressed a meeting last evening at No. 719 West Jefferson street. Ben E. Ward, candidate for County Assessor; G. M. Giffen, for Senator of the Thirty-eighth District, and Dr. James P. Booth, candidate for Coroner, were among the speakers.

T. W. Brotherton, Non-Partisan candidate for Senator of the Thirty-fourth District; Marshall Stimson, for Assemblyman of the Seventy-fourth District, and other leading nominees of the organization spoke at an afternoon meeting at the Soldiers' Home.

"LEAGUER" IS MOBBED.

HIS SPEECH INTERRUPTED.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NAPA, Oct. 20.—Carl Browne, while addressing a regularly called meeting of the Independence League on the Courthouse square last evening, was mobbed by a crowd of boys and young men. Stones, sticks and vegetables were thrown, but no one was seriously hurt. Officers finally came to Brown's assistance and he finished his speech. Today he stated that he would swear out warrants against the disturbers.

POLITICAL BRIEFS.

Bryan in Denver.

DENVER, Oct. 20.—William J. Bryan made a brief campaigning tour of northern Colorado today. He was met at La Salle this morning by a Reception Committee of twenty prominent Democrats with a special train. The principal towns visited were Greeley, Fort Collins and Boulder, and Mr. Bryan addressed large audiences in each of these places. He closes his campaign in Colorado with a speech in Denver, after which he departed for Indiana.

UNION LABORITES WHOOP FOR BELL.

San Francisco Agitators and Strike Promoters Working Hard for Success of the Candidate of the Union Labor Party.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The managers of the Bell campaign have had a fine time in San Francisco and vicinity trying to keep their flocks together the past week. In spite of the renewed and frantic efforts of Pin Head McCarthy and of Square Head Tveitmoe, Bell (the nominee of the Union Labor party for Governor) is losing votes every day.

Many Democrats in the labor union ranks are changing from Bell to Langdon, the new Messiah, who is to bring about the millennium.

Pin Head McCarthy and Square Head Tveitmoe have been busy in and out of town since McCarthy's return from the East, one week ago. They realize, though they will not admit it in the presence of their dupes, that the chances for Bell's election are very dubious, and are becoming slimmer each day. In order to make some sort of showing they have taken in Alameda county during the past week in an endeavor to switch the socialist vote of that county from Langdon to Bell, the nominee of the Union Labor party. Their efforts failed almost entirely and after trying one week, they returned to San Francisco, where they are now concentrating every effort to make a showing. It must be admitted that, in case they do not succeed any better here than they did in the interior, they have at least better chance to conceal their failure in a large city, where they can raise a noise at any time and demand more dough from Dick Hotaling, Bell's local financial backer.

The frantic efforts of the Union Labor party leaders to make votes for Bell may be assured when it is stated that the Building Trades Council, owned by Pin Head McCarthy and Square Head Tveitmoe, crawled into the fold of the Labor Council (despised by all buildings crafts) in order to aid in the attempt to pull Langdon out of the fight. They debated and resolved, until at last it was decided and it was carried out, that the two councils wire to Samuel Gompers asking him to intercede with Hearst begging that he pull Langdon out of the fight. Another wire was sent to the Democratic Campaign Committee of New York, asking that the committee make Hearst drop Langdon. One telegram was sent to Hearst making the same request, though it was couched in more humble terms. If an answer was ever received to either of these messages, it has not transpired.

Pin Head McCarthy, since his return to California, is credited with having sent several dispatches to Hearst, to Gompers, and to others supposed to have influence with eastern managers, but thus far they do not appear to have availed.

With brass bands, bonfires, red lights and other attractions, the Union Labor party leaders of San Francisco can at least fill a hall partly in this city, which is much more than they were able to do outside of San Francisco. For the Bell meetings during the coming week the unions have been notified through their central councils, and each union is obligated to inform its members. Those who curry favor with Pin Head and Square Head are sure to be at the meetings, and they will bring some of their friends along; for, besides bonfires, red lights and brass bands, there is one additional lure, the booze that McCarthy sets up after each meeting—in order, as he says, to "make the boys sit it out."

All the trades-union job hunters of the county will chase Bell when he reaches this city tomorrow morning unless McCarthy and a few trusted campaigners manage to keep him in hiding until his departure in the evening. He is to remain here only one day to look over the field. As far as his campaign is concerned he could size up his chances in five minutes if his followers would only let him see without looking through their goggles. It is such ilk as Pin Head McCarthy, Square Head Tveitmoe, his compatriot, Furuseth, the terrible, and John Salamander Parry, who is slated for State Harbor Commissioner (heaven save us from such affliction!) that make Bell and his financial backers believe that he has any show at all.

During his stay in San Francisco, the Union Labor party leaders have arranged for a mid-day meeting at Union and Risdon Iron Works—the old fake bunch programme, which can be palmed off only on a novice in politics. No old campaigner can be fooled by such a blind, which has been played until it has become threadbare. Bell may fall into the trap and imagine that this mid-day meeting means votes, when in reality it means absolutely nothing, and he will be lucky if he escapes without being jeered, which is sure to be his fate if McCarthy, Tveitmoe, Furuseth, or any of that gang should accompany him and remain in sight while the real workmen congregate in the yard.

From here Bell will go to San Mateo, Santa Clara, San José, Niles and other places near San Francisco. McCarthy and Tveitmoe have tried to convert the Democrats of these places to Bell, but have met with poor success. Now Bell is going to try it. The busy mechanic and the wage-earner of the interior have no use for a professional agitator. His managers have promised Bell that they will accomplish wonders from this one.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER

Spirited contests are promised for the primary election of Tuesday for the election of delegates to the Republican and Democratic city conventions. Socialists and Prohibitionists also will choose delegates. If the predictions of the politicians are worth the words they cost there will be one or more fights in every precinct. If there be no contest over the Mayoralty there will be tussles over Councilman or some other municipal office. There are "scraps" within the machines of both parties, and there is opposition from the outside to both organizations. Voters of the two leading parties probably will have an opportunity of selecting delegates from a big assortment of candidates.

While the precinct committeemen of the Republican party will prepare the delegate tickets in most instances there is every indication that these selections will be bitterly opposed in a large number of the 139 precincts of the city. The organization choice for Mayor is supposed to be Dr. Walter Lindley, and his lieutenants are attempting to see to it that delegates pledged to him are sent from each precinct, but there is no assurance that it will be a Lindley convention, first, last and all the time, as the party men say.

Lee C. Gates, nominated by the Non-Partisan City Central Committee, has a large number of Republican friends, for instance, and it is certain that the name of Gates will be presented to the convention. It is not likely that this action would be taken if no Gates delegates were to be elected at the primaries.

Then there is Dr. J. W. Jones, who has nursed a Mayoralty ambition for lo, these many weeks. Dr. Jones must not be forgotten.

It was even rumored yesterday that the friends of S. A. Butler, who was a candidate before the last city convention, would attempt to send delegates favorable to him. Mr. Butler said last night, however, that he was not considering the matter seriously.

The prediction is made pretty freely that the delegates put up by the Republican precinct committeemen will be defeated in very many instances. They will be opposed furiously in some sections, probably not so much because of their possible choice for the head of the city ticket as because of some of the minor offices, and for the reason, too, that in some wards there are warm contests over the selection of Councilmen.

Friends of A. C. Harper and of O. E. Farish, aspirants for the Democratic nomination for the Mayoralty, say they will battle with each other at the primaries for the majority of the delegates. Leaders in each camp profess to have control of the situation. Farish has opened headquarters at No. 138½ South Spring street, and is making a vigorous campaign. James Hanley, who also would be Democratic Mayor, will wait until the delegates are chosen before beginning his harvest of supporters.

Oh, the primaries ought to be worth while, even to the voter who "doesn't take any interest in politics," but who "hollers" and gets red in the face because the conventions are so vile and their nominees so unworthy.

The primary election in the twenty-seven precincts of the Sixth Ward promises to be as exciting as any in the city—probably the most stirring of all. The Republicans of that ward are badly split in their opinions of the merits of at least four candidates for Councilman. It has been given out by the machine contingent that A. T. Cummins is slated for the nomination, and, with the usual bluster of the machine workers, it has been pretended that Cummins already has enough prospective delegates in line to assure his nomination.

Now comes the supporters of other candidates, including L. C. Judkins, a contractor; Deputy Sheriff H. H. Yonkin and U. S. G. Todd, with the statement that not more than thirty-six delegates of the 102 in the ward will be for Cummins. Judkins is said to have as good a chance as the machine man, and maybe a better one. Yonkin, too, is extremely popular, and it will take the primary election alone to determine which is strongest. It is said each candidate will have a ticket in the field.

To add to the spiciness of the situation in the Sixth, Dr. Howton, the incumbent, is an independent candidate for reëlection, having been turned down for the nomination by the Public Ownership party, which he brought into the world.

Then there is J. V. Akey, the candidate of the Non-Partisan City Central Committee, who until a few days ago was vice-president of the Sixth Ward Republican Club. The P. O. party also has a candidate, and the Democrats have several.

Keep your eye on the Sixth.

Francis A. Ralph, candidate for the Republican nomination for Councilman of the Third Ward, has set out to lift the scalp of S. W. Hiller, the incumbent. Ralph says he is an anti-machine candidate and declares that he will give Hiller and the organization back of him a lively run at the primary election Tuesday. Ralph once was employed in the office of the United States Engineer in this city, under the régime of the late Capt. J. J. Meyler, and later was cashier of the Edison Electric Company. He came into prominence about a year ago by wedding a wealthy young woman of Mexico and now is engaged principally in caring for her financial interests. He has plenty of time, he says, to be a good Councilman.

Los Angeles county Democrats are arranging to make a big stir in this city on the evening of November 3, when they will wind up the Bell campaign in this section. They will have a night parade that will include divisions from Whittier and San Fernando on horseback, and one hundred or more automobilists from Monrovia, Covina and other San Gabriel Valley towns; that is, they will have them in line if they come. County Chairman Schwamm says they will engage several halls downtown to care for the big crowd that is expected to turn out, and that arrangements will be made to accommodate the great overflow.

A committee of Democrats of Precinct 42 has prepared a list of delegates to the Democratic convention, to be voted for at the primaries of Tuesday. The committee, which includes C. T. Pepper, S. Conradi and others, announces that the candidates are not pledged to any scheme or to any candidate. On the ticket are the names of William R. Rowland, Arthur S. Keyer, Dr. James A. Metcalfe, Dr. William C. Harrison and J. B. Irvine.

FIVE ACCUSED OF ROBBERY.

Tough Quintet Captured by Bay City Police.

Charged With Bank Hold-up and Murder.

Three Brothers and Sister in the Gang.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Three brothers, named Meyers, were arrested by the police early this morning for the robbery of the Japanese Bank on O'Farrel street, the killing of the manager and the dangerous wounding of a clerk.

The tip was given to the police by Mrs. John Maynard, who gave shelter to the Meyers brothers and their sister, Edna, after the fire. She says she heard John Meyers tell of hauling a safe to the Japanese bank, and how easy it would be to rob the place. Afterwards Edna Meyers told her whole story of the robbery, when Edna came to her for protection. Edna, she said, wanted to get away from her brothers, one of whom had compelled her to submit to incest.

The police believe that this girl can be induced to repeat her confession. She was captured in a shack, where all have been living, on Rincon Hill. Richard Doyle, an ex-convict, was arrested near by. He is believed to have shared in the crime. He served a term in Missouri for stealing $80,000 from Barnes' Brothers, after they had looted the train.

IMPROPER CONDUCT IS CHARGE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] F. Kees, warden of the State penitentiary, was asked for his resignation by the State Board of Control today. Kees is accused of selling grain sacks manufactured at the prison jute mill to speculators.

The State provides explicitly that the sacks must be sold to farmers at actual cost, the object being to keep down as much as possible the price for grain sacks. Kees is said to have had full knowledge of the fact that jute sacks were goinng directly into speculators' hands, but the board says it is convinced he did not share in any of the profits. There have been numerous stories of mismanagement at the penitentiary.

MOB DRIVES OUT NEGROES.

BLACKS FLEE WHEN WARNED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CASEY (Ill.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A mob crying, "Death to the negroes!" today marched into the negro district. The town officials tried in vain to disperse them. The negroes, however, had been warned of the mob's approach and most of them had fled into the country. Others barricaded themselves in their homes. Ill feeling, engendered by assaults for months, culminated today when an assault was committed on a white girl. Tonight every negro was commanded to get out of town.

Pelvic Diseases in Men.

Many an invalid is dragging out a miserable existence with catarrh of the kidneys, catarrh of the bladder, or both.

There is no disease equal to catarrh of the bladder in producing complete wretchedness, absolute despair, haggard misery and stubborn weakness.

An army of this sort of victims have one by one discovered that Peruna could be relied upon to relieve such cases.

One man tells another man, and in this way the news spreads until in all parts of the country are to be found men who have been permanently liberated from the thraldom of catarrh of the bladder by a course of Peruna.

Many cases of catarrh of the stomach, kidneys and other abdominal organs have reported themselves as cured.

We give below two prominent testimonials which illustrate the benefit of Peruna in these cases.

H. L. EMORY

CATARRH OF THE BLADDE

Mr. C. B. Newhof, 10 Delaware street, N. Y., President Montfiore Club, writes:

"Since my advanced age I find that I frequently troubled with urinary ailments bladder seemed irritated, and my physicia that it was catarrh caused by a protract which would be difficult to overcome on my advanced years. I took Peruna, hardly to believe that I would be helped, but found relief that I soon began to mend. The gradually subsided, and the urinary passed away. I have enjoyed excellent for the past seven months. I enjoy sleep soundly, and am as well as I years ago. I give all praise to Peruna."

Catarrh of Stomach and Kidneys

Mr. H. L. Emory, Vice Chancellor and Master of Arms, K. P.'s, of Omaha, Neb., writes from 205 North Sixteenth street, the following words of praise for Peruna as a tonic. He says:

"It is with pleasure I recommend Perumna as a tonic of unusual merit. A large number of prominent members of the different orders with which I have been connected have been cured by the use of Peruna in cases of catarrh of the stomach and head; also in kidney complaints and weakness of the pelvic organs.

"Peruna tones up the system, aids digestion, induces sleep, and is well worthy the confidence of sufferers of the above complaints."

Mr. David L. Jaycox, Chaplain Clarinda I. O. G. T. and Chaplain G. A. R., 865 Broadway, Oakland, Cal., writes:

"I am an old war veteran. I contracted severe bladder and kidney trouble. I spent hundreds of dollars and consulted a host of doctors, but neither did me any good.

"Finally some of my comrades who had been cured by Peruna advised me to try it. I at once bought a bottle, and found it helped me so much that I kept using it for nearly four months.

"Peruna has proven the best medicine I ever used. My pains are gone and I believe myself to be cured. I feel well, and would not be without a bottle in time of need for ten times its cost."

Mr. Robert E. Hanvey, Treasurer Knights of Industrial Freedom, also a well known writer and lecturer, writes from 11 South Nicholas Ill., as follows:

"I was in good health years ago, when my back and sore. The pains with severe twitches tive aches. Urine was and passed with great knew this must be bladder.

STUCK TO IT

For Years But Finally Had to Give Up Coffee.

Our habits of eating and drinking stick to us like a hungry pup to a bone. We can't always break loose even when we know we ought to.

Coffee does certainly hurt many persons, and they know it. But it is one thing to know it and another to devise some way to change the habit and still have a warm beverage at meal time. Thousands of persons all over the world have found it easy to quit coffee because they use Postum Food Coffee.

"For years I've felt the harm of drinking coffee," writes an Iowa woman, "but I liked it so well I stuck to it until about two years ago I quit coffee, and tea, too, and began to drink Postum.

"I made it, not like coffee, but boiled it according to directions on the package, and the first time we had it we all liked it. We have it now, morning, noon and night, and all feel healthier and happier for the change.

"I never have heartburn nor indigestion any more, though my husband and I used to suffer that way and with nervous headache a great deal of the time when we drank tea or coffee. We can't say enough in praise for Postum, and for the good it has done us." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The Gospel of Honesty.

A merchant at one of the smaller towns in Montgomery county asserts an effect or result which is quite phenomenal, says John Gilmore. That is, that after a Holiness revival was conducted in his neighborhood many debts of long standing have been paid by those who were converted, while others, though not professing conversion, have also settled old accounts in full and kicked not. The evangelizer in this remarkable instance is Rev. Ben Young. It is stated that he says in some of his sermons that no man could be an honest believer in his creed and owe any other man a dollar. A Coffeyville paper suggests that it might pay the commercial clubs of Southern Kansas towns to arrange a circuit for Rev. Young, and have him make their towns regularly.—[Kansas City Star.

54,600 Meals Did Him No Good

How One Man Wasted 50 Years of His Life. Thousands Like Him

"What's the use of eatin,' anyhow?" said the scrawny dyspeptic to his rotound, prosperous-looking friend. "Here I've been eatin' three times a day, and sometimes twice a day, for 50 years, and look at me. I'm rawboned and skinny, still at the bottom of the ladder, sour on the world, and a pessimist. I know it, and I can't help it. If I had it to do over again, though, I would take care of my stomach, for I don't believe I every really relished a meal in my life, not even mother's Christmas dinners, and I firmly believe that my way of eating, or whatever it was, brought along with it darkness and impossibility of success."

"You're right," nodded his companion. "Of course, that isn't always the case. But in this age we must not only 'Trust in the Lord and keep our powder dry,' but we must swallow sunshine with our food. Cheerfulness, especially while eating, which is the most essential act of man, is as necessary to him as sunshine is to the flowers. Nothing normal can be produced in darkness.

"But this is what you haven't been doing, Mr. Dyspeptic. Your brain and your stomach, remember, are twins, and you have to treat them accordingly. Why not start now and repair the damage you've done. It is never too late, you know."

"You mean at my age? And suppose you can't always get the sunshine?"

"Absolutely, yes. Science has made it possible to get the sunshine, the health and the strength that your stomach needs, all put up together in little tablets. They cal lthem Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the most effective tablets in the world for this very thing. One ingredient in these tablets digests 3000 grains of food without the help of the stomach. Two tablets after each meal can do more work, quicker work and better work, in digesting a heavy meal, than the stomach can itself. The stomach need not work at all. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do all the work and gives your jaded stomach a rest, the rest it needs. Meanwhile you cure yourself of brash, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, sour stomach, acidity, fermentation, bloat, and the worst cases of dyspepsia and indigestion. You get rid of these for all time. And then, besides, you can eat all you want and whenever you want, and you will also relish mother's Christmas dinners if you will take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating. That's the sunshine I was talking about. Then your face will reflect the internal change going on. you'll be more energetic, your mind will be clearer, you will have more confidence in yourself, you'll be happier, and you'll be yourself again.

"Your heart will change and you'll feel rosy. You'll enjoy your meals—and live. Let's walk down to the drug store and let me introduce you to one little package of these Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them at any drug store in the world for only 50c a package. It is worth it, Mr. Dyspeptic."

Tame Cats Become Wild.

An interesting study of animal nature is found by possum and coon hunters of this city in the 1000 or more acres of dense timber on the Marmaton River bottoms, west of town. It is found that many once tame house cats are now inhabiting timber as wild and more ferocious fighters when treed than any other species of animals which hunters are apt to encounter in these woods.

The cats thus returned to the native life of their species are said by the hunters to grow considerably larger than their civilized brothers and sisters and to be able to engage a whole pack of dogs single-handed.—[Fort Scott Tribune.

As to the Elevator Boy.

The life of an elevator boy is more strenuous than many people imagine. In the course of a single day he will have more ups and downs than the average speculator or gambler will have in all his life. He meets many queer people, too, during the day. Once an elevator boy was a little slower than usual in lowering his cage in response to the ring of a very profane and crabbed man who waited to be taken up on the ground floor.

"What in h—l are you doing with this elevator?" said the crabbed man as he stepped in at last.

"Just raising the devil," replied the boy as he started the cage up with his only passenger.—[Judge.

Ban on Charivaris.

There is rigid charivari ordinance in effect in Sabetha, Kan. Under the provisions of this ordinance "any one caught out after 7 p.m. carrying a dishpan, gun, revolver, or any other instrument of torture during a period of seven days after there has been a marriage in or near Sabetha; and any party or parties being seen singly or doubly or in gangs of any number whatsoever, then and there being, having then and there in their hands any of the said dishpans, guns, revolvers, or any instrument of torture whatsoever, shall be deemed guilty of conspiracy to commit a charivari, and shall be fined in the sum of not less than $5 nor more than $500."

Mustaches in Fashion.

The tiny moustache is in again. The smooth-faced man has had his day and the chap with the drooping moustache must chop the droop off and curl up the ends if he wants to be considered smart, says Isabel Fraser from Newport.

Women have ever favored smooth-faced men, who themselves are strong promoters of the new fad. A hirsute disguise may prevent their being taken for flunkeys, an annoyance to which they are constantly subjected. Especially is this true when they are in evening clothes. Though the work of raising a moustache may be irksome, it is not so hard, sentimentally, as the sacrificing of the beard of a lifetime.

The Coat That Was Dislocated

By A. Taylor-Cutter.

"NOW Sweat Me!" said the Coat, "but this is Cruelty toCloth."

"What the deuce are you doing with me, Old Dr. Goose?"

"You've got me all shrunk up and stretched out in spots till I feel like a distortion."

"Oh, that'll be all right, Mr. Coat," said the Doctor.

"I'm merely putting a little Style into you by my Chain-lightning process!"

"Just grin and bear it for a few minutes longer, Mr. Coat, and the Operation will soon be over."

So the Coat took Old Dr. Goose's Medicine without wincing, and came out of the Ordeal looking Slick as a "Poole of London" Production.

It laid around your Neck as Smooth as Varnish and it Curved round your Chest in a way that was Shell-shaped and Killing.

When you were Slid into it carefully, by the Able Salesman, and were then introduced to yourself in the tall mirror you couldn't help thinking—

"My, what a Handsome Devil that Person in the Glass is!"

So you bought the Slick Coat, and you know what happened to it a week later.

It was the Same Old Story of the tight Collar, the bulging Lapel, the sagging Shoulders, and the humble hunchbacked expression.

All the "Style" hand vanished out of that Garment after the first few days' wear in Damp Weather.

The Flat-iron faking had wilted out, and your Coat needed another dose of Old Dr. Goose's Tonic, viz., pressing to brace it up again.

But, if that Coat had been made by "Sincerity Tailoring" — by thorough hand-needle work Shaping—instead of by the faky Flat-iron, things would have been everlastingly different.

Because the strong threads in the close Stitching would have held the Garment in shape as long as the threads of the Cloth held together.

And the Sincere, hand-sewing which holds the Curves and Concavities of Kuh, Nathan & Fischer Garments in Shape till worn out, also adds strength to the cloth at the Strainy Places where Strength is most needed.

Of course, you couldn't know the difference between our hand-stitched "Sincerity Clothes" and the usual Flat-iron-faked kind until we told you about it.

But it's up to you now.

If your next Suit or Overcoat bears the label of the "Sincerity Tailors," there will be more more satisfaction—more permanent Style, and Shape-retention in it than you're like to get from a fairly high-priced Tailor.

It wouldn't pay us to advertise that fact if we couldn't "Make Good" on it. Would it?

So just make a note of our label (below,) for it means Style-Insurance to you, and Shape-retention, at no extra cost.

That label reads—

Consumption Cured

MRS. ANNA HENKE

Mrs. Henke, known as the handsomest woman in Milwaukee, states that after physicians had failed to give her any permanent relief from that dread disease consumption, she tried Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey and has been entirely Cured.

Mrs. Henke thankfully writes: "For six years I have been ailing with lung trouble, which kept growing worse until my case became serious. I employed four different local physicians, giving each a fair trial, but with very little success. During this period I was troubled with dizziness, cold sweats, cold hands and cold feet, coughing, chills and hemorrhages, which clearly indicated consumption. My physicians suggested that I move to a different climate. I tried several widely advertised medicines, but with no good results, then I tried Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. After using one bottle my condition began to improve. I continued to use this remedy for two years and am now in excellent condition. I used to be so weak that I could hardly stand up. I am now able to do all my household work, including washing. This letter is given of my own free will and that it may, if desirable, be used publicly, that other sufferers may learn of my wonderful cure. I am a life-long resident of Milwaukee, and the mother of five children.—MRS. ANNA HENKE, Milwaukee, Wis., April 12, '06.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY

If you wish to keep strong and vigorous and have on your cheeks the glow of perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions, and take no other medicine. It is the only whiskey recognized as a medicine, and contains no fusel oil. This is a guarantee. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has stood severe tests for fifty years and has alway been found absolutely pure and to contain great medicinal properties.

It is the one absolutely pure medicinal whiskey and is sold only in sealed bottles; never in bulk. Look for the trademark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Price $1.00. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. THE OWL DRUG CO.

COL. SPRUANCE WON BY CUPID.

Leading Clubman and Widow Married at San Diego.

Friends Kept Unawares Until Event Is Quite Near.

Party in Pursuit Arrives in Time for Gratulations.

Cupid has made a romantic and sensational steal.

Col. L. J. C. Spruance, heretofore a supposedly confirmed bachelor, vice-president of the Jonathan Club and secretary of the California Citrus Union, was married at San Diego yesterday to Mrs. Mary Baxter Kelsey, daughter of John F. Baxter of Pasadena, a wealthy Pittsburgh banker and a prominent mining operator in Nevada.

Col. L. J. C. Spruance and his bride.

The bride is a charming society woman, with rare gifts of conversation and witty repartee. She is well known and popular in both Pasadena and Los Angeles society, particularly in this city.

Without a word to any one, Col. Spruance quietly captured the fascinating widow, broke loose from his bachelor ties, and took the early morning train to San Diego, where the marriage was performed, unheralded and unattended. The "Knockers" Club of the Jonathans have been foiled, and "Foxy Lew" has escaped all those troubles that would have come had he been brave enough to fess up and face the music.

"Oceanside, 11:50 a.m.: Mary and I are on the way to see the parson. Now will you be good?"

When this news came by wire, the Jonathan Club became a turmoil. F. B. Silverwood, Harry Blood and R. D. Bronson organized a posse, and accompanied by the father of the bride, rushed to San Diego on the afternoon train to capture the runaways. They were too late, arriving just in time to dine with Col. and Mrs. Spruance at Coronado, where the happy pair will spend their honeymoon.

FAILS TO ATTEND DINNER.

Yesterday noon a dinner was given at the Jonathan Club in honor of Harry E. Blood of New York, the author of the song, "Ain't it Funny What a Difference a Few Hours Make?" which Col. Spruance made a great hit with at the club minstrels a few months ago. Col. Spruance had said that he would be fifteen minutes late at the dinner, and when he was due the following telegram arrived: "Lew and Mary regret impossibility to attend luncheon on account of previous engagement. Great doing today. Wire your congratulations to Coronado. (Signed) Billy Buttinsky."

"Ain't it funny what a difference a few hours make?" sang the diners, led by Harry Blood, and then the rush for the afternoon train was made.

Telegrams by the score were sent from the club; handsome presents by the bushel were purchased during the afternoon; dinners were planned—at least one of which, and a big one, is to be at the expense of the groom; the news burned over the wire to Pasadena, and there has not been such a stir for months in the social circles of the sister cities.

Col. Spruance met Mrs. Kelsey about three years ago, and the wedding of yesterday was the result of an affection of long standing. While it was believed that an engagement was being covered up, the sudden culmination of the pretty romance was a complete surprise to everybody.

WILL MISS RENDEZVOUS.

The Jonathans fear that "real home life" may work a change in their jovial chairman of the house committee, who has the most stunning apartments at the club; who knows all the little niceties of club dinners and who has for eleven years been an arc light in the life of the organization. His handsome bachelor quarters in the southwest corner of the apartment floor of the club have long been pointed to as a bachelor's ideal home and as an evidence of his neatness, culture and artistic taste. The popular rendezvous will be missed.

Spruance is lieutenant-colonel on the Governor's staff and has been a member of the Calumet Club of Chicago, where he was born, since he was 21 years old. That he is a lover of sports is shown by the fact that he is a member of the Los Angeles Country Club, the San Gabriel Country Club, the Covina Country Club, which he organized and promoted, and the South Coast Yacht Club. He is a large stockholder in the Visalia Sugar Company and was formerly president of the Spruance Fruit Company, which was merged with the California Citrus Fruit Union of which he is now secretary and treasurer. Col. Spruance is an officer of the Al Malaikah Temple of the Mystic Shrine of 1700 members and has almost numberless friends in this city. He is a well-traveled man, is a heralded after-dinner speaker and has gained a reputation as "a prince of entertainers."

The Spruance family is well known in Chicago, where his father, who died a year ago, was a pioneer and a member of the Chicago Board of Trade. A sister of Col. Spruance visited Los Angeles on her wedding trip not long ago, being married to S. T. A. Loftis, president of Loftis Brothers, diamond merchants.

Mrs. Kelsey is the widow of a nephew of C. W. Smith of Pasadena, who died about five years ago. She has been living with her father and mother at No. 95 South Los Robles avenue. Col. and Mrs. Spruance will make their home in the southwest part of the city and are planning to build a handsome residence.

CANDIDATE SLAIN AT DEL MAR.

SON OF OCEANSIDE JUSTICE IS THE KILLER.

Tragedy Takes Place at Ranch House—Young Half-breed, After Leaving the Two, Returns and Finds One of Them Dead—Slayer Under Arrest Pleads Self-defense.

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 20.—John Roach, Democratic candidate for constable at Del Mar, was sabbed and killed by Ben Hayes, son of Justice J. C. Hayes of Oceanside between 5 and 6 o'clock this afternoon.

The killing took place at Roach's house at Del Mar. Young Hayes, accompanied by a halfbreed known as "Indian Joe," went to the Roach residence and "Joe" soon afterward left Hayes and Roach there. He returned a short time afterward and found Roach dead.

Just what occurred between the two men during the interval while Joe was absent is not known. Hayes made no effort to escape and was arrested. He claims to have acted in self-defense.

PHASES OF THE TRADE BOOM.

Railroads Doing a Heavy Business With a Great Shortage of Cars.

The railroads of the West are short over 75,000 cars, and Easterns roads are short over 100,000 cars, a combined shortage of upwards of 200,000 cars. A feature of the traffic both East and West is the heavy movement of coarse and high-class freight, which pays the remunerative rates, and earnings of railroads are larger than ever before. This condition reflects the great commercial activity of the West, and the immense expansion in populationand wealth that has taken place in the past ten years. The desire for homes in new sections is constantly increasing, new industries are springing up everywhere, and for the present all appear to be fairly prosperous.

One important feature in the trade situation is the readiness with which merchants and manufacturers are meeting their obligations. With the exception of a few sections where crops have been short, collections are above the average.

12,400 CARS ORDERED.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, to meet its share of the car shortage, has placed contracts for 12,400 freight cars, involving an expenditure of $15,000,000.

The contracts specify that the delivery of the equipment shall begin in April next, and continue until late in the summer.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has ordered this year about 35,000 freight cars, which are being delivered at the rate of 100 a day. More than 18,000 have already been delivered and placed in active service.

It is understood that an order of 500 steel passenger coaches to cost $5,000,000 will be placed soon. Three experimental cars built in the company's shops have not met in many details the requirements of the motive power officers, and by request designs have been submitted by the larger car building companies.

The New York Central is also entering upon an expenditure of $25,000,000 for rolling stock, contracts having been awarded to the Pullman and the American Car and Foundry Companies for 4000 cars each, to the Standard Steel Car Company for 5300 cars, and to Barney & Smith for 2000 cars.

MISSOURI FACTORY OUTPUT.

The Missouri State Labor Bureau has made public the total manufacturing output of sixteen Missouri counties. For the year 1905 the manufactured output of the sixteen counties, including Buchanan, and the city of St. Joseph, was valued at $72,146,863. This is for 985 establishments, which reported for that year to Labor Commissioner Anderson. The raw material cost these plants $42,169,554. They paid out in rent, taxes and insurance $623,119.

It took 15,590 men and 3402 women to produce this large output of goods, and they received $7,601,258 in wages for the year's work. The total capital invested for 985 establishments is $14,654,978.

BEET SUGAR PRODUCTION.

Nebraska and Colorado farmers will this year raise more than $20,000,000 worth of sugar beets, and so profitable is the business becoming that lands which seven years ago, when the raising of beets was first attempted in Colorado on a considerable scale, could be bought for from $50 to $100 an acre could be sold today for from $250 to $275 an acre.

One of the lessons taught by Nebraska's experience in producing sugar beets is the value of the refuse products of the factories as food for stock. The pulp of the beets makes excellent feed and it is now being utilized for that purpose.

It has been demonstrated that all other things being equal, sugar beets can best be raised on irrigated lands, and for this reason it seems likely that the beet sugar industry will develop more rapidly in Nebraska and Colorado and other Western States where there are large tracts of semi-arid land which it is practicable to irrigate than it will in Michigan and Wisconsin and other States east of the Missouri River. The first beet sugar factory was established in Colorado only seven years ago, yet there are now in that State fifteen active factories and 116,000 acres of land growing sugar beets.

THE GREAT COAL INDUSTRY.

Uncle Sam's statisticians have just figured out how many tons of coal were mined in the United States last year and how many dollars it was worth, says the Philadelphia Press. The totals are most impressive. As a producer of coal Pennsylvania is so far in the lead that there is no second. Indeed, all the rest of the country put together just makes a rival.

The mines gave up last year 393,000,000 tons, of which over 77,000,000 tons of anthracite and 118,000,000 tons of bituminous came from Pennslyvania. This was just half the amount produced within the nation's borders. But anthracite is more valuable than soft coal so that while the Keystone State had 50 per cent. of the total output, it was worth 53 per cent. of the total, $477,000,000 that represents the mining wealth of America last year.

The amount of coal mined in this country just about doubles every decade. Each year sees a larger proportion mined with machinery and yet there are employed in the collieries of the United States 626,000 men and boys.

Less than a decade ago Great Britain produced more coal than any other country in the world, but the United States has not only caught up, but is now far ahead. This tremendous increase in the quantity of fuel consumed in this country is the truest index to the marvelous industrial development which has occurred.

REST

While You Work!

That sounds paradoxical, but the reasoning is correct.

Rest signifies "comfort" and there's comfort in working with a clear brain, steady nerves, possessed of the conscious power to "do things" and still have a lot of thought and energy stored up for more work.

To be in fashion nowadays, one must be able to do something well that requires strenuous activity and correctly thought out plans.

The "gentlemen of leisure" belong to a former era—not in demand in this country at the present time. The modern gentleman is a "doer"—not a mere "looker-on."

Individuals differ in their ability to plan and execute, but human energy is largely derived from food. And that food is best which supplies all the requirements with the least expenditure of bodily (digestive) effort to convert it into action.

Grape-Nuts, the product of a food expert's experiments and practical application during many years, contains the nitrogenous elements of field grains (wheat and barley) that repair tissue waste. This waste is greater or less in accordance with the activity of the individual.

It contains also the carbohydrates, or starch element (changed in making Grape-Nuts, into soluble sugar for absorption into the blood stream) which the vital forces convert into energy.

It contains also the highly important phosphate of potash which the system elaborates, by combining with albumen, into the delicate gray matter of brain and nerve centers. Where Grape-Nuts forms the basis of food, the digestive organs do their work easily and naturally, converting food into stored up energy and keeping the tissues in perfect repair—then they rest, while this energy is at the command of the individual to work with in comfort—the rest of wholesome activity. Then does the work count. Read the little book in pkgs. of Grape-Nuts, "The Road to Wellville."

"There's a reason."

MRS. L. CLIFFORD FIGG.

Mrs. L. Clifford Figgs, of Chicago, Ill., who suffered intensely for months from kidney and bladder trouble, says that after taking other medicines without relief Warner's Safe Cure restored her to health. She writes June 1st, '06.

"It gives me great pleasure to recommend Warner's Safe Cure to all who may be suffering from kidney and bladder trouble. I was ill and miserable for months with backache, sick headache, dizziness, rheumatic pains and neuralgia, grew daily more nervous and finally, after consulting a physician, I learned that I had kidney and bladder trouble. After taking his medicines for some time with little or no relief, I determined to take the advice of a friend and try Warner's Safe Cure. One bottle certainly made a great difference, and, continuing the use of Safe Cure, I soon noticed the urinary disorders and pains disappearing, and gradually my health and strength returned. I took six bottles in all, which effected a complete cure, and I am most happy to recommend your medicine to all in need."—Mrs. L. Clifford Figg, 1449 Dakin St., Chicago, Ill.

DIAMONDS

European advices inform us that there are practically no diamonds of quality suitable for the American market being offered, even at advanced prices.

Which means that another increase in the price of diamonds is imminent.

The earning power of diamonds for the past eight years has been from 20 to 30 per cent. annually.

Better buy diamonds now—our prices are lower than prevail at other stores. We carry an enormous stock of diamonds at all times.

ARD HELD UP TO C. E. HOST.

[illegible]n't Be Bossed by Corporations.

[illegible]terians Will Hold Convention.

[illegible] Conaty Gets Stock[illegible] Through Free.

[illegible] intend to mention any [illegible] Leonard Merrill yester[illegible] speaking on the subject of [illegible]," at the Christian Endeavor Institute, "but the first letters of his name are Ben Ward."

Mr. Merrill was speaking of officers who have been found faithful to duty, and told of Ward hiring a blacksmith to chain a private car to the railroad track until the tax was paid.

"In a short time," continued Mr. Merrill, "a deputy from the office of Walter Parker appeared at the office of Mr. Ward with a letter, which was intended to release the car, and save payment of the tax. It is needless to say that the letter didn't 'go.'

"The political machine is not only corrupt, but it is unreliable; it is ruled by the few, who simply delude the people."

Mr. Merrill contended that it rests with the young people of the churches to change affairs, by making politics part of their business, and giving support to good men in office, and using their influence to have such men elected. He lamented the fact that the high office of Superior Judge could be discredited by political trickery, in the interest of corporations. He declared the political situation so bad that it is difficult to get decent men to consent to be candidates.

William Shaw of Boston, treasurer of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, was the only speaker last night. Shaw is a good talker, and his speech sparkled with real humor. His topic was "Christian Endeavor Possibilities," his deductions being drawn from a trip through California, and the other Coast States ten years ago. He said that at that time the impression in the East was that the people out here were giving up their lives entirely to the God of Gold, but that the great Christian progress had entirely refuted any such theory.

"A city cannot be built on gold alone," he declared, "but it must have character back of it. Here in the queen city of the south you will be famous not alone for your wealth, but for the character of the men and women who have made you great."

He called attention to the fact that the single Christian Endeavor Society of twenty-five years ago, has now increased to 57,000 societies, and in defense of the movement as a trainer of young people for good lives and successful Christian work, he said: "You can't have master mechanics without first having apprentices."

The speaker also held up the idea that the society is not so much for the boy "who is already so good that he can hardly keep his coat on, but for the boy who is so bad that you just feel like telling him that he better not come any more."

He wants both kinds. Like the boy with the strawberries, or ice cream, he wanted to know: "What's the matter with both? We want both quality and quantity."

The institute will close with junior and intermediate meetings at 3 o'clock this afternoon, the former under the leadership of Miss Austermell, and the latter led by Leon V. Shaw with T. C. Horton as the principal speaker.

MISSIONS AND METHODS.

—PRESBYTERIANS WILL MEET.

The Presbyterian churches of Los Angeles will unite in an institute of missions and methods, to be held on Tuesday. The first session will be held in Central Presbyterian Church at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and the evening session in Immanuel Presbyterian Church. Bishop Pays no Duty.

When Bishop Conaty was in Rome last spring he purchased several pairs of silk hose, to correspond with the color of vestments worn on stated occasions, and ordered them sent direct to this city. When they arrived here, the Collector of Customs decided that they were subject to a 60 per cent. duty as silk wearing apparel. Bishop Conaty thought that it was an unfair decision, as they were part of his vestments. He appealed the case to the United States Board of Appraisers, and yesterday a decision was rendered in his favor.

Religious Briefs.

A committee consisting of fifty Swedish residents has been created to forward the interests of the coming Swedish Festival at Elk's Hall on November 1 to 6. From this greater committee the following Executive Committee has been named: Dr. E. Neelander, G. Eckdahl and Jackob Smith. There are 5000 Swedes in the city and it will be a notable festival.

Dean Wilkins of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral has gone to Arrowhead Springs for rest and recuperation. During his absence services will be conducted by the curate, Rev. L. M. Idleman.

Today will be a day of intercession for Sunday-schools in the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Boyle Heights.

Methodist Relief Legion.

The sending of Dr. Larkin, formerly of Grace Methodist Church, San Francisco, to Cincinnati to have charge of the creation of a fund for the rebuilding of the churches destroyed in the earthquake and fire, has resulted in the determination to form coöperative committees in Los Angeles, Denver, Chicago, Kansas City, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Boston. The work will be done under the name of the "Methodist Laymen's Relief Legion."

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

TOWER FALLS, MAN INJURED.

PASADENAN JUST ESCAPES A BAD ACCIDENT.

New Casino and Concert Hall Seems to Be Assured—Shakespeare Club's First Meeting—Business Men Lay Aside Cares and Go on Hunting Expedition.

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Oct. 20.—A big wooden tower, sixty feet high, which had been erected on the site of the new Braley building for the purpose of supporting an elevator used in hoisting building material, was blown down by the wind this afternoon, and Ralph Gavel, a carpenter engaged in constructing it, was badly injured. The tower was built of heavy four-by-four timbers, and was intended to withstand a weight of several tons, but a heavy gust of wind seized it in its grasp and in an instant it was lying on the ground, a splintered mass.

Gavel, in company with two other workmen, was at work on the tower when the crash came. The other men jumped and landed on the roof of the Henderson-Macomber building, escaping without injury. Gavel was caught under the flying timbers and was crushed under their weight. As he fell he landed on the roof of the adjoining building, and it was necessary to procure ladders in order to release him from his precarious position.

As soon as Gavel was brought down it was seen that he was in need of immediate medical attendance, and Ives & Warren's ambulance was summoend. He was taken to the Pasadena Hospital. Medical examination disclosed the fact that he was suffering from severe bruises, and that his back was wrenched, but no bones were broken, and unless internal injuries develop, it is not thought that he will be long confined to the hospital.

That more people were not injured is simply due to the fact that the tower fell against the adjoining building instead of into the open. About twenty-five men were at work at the time of the accident, and a force of bricklayers was at work directly under the tower. The only thing that saved their lives was the fact that the tower fell against the wall of the building, where it rested until they had opportunity to get away in safety.

How the tower happened to fall is a mystery, as it was constructed of heavy timber, and was intended to withstand an immense strain. It is supposed, however, that the steady wind which blew all of the afternoon weakened the supports, and that the strain of the men at work on the top made it top-heavy. The supports were not all in place and, at the time of the accident, Gavel was at work finishing the shaft through which the elevators were to run. At the time the tower fell there was an exceptionally heavy wind blowing.

OTHER WIND DAMAGE.

A heavy northwest wind, which has been blowing nearly all day, has done considerable damage to trees and fences, and minor accidents have been reported from all parts of the city. The downtown district was troubled by the heavy clouds of dust which the wind stirred up from time to time, and a thin coating of dirt was scattered around over all of the show windows.

On North Los Robles avenue a young fir tree was blown down and blocked the sidewalk for some time, while many young trees in gardens were uprooted or broken off close to the ground. Streets were filled with pieces of flying paper and at one time Colorado street presented the appearance of a sand storm in a desert.

On North Colorado street a bit of flying paper nearly caused a runaway. A horse hitched to a light buggy became frightened at a newspaper which was being blown around, and backed sharply into the street. The buggy was turned over on its side and only the prompt arrival of assistance prevented a serious accident.

Tennessee Gather reported that the top of his carriage was blown off by the wind on Marengo avenue. All attempts to fasten the canopy on in such a manner as to make it withstand the strain put upon it proved unavailing and "Tenny" had to drive an open carriage the rest of the day.

Small buildings were blown over in one or two cases, and several fences were thrown down by the force of the wind. Awnings in front of the store buildings were whipped around in a perilous manner and for several hours everything that was not fastened down was in immediate danger of being blown away.

Late this evening the wind died down somewhat, but the weather turned cold, necessitating the lighting of fires in stoves and furnaces. Overcoats have made their appearance and summer clothing has been relegated to the rag-bag.

CASINO AND CONCERT HALL.

Plans are already being made for the erection of the casino and convention hall on the West Colorado-street site, and, if present plans are carried out, the actual construction work will begin within the next three months. Chairman McCament of the Subscription Committee stated today that his committee would be ready to turn over the property of the association within a very short time, and that he expected that the work of building would begin shortly after.

It is the desire of the men who have the work in charge to have the building substantially completed before another year has passed and arrangements will be made with that end in view. It will be necessary to raise a considerable sum of money before the work of building can be undertaken, but now that the site has been secured and people can see that the hall is an assured fact, it is not anticipated that there will be great difficulty in getting the money.

There is still an immense amount of work facing the men who have undertaken to push the project along and much will have to be accomplished before the park will be in the condition for which its projectors hope. The promoters of the scheme feel that the welfare of the city demands that the casino and pleasure park be completed as soon as possible, however, and will make every effort to expedite the work.

When all the funds for the erection of the building and the beautifying of the grounds are on hand the work will not be at an end by any means, and there is a Herculanean task facing the members of the association. It will be years before the grounds will be in full bloom, and it will of necessity be a long time before the trees and shrubs will have reached a sufficient size to make a good showing. Everything will be rushed along as rapidly as possible, however, and it is expected that by next winter there will be a marked change in the appearance of the grounds.

The first regular literary meeting for the Shakespeare Club year was held this afternoon at the club-house, the subject being "Noted Rivers and Their Legends," in charge of Mrs. Anna Dane Kirkwood. Mrs. Beatrice Jodon Dane spoke of the Mississippi River in an interesting way, giving several of the legends related by the Indians. "California Rivers" was the subject of a thoughtful paper by Miss Mattie Laura Jodon, who told of the State's rivers famous in song and story, as well as of those whose benefit as a water supply for irrigating and industrial purposes have had attention called to them.

Miss Julia Meeker read an interesting paper written by her sister, Miss Anna L. Meeker, who is with the Pasadena party in the Orient, upon "Up the Rhine." The final paper was given by Mrs. Korkwood herself, whose subject was "Rivers and Rivers." The writer touched upon the streams noted in literature, history and art, frequently quoting from well-known authors who wrote of their beauty or story. The music of the program was given by Miss Alice Dane, who sang "The Brook" and "In the Valley of the Sunny San Joaquin;" Miss Judah, who rendered two charming violin solos, accompanied by Miss Howard, and Mr. George F. Aspinall, who gave "In the Bend of the River," "Watch on the Rhine," and "Bells of Shandon."

THEY WILL MARRY.

The troubles of Manuel Lopez seem to be over, and, unless Madre Ramirez changes her mind before Monday morning, a quiet wedding will put an end to the prosecution which the Mexican is now facing. Lopez, together with Constable Newell, paid Señora Ramirez a visit today, and, after considerable discussion, succeeded in inducing her to allow Lopez and Ceddelia Ramirez to get married.

Lopez was arrested night before last on a charge of rape. He was living with the Ramirez girl in a tent near the gas works, and, as the girl was under 16 years of age, the statutory offense was charged. It appears that Lopez is really anxious to marry the girl, and as Ceddelia is equally anxious to settle down in life, an arrangement was finally patched up. The wedding will take place on Monday morning, after which Lopez will be released from custody.

BUSINESS MEN GO HUNTING.

A party of bankers and business men left this afternoon in automobiles for Elsinore Lake on a hunting trip. Three big touring cars were needed to convey the party to the scene of the hunt, and it was a jolly crowd that started off. Silk hats and frock coats were laid aside and in place shooting jackets and khaki hats were worn. A large supply of ammunition was taken along, and, as some of Pasadena's most expert shots composed the party, it is expected that the slaughter of ducks will be heavy.

The party was composed of Andrew S. Allen, H. D. Pyle, Arthur Dodsworth, H. C. Holt, Percy Brown, J. E. Morhardt, R. H. Miller, H. M. Whittemore, Henry Newby, Leo McLaughlin, E. J. Phyle, and J. M. David.

PLUMBING SHOP BURNED.

Fire broke out late this afternoon in Morrison Brothers' plumbing shop on North Raymond avenue and for a few minutes the fire department had a lively time of it. The blaze was caused by a match which some one threw into an open keg of ochre and in a moment the interior of the building was in flames. The strong wind which was blowing made fighting it a difficult matter as there was a continual draft through the store. The fire was finally gotten under control before any serious damage had been done. The loss was chiefly confined to the woodwork of the shop and is fully covered by insurance.

Later in the evening an electric supply wire on East Colorado street became short-circuited and set the pole on fire. A still alarm was at once turned in and the hook-and-ladder company responded. The blaze was extinguished before any damage had been done except to the paint on the pole.

SUNDAY ADDRESS.

Mrs. Carrie E. Grout will deliver an address before the men of the Young Men's Christian Association at Y.M.C.A. Hall tomorrow afternoon. The subject of the address will be "A Leap for Life." Music will be furnished by the Y.M.C.A. Glee Club. This will be the first time that the Glee Club has taken part officially in the Sunday-afternoon meetings.

Mrs. Grout has been traveling about the country delivering addresses before the Y.M.C.A. and Chautauqua assemblies and is said to be an exceptionally strong speaker. An invitation has been issued to all men to attend the meeting, whether members of the association or not.

PLAN TO ADORN SEASHORE BLUFF.

LONG BEACH CITIZENS OFFER AGREEMENT TO TRUSTEES.

Would Build a Bulkhead Along the Side of the Cliff and Request Permission to Use It for Building Purposes—Seems Apparent That the Proposition Will Not Be Favored.

LONG BEACH, Oct. 20.—Citizens along the beach have submitted to the City Trustees a plan for parking the bluff from Chestnut to American avenue. The property owners agree to build a bulkhead or retaining wall along the south line of the bluff, asking permission to use it for building purposes, provided nothing projects over the park line. They will lay a cement walk fifteen feet wide along the park and will pay all expenses. In return they ask that the City Engineer plan the work and the city meet the expense of the plans and also the cost of parking the bluff. As the city will shortly be required to pay for half the paving along Ocean avenue by reason of its bluff ownership, it is not likely that the Trustees will consider the petition favorably, inasmuch as it would probably involve a bond issue and the general feeling in the city is that if a bond issue is called it should be for the purpose of acquiring a municipal lighting plant and that the improvement of the bluff is of far more value to the adjoining property owners on the beach than it is to the city at large, which is just now emerging from a debt that has kept down improvements for several years and was due to an attempt to care for the needs of a growing city under the provisions of a village charter.

Oscar Olson, aged 28, a sailor on the Francis Leggett, lying at the Crescent wharf at West Long Beach was probably fatally injured this morning by a sling load of lumber slipping and falling on him, breaking five ribs, three of which were torn loose from the spine, breaking and crushing his shoulder and inflicting internal injuries. Dr. Wilden, the marine surgeon at San Pedro, it is said, refused to come across the bay to attend the injured man unless he was guaranteed pay for his services and it was over an hour, before First Officer Nelson of the Leggett could be located and give the desired guarantee and Olson lay unattended save for what care could be given him by Deputy Marshall Roy Taylor. Olson lay at West Long Beach all morning, being taken to the Marine Hospital at Los Angeles on the noon Salt Lake train. Superintendent Mock of the Crescent Company will report Dr. Weldon's action to the United States Marine Hospital authorities and ascertain whether government officers can demand pay for duties within their regulations.

DRIVER FACES TRIAL.

Pearl Wiley, a driver for the City Dye Works, was admitted to $500 bail this morning on a charge of petty larceny. Wiley is charged with the theft of a diamond and pearl stickpin, stolen from T. F. Sullivan's rooms at the Bachelor's Club. The diamond was located at Sutcliffe's jewelry store as was also a nugget pin, identified as belonging to Harry Faust, another member of the club. Both were left at the jeweler's to have the diamond set in the nugget. Wiley had access to the club to take the members' clothing for repairs. He claims that the diamond is his own and that his sister gave him the nugget.

ITALIAN BAND TO LEAVE.

There is little doubt that Long Beach will lose the Italian band. Ever since its advent there has been naught but dissension among its own members, while the citizens are divided into factions, some wanting Vessella fired, others Gattone, others want Donatelli back, while a strong minority desire an American band. A committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to finance the band this morning threw up its hands and refused to go ahead with its irksome duties. In view of the fact that Manager Gattone flew the track and announced that he intended to hold on to his contract, the committee decided it would be useless to attempt to raise subscriptions, and as the concerts and dances do not pay half the salaries, it seems likely that the band must look elsewhere for a livelihood. There is no apparent common ground upon which the various factions can unite.

AGREES TO GIVE LIGHTING.

The Edison Electric Co. has agreed to place the conduits for the Pine and American avenue boulevard lighting, free of all cost to the city. Along Pine avenue this means a saving of $6000, and on American $5000. Plans for the work will be adopted by the City Trustees Tuesday night.

SEWER SYSTEM PLANNED.

The City Trustees last night instructed the City Engineer to prepare plans for a sewer system on the beach from Alamitos avenue to Golden, for the benefit of Hotel Bixby, the bathhouse, and property owners on the Strand. The sewage will be automatically pumped to the main outfall sewer on the bluff.

The rope of a cage which was descending the East Simmer gold mine at Johannesburg, South Africa, yesterday snapped and the cage fell a thousand feet. Twenty-three Chinese laborers were dashed to death.

PERILOUS TRIP OF LAUNCH INA.

ANOTHER BOAT THOUGHT SUNK AND ONE MAN LOST.

Capt. Squires of the Ina Says His Craft Was Twenty-four Hours Making the Ninety Miles from Santa Cruz Island to Venice—The Roughest Sea in Years.

VENICE, Oct. 20.—The launch Ina arrived at the Venice pier late this evening, after a most perilous trip from Santa Cruz Island. The launch, of which Capt. Squires is in command, was twenty-four hours in making the run of ninety miles. The captain reports that never before did he have so thrilling an experience, though he has been a sailor in these parts for many years. The storm in the Santa Cruz channel, and, indeed, on the entire trip, kept him "guessing what the end would be," as he put it. More than once he despaired of reaching land.

Capt. Squires reports the loss of a young man, whose name is unknown to him, but who answered to the name of "Scotty," and whose place of residence is Redondo. The captain told The Times reporter tonight that "Scotty" left Santa Cruz Island on Monday morning, in a skiff and has not been heard from since. "Scotty" had no provisions and was not in any way prepared for a long voyage. Capt. Squires had been on a search with his launch, but could get no trace of the missing man. He is satisfied that "Scotty" has been lost, and the boat wrecked.

"Scotty" is described as a young man of about 5 feet 4 inches in height, weighing about 135 pounds, and of light complexion. He was of English or Scotch extraction.

PROMISE SAFETY TO WORKMEN.

CITIZENS' ALLIANCE ACTIVE IN SAN PEDRO.

Men of the Harbor Town Awaken to Fact That $10,000 Per Week Is Going Out of City by Reason of Mexicans Being Employed in Places of Strikers.

SAN PEDRO, Oct. 20.—Leading merchants and business men of San Pedro have at last awakened to the fact that $10,000 per week is going out of the town as a result of Mexicans from Los Angeles being employed in place of the striking longshoremen, and that it is in their power to substitute white men with families who will live here and spend their earnings here. The Mexicans now employed on the wharves come down from Los Angeles in the morning and return at night, and the merchants here little benefit from them.

It would have been ago to supply all the lumber with desirable white men, would not come here for fear of assaulted by the strikers. Citizens' Alliance has taken this ter up with the City Trustees, latter have promised to co-op every way to secure entire for the newcomers, and have that if any policemen fail in duty in this regard they are to charged and replaced by biased by union sympathies.

Having accomplished this, the zens' Alliance has just installed employment bureau in the building. Don C. Fugitt, secretary of the Citizens' will be in charge. It will be the ness of this bureau to place men in good positions with the companies as longshoremen and men, and to render them every ance in finding suitable homes in the city.

Furthermore, the Citizens' guarantees protection to all workmen who wish to come earn an honest living, and treatment will be meted out union thugs who attempt to newcomers to the city. The tees have promised their active in making this a town in men are safe to work.

PERFECTING WATER SYSTEM.

OCEANSIDE, Oct. 20.—Work on the wells being put in up in the San Luis Rey River by the Huntington interests is now being pushed, and it is said that a good flow of water has been obtained. The country to the south, including South Oceanside and Carlsbad, will have a good water system, if present plans are carried out.

DAMAGE AT VENICE.

Several Tent Houses Injured by the Gale and Boats Battered About.

OCEAN PARK, Oct. 20.—The gale which began early last evening, lasting all day today, "did things" to structures of gauze in the tent city at Venice. A number of the tent houses were riddled and the canvas roof of between thirty and fifty of the houses were made into ribbons. The damage by the windstorm was confined to the smaller tent houses, the villa cottages not being affected, excepting that some of the porches and awnings were carried off. The Kinney company will replace the damage.

This morning the "Ocean Park" and the "Elena," two fishing smacks, broke from their moorings at the Venice pier and were driven ashore on the beach south of the pier, where they were badly battered by the angry waves. Both boats were much damaged, the "Ocean Park" being almost totally destroyed. The little craft were lashed about like shingles. Messrs. King and Reuter finally secured the boats.

COL. DWYER IMPROVING.

Col. J. R. Dwyer of this city, who was stricken with paralysis last Monday morning, is improving slowly but at a satisfactory rate. His physician is in almost constant attendance. Col. Dwyer is one of the best-known and respected citizens of Ocean Park.

THE SNOW PLOW OUT.

One of the curious things for the tourists here to see this morning was the snow plow at work on the tracks of the Los Angeles-Pacific. It was necessary for the plow to make several trips to Playa del Rey to open the road through from Venice, on account of the great sand drifts which completely covered the tracks.

STOP LOSS BY FIRE.

Engineer and Veterans at Soldiers' Home Save Buildings of Farmer from Destruction.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Oct. 20.—The prompt action of Acting Engineer Dascomb and a gang of veterans employed in the neighborhood of Brown's Lake, at the northeast extremity of the home grounds, on Thursday prevented the destruction by fire of the group of farm houses, etc., occupied by the family of a farmer employed by ex-Senator Jones on the walnut grove near Sepulveda Cañon. A small child of the family had innocently set fire to some hay in a barn. The workingmen noticed the smoke and in a little while extinguished the flames with but little damage.

The basket picnic of the ex-prisoners of war in Curtin's Grove, on the home grounds today, was an enjoyable affair. The reunion was marked by an exchange of reminiscences of experiences in Libby, Belle Isle, Saulsbury and other places in the course of the Civil War.

Col. H. H. Markham of Pasadena, local manager of this branch, spent a couple of days this week looking over improvements under way and needed.

William S. Smith, late Co. B, Ninetieth Pennsylvania Infantry, is appointed hospital steward, vice Lee C. Smith, resigned.

Hayes & Ockert of Sawtelle have been awarded the contract for oiling the extension of San Vicinte boulevard within the home grounds.

SANTA MONICA SEWAGE.

Injunction Served on City to Restrain Construction of Storm Drain Over Kinney Land.

SANTA MONICA, Oct. 20.—As was anticipated, the writ of injunction was issued and served this afternoon restraining the city of Santa Monica from putting in the storm drain sewer in Ashland avenue across the private property of Abbot Kinney on Ocean Front. The writ was served on J. E. Hemingway, City Clerk for Santa Monica, and cites the defendants, F. Niemann, J. D. Kneen and the city of Santa Monica to appear in Department 4 of the Superior Court on Friday, October 26, at 2 p.m., to show cause why they should not be restrained from constructing the proposed storm drain sewer. The injunction is issued by the Abbot Kinney Co., a corporation. John D. Pope is the attorney for the plaintiffs, and Tanner, Taft & Odell will be the counsel for the defendants.

The outcome of this suit will be watched with much interest, in that the result is expected to establish the fact as to whether the streets in this particular tract were dedicated to the ocean front walk or to the water line. This is where the contention rests and is the one which the court will be called upon to decide.

Dr. N. K. Foster of Sacramento, secretary of the State Board of Health, is in the city today. He is here to investigate the sewer conditions, over which there has been and still is so much controversy, affecting both Santa Monica and Ocean Park. In his official capacity it is possible he may be able to give valuable advice that will assist in an amicable and just settlement of the aggravated question. He spent some time today in looking over the conditions about Pier avenue, where the city now has a small tank, and where the old outfall sewer pipe is located. He says that a great many complaints have recahed his office as to the sewage conditions on the Santa Monica Bay.

WIND DID LITTLE DAMAGE.

No considerable damage was done in Santa Monica last night and today by the high winds. With the exception of the blowing down of a few signs and awnings, no damage was done, saving the breaking of two windows in the sun parlor of the Decatur and the breaking of the electric sign in front of the roller coaster.

Miller was installed last night as leading knight, after which a banquet was served at the clubhouse in honor of Mr. Miller's installation and also to celebrate the forty-ninth birthday of J. C. Hemingway, past exalted ruler.

BOSTON STORE ANNEX.

Big Dry Goods House Making Important Extension on Hill Street Frontage.

The illustration embellishing this page of the real estate department today represents the annex about to be erected for the Boston Dry Goods store. Those who pass along the east side of Hill street between Second and Third have noticed the immense excavation being made nearly midway in the block. Here the footings are being put in to bear the load of the big building.

This structure is to be four stories and basement, and the walls and columns are being made of sufficient strength to carry two additional stories. The front of this building will be in white enameled brick treatment with ornamental iron and copper. All the window frames and sash will be of copper glaze with polished prism glass. The show windows will be of the same glass and divided by copper bars. Across the front entrance is a copper and glass marquise supported by chains. This is to furnish an abundance of light. The building having no windows in the sides must be entirely lighted from the front and the rear. The rear window frames and sash are of metal glazed wih polished wire plate and sheet wire prisms, making all the windows fireproof.

The skeleton of the building is a steel frame with reinforced floors, and on the top of this is a wooden floor on sleepers imbedded in concrete. All the columns are reinforced and all elevators and stairways are inclosed with tile partitions. In this way all the floors are absolutely isolated one from the other by the terra cotta and cement floors, which are fifteen inches thick.

The roof is of cinders and concrete topped off with a felt and gravel roof. All the stairs are iron inclosed with tile partitions and metal doors. The main stairs are eighteen feet wide and of iron stringers and risers with marble treads and bronze railing and hand rails. The passenger elevators are inclosed in tile partitions, and the doors are of metal frames with polished wire plate glass.

The new store is to be connected with the main one which fronts on Broadway by bridges with rolling fire curtains at each end.

The basement will contain, besides the engine and coal bunkers, the packing and shipping departments, and also lockers and toilet rooms for the employés. These lockers are of steel and each employé has one for his own use. The first floor is to be used for retail business and the main offices and vaults. The second floor is also a retail department, and this story is a mezzanine floor, which will be used for alterations and telephone department. The third floor is also a retail department with different conveniences as adjuncts, and the fourth floor will contain the general bookkeeping departments as well as the wholesale department of the establishment.

The architect for this building is Theodore A. Eisen.

Deafness Affects Other Senses.

An ear specialist insists that deafness affects all the senses. He says the reason for this is that the ear is only one servant in the sensory service of the human system. Loss of hearing is really a partial paralysis of the brain, but owing to the sympathetic connection of the various sensory nerve centers of the brain, the others indirectly concerned have to combat for their very life the demoralizing influence of the affected center.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Business in produce circles has been almost featureless during the past week, and yesterday, there being no call on changes, trading was especially dull for Saturday.

Larger dealers in eggs assert that while the present quotation of 38 cents flat for fancy ranch eggs is in force, the demand warrants further increase to 39 or 40 cents. They are not anxious to have the price lifted, but they believe that 40 cents a dozen will prevail in a week or two, inasmuch as the ranchmen are clamoring for higher prices for the product. Ranch offerings in San Francisco have advanced to 44 cents. One carload of eastern eggs came in yesterday.

The butter market offered nothing new to report. Receipts of all kinds of produce were light yesterday.

The market for the several varieties of fruits was very quiet yesterday, and only minor changes were noted in late prices. Muscat grapes were jobbing at 65@ 90. Peaches were quickly cleaned up at 1.00@1.25. Cantaloupes and watermelons were unchanged. Strawberries were in limited demand at 12. Blackberries sold at 8@10. Raspberries brought 15.

Potatoes and onions showed no noteworthy changed.

The vegetable market had a weak closing, and large lines of most descriptions had to be held over. Prices showed but slight variation from the previous report.

The poultry market was well supplied. Prices were steady.

Fish, wild game and lobsters were scarce.

L. J. Matthews and J. C. Richardson will represent the Produce Exchange at the funeral of H. W. Hellman today.

The receipts of produce as reported for yesterday's exchange were as follows: Eggs, 166 cases; butter, 11,890 lbs.; cheese, local, 110 lbs.; potatoes, 15 sacks; onions, none; beans, 72 sacks; sweet potatoes, 148 sacks.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

SHARES AND MONEY.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The stock market was thrown into demoralization today by the further consideration of the new conditions in the money market offered by the advance in the Bank of England's rate to 6 per cent. and by the heavy inroad on the surplus reserves of the New York banks, as revealed by the bank statement. The conditions as the market closed were panicky and stocks were being thrown over indiscriminately and at swift concessions in prices. Some of the principal declines will sufficiently picture the conditions. Great Northern preferred broke 8, Anaconda 10½, Reading 6½, St. Paul and Canadian Pacific 4⅝, Union Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and American Smelting 4, Northern Pacific and Colorado Fuel 6½, Baltimore and Ohio 3¼ and Louisville and Nashville and Amalgamated Copper 3, and, in the list generally, wide declines throughout, ranging up to 2½ points. The flood of liquidation broke through all efforts to support the market and threw it into the demoralized condition in which it closed. London was a heavy seller in this market and grave apprehension was reported in London for the consequences in the coming stock market settlement there. The attitude of the Bank of England makes it clear that no further gold will be relinquished to foreign markets and the necessity is recognized of attracting funds to London sufficient to repair the reserves of the bank. Severe measures for the cutting down of American credits in that market are looked for. The position in the stock market is generally understood to be maintained to an important extent by credits thus held. The currency movement to the interior, especially to the cotton region, has been resumed in full force, and the New York Exchange has fallen back to 40 cents discount at Chicago. The bank statement did not reflect all of the expected decline on account of the Canadian withdrawals. But the $16,700,500 loan expansion is clear notice of the pressure for credits which the London developments have thrown back upon this market. Reports were current today of some long-time loans being negotiated here and rates in that department are 6 per cent. strongly bid for all dates, with an expectation of higher rates next week. Relief by stock market liquidation was thus plainly indicated. Its violence and precipitancy, however, was unexpected and left sentiment disturbed and anxious. Total sales of bonds, par value, $1,444,000. The stock market was in a lethargic condition all through the week until it was thrown into disorder by the unexpected advance on Friday in the Bank of England discount rate. The instantaneous effect was worldwide. It is obvious that the extraordinary requirements of the United States and the resulting discussion of this country's account in London market lie at the bottom of the condition into which the English money market has fallen. The apathy of the New York stock market during the week has been attributed more in the common estimation to the approach of the elections. The public has been cut out of the market, and it is obvious also that the market operations by the powerful combinations have been discontinued. The smaller class of traders have had the market to themselves. The restricted operations of this class served, however, to test the conditions in the market. They demonstrated that the market was under intentional restraint, apparently intended to hold it in a condition of quiescence. Traders' attempts to advance prices met with obstacles in the shape of large offerings of stocks. On the other hand, such offerings were withdrawn when prices receded and when the traders tried to extend the decline by short sales they found their offerings absorbed with determination. The action of Amalgamated Copper was a conspicuous example of this tendency. Confidence was general in the advance in the loan rate to 7 per cent., but speculative attempts to raise the price met with failure. The same course was pursued on the aggressive advance in the stock when the directors advanced the dividend. It was the general supposition that the purpose of this course to keep the market quiet until after the election, owing to the object lessons which were being made of the movement of the stock market conduct of the political question. The same reason various political projects which have been the subject of rumors have been dropped out of the discussion. With the progress of the week, the belief grew that developments in the money market were having as much to do with the restraint on the stock market as the political situation. The week's downward course of international rates was first checked and then reversed. With the rise in money rates again here, there was a downward plunge in foreign exchange rates which wiped out its recovery and brought the rate back on Thursday morning to a level that promised to renew the engagements of gold. That a renewal of the gold movement was counted upon to relieve the local money market, was suggested by the sharp response of the stock market and the money market to the action taken by the Bank of England to defeat this inroad upon London money resources. It had been assumed that the replenishment already offered to New York bank reserves by the import of gold and by the deposit of government funds was ample to carry the market through the needs of the autumn and protect the stock market from disturbance. It is evident that that assumption was shaken by the week's events in the money market and renewed report of foreign gold supplies was hoped for. The action of the Bank of England has disappointed that hope, and the ulterior consequences are not yet clear. Bonds have become duller again, and weakened with the late break in stocks. United States 2's have advanced ¼, and the new 4's half per cent. on call during the week.

GENERAL EASTERN MARKETS.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The wheat market was weak all day. Trading was very quiet, and prices held within a narrow range. The news of the day was almost exclusively in favor of the bears, and with no special demand the market showed no rallying power. Prices were affected by a decline of ½d at Liverpool, favorable weather in the United States increased shipments from India and Australia, and predictions of a liberal increase in world's shipments. Local longs were the chief sellers, and demand came mainly from shorts. The market closed weak, with prices near the lowest point of the day. December opened ¼ to ⅜ lower, at 73¼@73⅜, sold off to 73, and closed off ⅛, at 73@73⅛. Trading in corn was dull, and prices were lower, in sympathy with the weakness of which. The market closed weak, with prices near the lowest point of the day. December opened a shade to ¼ lower, at 42¼ to 42⅜@42¾, and sold off to 42 cents, where it closed, net ⅜ lower. The oats market was influenced almost entirely by the action of wheat and corn. December opened ⅛ to ¼ lower, at 33¼, sold between 33 and 33¾, and closed off ⅛ to ¼, at 33¼. Provisions were quiet and easy. These was scattered liquidation by the buyers of yesterday, the offerings being taken by pit traders, who were evening up trades. A weak market for live hogs was largely influential in holding down prices. At the close, January pork was off 2½c; lard was a shade lower, at 8.20@8.22½. Ribs were 2½c lower, at 7.45.

PILES 14 YEARS

Terrible Case Cured Painlessly With Only One Treatment of Pyramid Pile Cure.

Free Package in Plain Wrapper Mailed to Everyone who Writes.

"I write to thank, and also praise you for the good your medicine has done me. Oh, I can't find words to express my thanks to you all for such a wonderful and speedy cure. I felt relieved after using your sample so I sent right on to a druggist and bought a 50c box, which I believe has cured me entirely. I feel more myself now than I have felt in over a year, for I have been bothered about that long with the piles. I have told all my friends about this wonderful discovery and will recommend it whenever I can. You can use my name anywhere you choose. Respectfully, Mrs. Chas. L. Coleman, Tullahoma, Tenn."

Anyone suffering from the terrible torture, burning and itching of piles, will get instant relief from the treatment we send out free, at our own expense, in plain sealed package, to everyone sending name and address.

Surgical operation for piles is unnecessary and rarely a permanent success. Here you can get a treatment that is quick, easy to apply and inexpensive, and free from the publicity and humiliation you suffer from doctors' examination.

Pyramid Pile Cure is made in the form of "easy to use" suppositories. The coming of a cure is felt the moment you begin to use it, and your suffering ends.

Send your name and address at once to Pyramid Drug Co., 58 Pyramid Building, Marshall, Mich., and get by return mail the treatment we will send you free, in plain, sealed wrapper.

After seeing for yourself what it can do, you can get a regular full-size package of Pyramid Pile Cure from any druggist at 50 cents each, or, on receipt of price, we will mail you same ourselves if he should not have it

Oil Stocks Are Bound to Advance.

Never in the history of the industry was business better or prospects brighter. The demand is more than keeping pace with production.

now around $300.00 per share is positively cheap at $400 and a good investment at $500.00 per share.

now around $1.60 per share should be bought without delay. It is ridiculously cheap. The capitalization is small, only 300,000 shares.

Its prospects are so bright that $3.00 per share would be nearer its value. Look for it advancing to per share.

New Pedrara

Buy the 8 per cent. preferred now offering at share. Fully paid. It yields a return of 10 per cent. Rarely is an opportunity presented to obtain a handsome return when the element of risk is eliminated. The stock of is secured by the largest deposit of onyx in the supplemented by a constantly increasing business that is already earning largely in excess of the present requirements. We invite the investigation into this. us to explain if in doubt.

This property is THE famous property of the Greenwater district and of the undeveloped properties has done more to make the district famous than all the other properties combined.

The sensational showings on this and the adjoining Hank Knight group have aroused the entire copper world and never before have so many of the large copper interests become identified in one district in so short a space of time. The rush to Greenwater is phenomenal and the whole State of Nevada is wild with excitement over the wonderful discoveries hourly being made.

The properties of the Boston-Greenwater Copper Company comprise 13 claims and are surrounded or adjoin practically all of the big mines of the district.

An enormous ledge traverses the entire property, the width of which has not yet been determined, but which gives assay values from 5 to 50 per cent., with cross ledge four to six feet wide showing average values 18 to 21 per cent. across their face, making the whole property a veritable mass of high grade copper.

On the west and northwest is the Furnace Creek Copper Company, which was promoted one year ago at 25 cents per share and is now $4.75 bid. There are two shafts on this property, one hundred feet apart, each on the vein, down 300 and 175 feet, respectively; and both showing extraordinary ore values. On the east is the Hank Knight and Greenwater and Death Valley Copper—the latter company promoted 60 days ago at $1 and now selling at $2.75. Both properties have the same wonderful values of from 5 to 50 per cent. copper and an average sample of 75 feet across the face of the vein goes 6 per cent. copper.

On the east is the Greenwater United Copper Company, which is controlled by Macdonald and Gillies, which also shows fine values.

On the south is Nash & Wallace's Governor Group, showing values of 8 to 40 per cent. on a ledge ten feet wide at the surface, and the Oddie Blue Bell group, which also has a fine showing. In fact, all the leading copper interests in the country including Heinze, Clark, Schwab and Kunze are centered about this ground.

Had not the contracts been signed for the promotion and sale of the treasury stock of this company at the present price, before the recent discoveries were made, the stock would now be offered at $1 per share. And we predict that it will sell at that figure within 30 days and be $5 per share within 12 months.

We believe the rise this stock will have will prove one of the sensations of the year and unhesitatingly recommend its immediate purchase at any price under par.

The properties of the Original Gold Bar Extension comprise the choicest of the undeveloped properties adjoining the well known Gold Bar group, Bullfrog district, Nevada. The property consists of four full sized mining claims and two fractions covering an area of about ninety acres; bounded on the north and east by the Gold King group, on the west by the Gold Bar Annex group and on the south by the Gold Bar group.

Eight distinct veins have been discovered so far on this property. Four running to the north and south and an equal number east and west. The entire mountain is heavily mineralized and further development will undoubtedly prove the existence of veins other than those already mentioned. The veins thus far opened vary in width from four and a half to eight feet and the surface values as taken across the ledge show values from $3 to $12, giving good milling values for the whole.

As these veins without exception extend into the adjoining properties where they have been opened to considerable depth and there show big values, it is practically certain that the same values will be encountered in this ground as depth is gained, and the delay in opening this property has been due solely to the fact that the development of the adjoining properties would determine the value of this property as the veins are identically the same.

On the Gold Hill group to the east, on vein No. 1, has been sunk a shaft to the depth of 160 feet, which shows shipping values of $200 per ton; while on the Homestake group, 600 feet to the east, the vein has been opened up to the 300-foot level and is nearly 160 feet wide, which will ALL average better than $30 per ton.

Three of the veins running north and south pitch into the Gold Bar ground. The main Gold Bar vein is one of the largest in the district, being 178 feet wide with an average value of $12 per ton for the whole vein, small parts of which show shipping values of $1600 to the ton.

It will thus be seen that this is a prospect of exceptional merit. A large part of the treasury stock has already been sold and the stock will be listed on the San Francisco exchange the coming week, when we predict much higher prices for it.

Reservations should be made by telegraph, to insure consideration, and remittance in full, by bank draft or certified check, must be forwarded immediately after allotment as made.

BREVITIES.

"The Light of India." To miss this most unique magazine, edited by Baba Bharata, is to miss the richest treat in literature. "The World's Outlook" affords a luminous X-ray glimpse into the world's spiritual conscience. "Jim," the most original and fascinating romance of India, by Baba, is a reply to Kipling's "Kim." Atkinson, and "The Epoch-Making Poem," "The Journey of the Thought," by Rose Anthona, are rarest readings. 10 cents a copy, at all book stalls; $1 a year or 25 cents for 3 mo. sent to Manager, "Light of India," 730 W. 16th st.

ELEVATOR MAN KILLED BY FALL.

DROPS TWO STORIES AND HIS NECK IS BROKEN.

J. Andrees Perishes Instantly in Broadway Building Early Today as Result of His Mistaking Power Button for Lighting Device—Had Relatives in New York.

J. Andrees, an elevator operator, fell down an elevator shaft in the building at No. 517 South Broadway about 12:30 o'clock this morning, and was instantly killed. From witnesses it was learned that Andrees attempted to turn off the lights in the elevator, but instead turned on the power. He was standing with one foot on the first floor landing and the other in the elevator. The elevator shot upward and Andrees was carried up the shaft.

Caught between the side of the shaft and the elevator floor, Andrees was pulled and crushed until the iron sidings gave way and he fell. Police surgeons were on the scene within five minutes after the accident, and with Patrolman D. L. Adams, they crawled down the shaft and found that Andrees had been killed instantly, as his neck was broken.

Fred O. Osborn, the clerk of the building, was waiting to lock the doors of the building. A scream reached his ears. Dashing through the dimly-lighted hallway, Osborn could see the outlines of Andrees's form through the iron grating guarding the shaft, being carried up to the second story.

"My God, save me!" cried Andrees, and with that he fell down the shaft two stories to the basement. Osborn dashed to a telephone and called the police ambulance.

But little is known of Andrees. He had been employed as the elevator operator for some weeks, and is said to have had no family in the city, but had relatives in New York. He was about fifty-five years old, and roomed near First street and Broadway. The body was sent to Pierce Brothers' morgue.

HONOR MEMORY OF TEACHER.

Friends of Miss Eliza Bengough Succeed in Move to Have the Interment in This City.

Miss Eliza Bengough, the first teacher ever appointed to the public schools of this city, will not be buried among strangers in another city. Many friends of the loved educator, who passed away in Pomona Friday, have asked that her remains shall rest here. In a corner of beautiful Evergreen the body will be tenderly laid away.

Many who read in The Times yesterday of the death of Miss Bengough successfully sought to have the funeral held in this city. Coroner Trout, who was a friend of the aged woman, received calls for scores who are anxious to attend the obsequies. As a result a lot was purchased yesterday in Evergreen Cemetery and tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, the funeral services will be held in Bresee Brothers' chapel at Ninth and Lincoln streets.

There will be many floral tributes and the funeral arrangements provide for special honors to the memory of the faithful educator, who spent her life in serving the young of this city.

ATTACKS TROLLEY CONDUCTOR.

Plasterer Deals Car Employee a Heavy Blow and Is Arrested After an Exciting Chase.

N. Muth, a plasterer, gave a plain-clothes policeman a hard chase yesterday after assaulting a conductor aboard a Griffith-avenue electric car. Muth had boarded the car on Main street with a transfer fifteen minutes too old, the conductor claimed. Muth struck the conductor a heavy blow and fled from the car as the officer boarded it, and, escaping, hid in a vacant lot. Unsuccessful search of this place was followed by an endeavor to get names of witnesses. While the officer was doing this the fugitive, who had come from cover, believing the coast clear, dashed past him. A second chase resulted in the man's arrest. He was locked up on a charge of battery.

LINDLEY RECEPTION-BANQUET.

Last evening the Law College Lindley Club gave a reception and banquet in honor of Dr. Lindley. This organization took form during the past week, and comprises the Republican members of the present student body and alumni of the College of Law of the University of Southern California. The organization has as members many of the most active young political workers of the city. At the banquet Gavin W. Craig presided as toastmaster, and the toasts were responded to as follows: "The Duty of Professional Men in Politics," Frank C. Vaughn; "The Next City Election," Elmer R. McDowell; "Political Breezes," Dr. Francis M. Parker; "Practical Good Citizenship," Kemper B. Campbell; address, Dr. Walter Lindley; response, P. V. Hammon. A vocal solo was rendered by William E. Stayton. The meeting was unanimous in its indorsement of Dr. Lindley's candidacy.

POLICE DOUBT HIS STORY.

D. M. Gebhardt applied at the Central Police Station last night for protection against a gang of hold-up men, who, he claimed, attacked him Friday night and inflicted an ugly wound on his head. The police are inclined to doubt his statements and say they learned that Gebhardt's partner was intoxicated and that Gebhardt might have received his injury while drunk.

WED ON SPUR OF MOMENT.

Bridegroom Gets Offer of Good Position in Another City and Marriage Follows at Once.

Miss Lutie M. Otto and Le Roy H. Boughton were married last night at the Immanuel Presbyterian Church with only enough guests to make the wedding legal. No invitations were issued; in fact, none of the friends of the young people was present. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Hugh K. Walker, Rev. Mr. Adams performed the ceremony.

Since coming to Los Angeles in May the young bride has made many friends, who will be surprised to hear of her sudden marriage. Her home was at the Hotel Frontenac, where she lived with an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Martin.

Though the wedding was unexpected, and no one was made the confidant of the young peoples' plans until the last moment, the marriage took place with the consent of the persons most interested. A few moments before the knot was tied Mr. and Mrs. Martin gave their consent. The young couple will leave today for Fresno, where Mr. Boughton will assume a position of trust. It was the offer of such a place which finally induced the two to marry on the spur of the moment.

One of the most ardent admirers of the Steinway pianos is Josef Hofmann, the popular pianist who has so many times toured this country successfully.

What Hofmann recently said to a representative of the Boston Evening Journal:

"There is but one best piano, and that is the Steinway, and no other piano approaches it. I want to give the greatest possible pleasure and satisfaction to my audience. This method does away with plates, and while more expensive is certainly much more satisfactory. You can bite and masticate with these teeth just as you could with natural teeth. We do so much of this work and save more time by the Schiffman Method that we are enabled to save you about 35 per cent. In delicate work like this, where practice is such an element in success, does it not seem reasonable to suppose that a dentist of natural ability, wide experience and unusual practice, can do better work and cheaper than others of less experience and small practice, even if they have the same natural ability? DEFEND THEMSELVES ATTACKING FRIEND.

Many Sensational Charges Made Against Attorney L. R. Garrett.

Prominent Business Men of Los Angeles File Answers to Suit for Damages for Conspiracy and Purport to Tell Inside Story of Inglewood Water Company Deal and How They Were "Real Easy."

HARRY LEE MARTIN, Willoughby Rodman, Ross T. Hickcox, James Cook, Charles Lloyd, A. C. Freeman and the Inglewood Water Company in answer to the complaint of L. R. Garrett, charging them with conspiracy in forcing him to disgorge 1554 shares of stock of the Inglewood Water Company, besides $10,000 in cash, yesterday entered a detailed denial of every serious allegation in the complaint.

But, not satisfied with denials, the defendants tell for the first time what is purported to be the "inside story" of how Garrett obtained absolute control of property valued at about half a million dollars, without putting up any money.

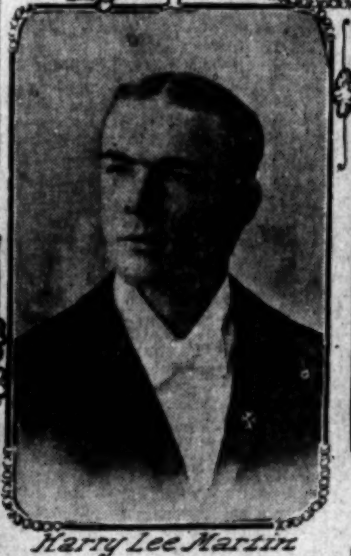
The defendants also make sensational charges against Garrett, and quote alleged alterations in a deed made by him without authority.

Startling charges by defendants against their old friend indicate that war is now on between these prominent business men and their friends on one side and L. R. Garrett and his friends on the other.

Lewis R. Garrett

Willoughby Rodman

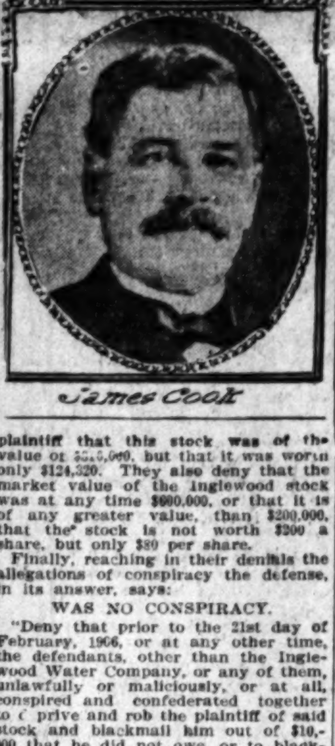
Ross T. Hickcox



Harry Lee Martin

Charles Lloyd

Principals in the sensational lawsuits involving the Inglewood Water Company and its promoters, and which threatens to establish a feud line between prominent business men of Los Angeles. Atty. Garrett charges conspiracy, and in their answers, filed yesterday, the defendants place their assailant and old-time friend upon the rack and give him no mercy.



James Cook

Highly sensational are the charges made against Louis R. Garrett in the answer to his suit for $100,000 damages and the reversion to him of stock and securities claimed to be valued at $500,000. Answers to this suit were filed in the Superior Court last Friday and a further answer will be filed on Tuesday.

In his complaint Mr. Garrett makes his friends of a lifetime the defendants and charges conspiracy to mulct him of a fortune, and fraud to secure his money and securities. These defendants are Harry Lee Martin, his one-time college chum, boyhood friend and business partner; Willoughby Rodman, intimate friend and law partner; Ross T. Hickox, attorney for the other defendants in the initial proceedings and old-time friend; James Cook, father-in-law of his friend, Martin; Charles Lloyd, a man who had the utmost confidence in him; A. C. Freeman, from whom he negotiated the purchase of the Inglewood Water Company stock and 1500 acres of land at Inglewood, and the company itself.

All of these men are exceedingly well known in Los Angeles as foremost in the ranks of the enterprising managers of large affairs, and whose reputations have always been above reproach, as has that of Mr. Garrett deemed one of the most brilliant young money-makers in the city.

ACCUSE HIS ACCUSERS.

In the first place, Garrett, in his complaint, which was told of in The Times when it was filed, September 18, last, claimed that on February 21, last, in the office of Ross T. Hickox in the Merchants' Trust building, Martin and Hickox accused him of forging a deed, defrauding the Inglewood Water Company and making false representations to his colleagues.

That by threatening to have him immediately arrested and prosecuted on this false criminal charge, and by representing that the District-Attorney had been complained to and stood ready to prosecute, he was forced to comply with their demand that he turn over to them all his holdings of stock in the Inglewood Water Company and his note for $10,000, secured by a contract with the Realty Trust Company valued at $47,000.

Mr. Garrett, in his complaint, asserts that he did all this to prevent publicity, which he feared would injure his credit. It was in September Mr. Garrett began the suit to recover possession of this stock and note.

The defendants, with the exception of Ross T. Hickox, who will file his answer on Tuesday, enter into the controversy in great detail and deny absolutely all of the allegations made by Mr. Garrett in his complaint.

They deny that A. C. Freeman and Nora Freeman were owners of all of the capital stock of the Inglewood Water Company before November, 1902, or any other time.

Upon information and belief, they deny that the plaintiff, Garrett, had made arrangements in advance with his father-in-law, I. W. Phelps, the Broadway Bank and Trust Company, and the State Bank and Trust Company, to finance him in making the cash payments for the purchase of the Inglewood Water Company.

DEFENDANTS' DENIALS.

They deny that before the defendants had any interest in this property the plaintiff arranged with the Southern California Savings Bank to borrow in the name of the Inglewood Water Company $75,000 upon a trust deed. They also deny that plaintiff agreed with the defendant, A. C. Freeman, that he should accept as part payment for the latter's interest in the 1500 acres sold to the company, a second mortgage.

In fact, the defendants deny almost all the allegations of the complaint regarding the preliminary negotiations for the purchase of the tract of land at Inglewood for the water company.

The defendants admit that on the 21st day of February last 1554 shares of stock of the Inglewood Water Company stood on the books in the name of the plaintiff, but deny emphatically that he was the owner of these shares. Also they deny the assertion of the plaintiff that this stock is the value of [illegible] but that it was worth only $124,520. They also deny that the market value of the Inglewood stock was at any time $800,000, or that it is of any greater value, than $200,000, that the stock is not worth $200 a share, but only $80 per share.

Finally, reaching in their denials the allegations of conspiracy the defense, in its answer, says:

WAS NO CONSPIRACY.

"Deny that prior to the 21st day of February, 1906, or at any other time, the defendants, other than the Inglewood Water Company, or any of them, unlawfully or maliciously, or at all, conspired and confederated together to deprive and rob the plaintiff of said stock and blackmail him out of $10,000 that he did not owe, or to blackmail plaintiff out of said stock, or any other sum that he did not owe, by false and fradulent representations of accusing him wrongfully and falsely, or at all, of the crime of forgery, or any other crime, or by threatening him with criminal prosecution for said alleged or any crime.

"Deny that the defendants, Harry Lee Martin and Ross T. Hickcox, were by said defendants selected and appointed to see plaintiff alone and make said false and fraudulent or any false or fraudulent representations and threats, and thereby force or coerce him to pay said or any sum of money, and surrender and assign said stock."

Continuing, the defendants deny in detail all the steps taken, according to the complaint, preceding his assignment of stock and realty trust contract. In addition, the defendants "deny that any representation and accusations that the plaintiff had been guilty of forgery, as alleged to have been charged by defendants Martin and Hickcox were wholly or at all false." Also they deny that the charges were malicious or without foundation. Furthermore, the answer denies that any threats were made by Martin and Hickcox for the purpose of coercing the plaintiff to assign any stock or money to the Inglewood Water Company.

HE GAVE UP, BUT—

The defendants admit that on the 21st day of February he signed the documents mentioned and gave his obligation to pay the Inglewood Water Company $10,000; but that he did not do so under coercion and restraint or because of any threats.

In conclusion of this "first defense"—there are five of them—the defendants deny that the plaintiff has been damaged by any wrongful, malicious or unlawful acts of the defendants in the sum of $100,000, or in any other sum.

In the second defense of their answers the defendants come right out and say things about Garrett. It is in this part of the answers that the alleged inside history of the manipulations of the Inglewood Water Company's stock, and how Garrett is asserted to have obtained over $100,000 worth of property without putting up one red cent, is told.

Going back to ancient history, the defendants tell of the organization of the Inglewood Water Company, and

Y. W. C. A. TO BUILD ITSELF FINE HOME.

Five-Story Structure, of Concrete, Decided Upon Yesterday—Will Be Reared on Hill Street Near Third, and Well Equipped.

THE largest Young Women's Christian Association in the world—in Los Angeles—decided yesterday afternoon to erect a building which will be one of the best and most completely equipped in the country, and which will suitably house this great and still growing organization.

The matter was decided at a meeting of the board of directors, and an active campaign will be begun in the immediate future to secure the necessary funds.

One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is the sum which these women have set as the smallest amount that can be figured on for the building and equipment. The committee appointed to have the inaugurating and carrying through of the campaign is composed of Mmes. Patterson, William F. Callender, Leonard Merrill, William J. Chichester, Oliver C. Bryant, and Miss Cora L. Tatham.

The prosperous times making themselves felt in the city at present, and the interest that has lately been directed to the association, decided the heads of it to begin the building of this complete structure, instead of the temporary one of two stories which was planned last spring, when new quarters were absolutely imperative for the coming year, and yet when the gloom of the San Francisco tragedy made the women feel that it was not a propitious time to ask people for assistance.

FIVE-STORY CONCRETE.

The contemplated structure will be built upon the valuable lot which the association owns on Hill street, just opposite its present quarters. It will be at least five stories high, of reinforced concrete. One entire story will be given over to dining-rooms, kitchens and every necessity for the lunchrooms where 1000 business women dine every day, provision being necessary for many more than the present number now getting their noon-day lunch in the association rooms.

A fine gymnasium, two stories high, and equipped with baths and every convenience, will take the place of the basement room which passes as a gymnasium at present. Many classrooms will be provided, and the necessity for this can be grasped by the fact that the present educational work has overflowed into four separate places outside of the central building, and the offices of several friendly physicians in the Conservative Life building are used for the same purpose in the evenings. Over sixteen hundred students were enrolled in this educational work last year, and there are nearly one-third more enrolled this present term than last.

A splendid domestic science department, a large restroom, where at least twenty-five couches can be placed for the use of weary young women, instead of the five used at present, and provision for the manifold activities which make this association a living wonder, will be a part of the handsome new structure.

ABOUT A COURT.

The five or more stories of the building will be erected about a court so that plenty of light and air may be obtained.

The women of the association feel that Los Angeles should lead the Pacific Coast, if not all America, in this vital matter of suitable housing. The work of this association is more in the eyes of the world than that of any other. Every year thousands of tourists come from every quarter, and sometimes in a single day four or five association workers from other cities come in to see what this great organization is doing.

Buffalo wrote recently: "Please send us your latest printed matter. We are looking for ideas, and we understand that Los Angeles is where they grow."

From Portland, Or., came this message: "Please show one worker all about your association; we are looking to Los Angeles for our ideals."

MRS. RODMAN FIGHTS FIRE.

Society Woman Pluckily Extinguishes Flames That Threaten to Destroy Her Residence.

Mrs. Willoughby Rodman, prominent in society, and a member of the Library Commission, fought flames which threatened her home at No. 2631 Orchard avenue yesterday. When the fire department arrived nothing remained of a lively blaze that had originated from crossed wires in the rear of the house.

Mrs. Rodman saw smoke and flames in the chicken coop. She ran toward an alarm box a block away. She met a small boy and told him to turn in an alarm, and then hastened back to the house. When she arrived the flames were threatening the house.

Mrs. Rodman connected the garden hose with a plug on the front lawn. Then she found the hose was not of sufficient length. She ran to a neighbor's home and came back with more hose. Then followed strenuous fire fighting. Fortunately the flames had not gained sufficient headway to spread beyond control, and the plucky woman was able to extinguish the fire before the arrival of the department apparatus.

NEW NATURALIZATION LAW.

First Applicant Under Revised Statute Files His Intention in the United States Court.

Patrick Zannini, a Sicilian farmer living at Barstow, applied for citizenship papers in the United States Court yesterday. Zannini is the first since the new law went into effect, on September 27.

The statute contains some important new provisions, among them a clause which gives the entire naturalization process into the charge of the Department of Commerce and Labor. By the new law the would-be citizen must present the certificate he receives on landing as an emigrant in this country. If the certificate is not presented, he cannot get his papers. This complied with, ninety days must be allowed in which to investigate possible objections to his becoming a citizen. If these are not found, he will receive his first papers.

Earl R. Emmons, alleged counterfeiter, was removed yesterday from the local jurisdiction to San Francisco by order of the court.

TEN MILLIONS FOR TOURISTS.

Lavish Spending by First-Class Hotel Men.

Hundred Thousand Visitors Expected from East.

Building and Furnishing on a Grand Scale.

The hotel interests of Los Angeles and vicinity have spent more than $10,000,000 in preparation for record-breaking travel to the Coast this winter.

Nine immense new hotels will enter upon their first year of tourist trade this season.

More than a score of family hotels in the semi-business district have been erected.

Hotel men say they expect 100,000 visitors to this city during the winter and spring months.

A marvelous standard of luxury obtains in every first-class hotel of Los Angeles and Pasadena and there are many of them.

Guests walk one oriental rug valued at $10,000; use silverware costing $62,000, and listen to a $2000 clock telling the time in one hotel.

The hotel men expect a rush from the East. They are ready for them. "Let 'em come," they say.

Fabulous sums of money expended in the erection of great, palace-like hotels; hundreds of thousands of dollars lavished in refitting the existing caravansaries; a nervous, thrilling expectancy among the managers, and a general bustle and renovating among the hundred-odd hotels in Los Angeles and vicinity, is the existing condition which extends from the proprietor down through the manager, the clerk, and even to the bell-hop.

A "great season" does not convey the impression gathered from the hotel managers. They are optimistic and are eager to show the excellent grounds for their optimism. They predict that all records for travel to this section will be shattered during the coming winter.

The men back of the great institutions in this city not only talk optimistically, but back up their predictions with a lavish expenditure of cash, the equal of which has not been witnessed since Los Angeles became a world-famous winter resort.

Every manager in Los Angeles, Pasadena and adjoining localities is figuratively standing in the front of his spic-and-span hotel shading his eyes as he peers eastward for the advance guard of the thousands fleeing from the snow, sleet, frost and rain to sunland.

Let 'em come. He is ready for them, and the more the merrier. He has spent money like a Croesus for their reception. The eyes of the visitor to Los Angeles this winter will be opened by the magnificance of the hotels at his command.

TEN MILLIONS SPENT.

In preparation for the influx of tourists and permanent residents to this section a sum totaling over $10,000,000 has been expended by the hotel interests alone—this vast sum is in addition to the great facilities at hand last year for the visitor. All of these former hotels have cut the string binding their money bags and have lavishly furnished and refurnished their establishments.

In Pasadena the same condition exists, and in Long Beach two great hotels are racing with might and main to be completed in time to grasp a portion of the yellow stream of gold that will be spent in this vicinity this winter.

Los Angeles, of course, is the leader in this expenditure.

The magnificent Alexandria, than which the Pacific Coast can boast of none finer, will enter upon its really first year of service to the fugitive from the cold blasts and disease of the East. The investment at this establishment alone stands a little over $2,000,000. Then, on Oak Knoll, Pasadena, 1000 men are struggling with vim to have the superb Hotel Wentworth ready by the middle of December. On this site close to $1,750,000 will be lavished to make a hotel that will be world-wide in its fame. At Long Beach 500 men are struggling with the massive construction of the Bixby. This great hotel is to be completed in time to catch a portion of the spring travel to this place. The investment here marks time to $750,000, and is spoken of as one of the most promising ocean-strand hotels in the United States. Not far from the Bixby, and located on the pier, the new Westminster of Long Beach will rise. The snug sum of $450,000 will be expended here.

Then back again in Los Angeles the handsome Hayward Hotel stands wide open with a dazzle of magnificent furniture and an excellent management. The investment here is $750,000.

The New Holmes, which will go up on Sixth street and Westlake avenue, will consume over $300,000 in cold cash. The King Edward Hotel, an excellent establishment on Fifth and Los Angeles streets, has been completed during the present year at a cost of $375,000.

IT IS ASTONISHING.

To delve among the scores of handsome costly family hotels that are either in course of construction or but recently completed in the residence and semi-business districts of the city would astonish an observer. These establishments are being built by the score. The cost of most of them exceeds $100,000 for the day of the cheap hotel or boarding hotel is past in Los Angeles. Some cheap establishments, of course, exist, and do a good business, but they do not cater nor secure any considerable portion of the so-called tourist traffic of the winter months.

It is a conservative estimate that $1,750,000 is being expended in the construction of these family hotels

JOBBERY, CORRUPTION, EXTORTIONATE TAXES, COST OF MUNICIPAL TRADING EXPERIMENTS.

"The Times" Correspondent in Battersea, the Inner Temple of the Public Ownership Faddists of Great Britain—Unionite "Laborers" Loaf and Draw Pay While the Rate-Payers Sweat—All Work Done by Historic Borough Costs More Under Regime of Socialism and Allied Evils.

BY S. FRED HOGUE.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BATTERSEA (England) September 22.—I have visited the inner temple of municipal socialism—the borough where, wrapped in the toga of union labor, the Socialists are in control; where their fads and isms are supreme, where the tax rate accumulates and realty values decay.

Battersea is known throughout Great Britain as a "Municipal Mecca." I have made my pilgrimage and I have seen and talked with the votaries who worship at the shrine.

In the borough of Battersea there is an estimated population of 175,000. The rateable value is £1,046,000 and the tax rate nine shillings on the pound. This rateable value is not the assessed valuation as such is taken in the United States, but the rental value of the property. The renter pays the rate. For each twenty shillings of rent he pays nine shillings in taxes.

The Socialist-labor union regime in Battersea started in 1891; that is the date when municipal trading began. Then the rate per pound was 5s. 6d. I have seen a compilation by the present Battersea administration showing, on paper, that every municipal trading scheme attempted by the borough has been a success. But the citizens of Battersea receive nothing free now that they did not get in 1891; the tax rate has increased 63 per cent.; the municipal bonded indebtedness has grown from £37,000 in 1890 to more than £700,000; the increase in assessed valuation has been but 10 per cent.

This in itself is an excellent illustration of the value of the municipal trading statements issued by the English municipalities.

Battersea is not even required to support its own police force. Half the expense of the police department is paid out of the imperial revenue, and the imperial tax is not included in that rate which I have quoted. It is an extra burden on the rate payer.

Viewed in the light of present day developments the history of this borough is peculiarly appropriate. The site of the municipality was formerly known as Battersea Fields. It was the favorite resort for people bent on lawlessness and was a famous spot for duels. These fields were the haunts of the outlaws that infested London during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It was in these swamps that they buried their loot.

Often the outlaw was taken and hanged before he had an opportunity to dispose of his plunder. Some the caches have been uncovered in digging tunnels and sewers during recent years.

In the center of the fields was the "Red House," a tavern of notorious repute. It was there that Sunday fairs of the worst types were held.

Here it is that the twentieth century adventurers gather and prey on the citizens in the most approved twentieth century methods. In no line is the advance of civilization more marked than in the refinement of the practice and methods of outlawry.

BATTERSEA'S SCHEMES.

The Battersea Council now has under its control baths, cemeteries and libraries, as well as the electricity supply, municipal milk debts and several minor forms of municipal trading schemes.

An excellent account of the wonderful progress made by the borough of Battersea under a municipal ownership regime appears in the minutes of the evidence taken before the joint select committee on municipal trading appointed by Parliament to investigate municipal socialism in Great Britain.

Here are a few extracts:

"Mr. John Edward Atsill is called in and examined as follows:

"Earl of Crewe, chairman.—You are here on behalf of the Battersea Municipal Alliance? Yes.

"Perhaps you would just tell us what that body is; is it a kind of rate payers' protective association? The Battersea Municipal Alliance is an association composed of rate payers of Battersea who feel that the affairs of Battersea are administered in a very extravagant manner; they are absolutely a nonpolitical body and they have formed together for combatting the socialistic tendency of the present Progressive majority in the Council. It is my intention, my Lord, very briefly, to call your attention to the growth of the Battersea municipal debt. I wish to take the last twelve years. I wish to state that in 1891 the local debt was £82,070; at the present time the debt is £56,235.

"As regards the interest to be paid on those loans, what have you to say on that? I should like to point out that that is already becoming a serious burden to the rate payers . . . annually now in interest and the repayment of loans we are paying £41,500, which is equal to 10d. rate. . . . The second thing I wish to call the attention of the committee to is what I call the very absurd objects loans are obtained for, and the short life and object of these loans. I should like to mention a few instances; in 1897 a loan of £720 for whitewashing and decorating the town hall was so obtained.

"As a single item? As a single item, and it was a separate loan, and, of course it would bear the expense of the negotiation of a loan such as 2s. 6d. per £100 they charge, and about seven guineas stamp duty.

"Then your second instance? My second instance was a loan taken up in July, 1902; that was a loan of £1000 for the purchase of horses.

PERNICIOUS SYSTEM.

"For what purpose? Merely to increase the borough stud. . . . Next Monday we are making application for a loan for £900 for furniture for new additions to the town hall.

"In your view how should the money be raised for these objects? From the current revenue. I want to point out that I consider that it is a very pernicious system, this granting of small loans, as it is quite possible that the party in power would like to go before the electors without any increase in rates, and by borrowing money for pretty well everything they wanted they might mislead the voters into the belief that there had not been an increase in the rates, but instead of objects coming out of revenue they had actually borrowed it. There is no doubt that for every conceivable object that we can borrow money for in Battersea we borrow it.

"Was there a suggestion for another loan? There was. That loan was for a loan of £2300. It is for a small hall that will accommodate about 250 people and two or three small committee rooms."

(This was in addition to the present Battersea municipal buildings on Lavender Hill.)

"Will that hall be generally useful to the public? It is the contention of the Battersea Municipal Alliance that there is no necessity for any such hall. There are plenty of public meeting places in the borough now. There are twelve board schools, and at each of these board schools you can secure a hall at the very nominal price of 5s. per night. I might say that the history of the building of this hall emanated from the Trades and Labor Council, who represent trade unions in Battersea. In fact, the Baths Committee were invited to the offices of the Labor League and Trades and Labor Council, to confer as to the advisability of building this hall.

"To pass to another subject; have you something to tell us about the Works Department in special connection with Battersea? The contention of the Battersea Municipal Alliance has always been that all work attempted by the borough itself should be thrown open to competitive tendering. A standing bylaw of the Borough Council requires that all work shall be done by its own works department.

"Do you think the work therefore costs more than it would if it was put out to open competition? I have not the slighest doubt about it myself.

HIGHER COST.

"Have you any instances? I should like to quote the instance of the new Nine Elms baths, which were built by the Battersea Works Department. The original estimate was £30,000; that estimate was our own borough surveyor's estimate. I should think very possibly that if those plans had been submitted to public tendering the estimates would not have been more than £30,000. When those baths were completed they cost £56,158.

"Was that without any alteration of the plan? There was no enlargement of the plan.

"You have an electrical undertaking in Battersea, have you not? Yes.

"The lighting will include street lighting and also house lighting? Yes, residential and shop. . . . The loss for the year 1902 was £3849. Since the electric lighting was commenced we have a loss to the rate payer of £9012, 15s. 7d.

"You have no complaint to make of the way in which that account is presented? . . . We have heard from previous witnesses a great deal about the very rapid depreciation of the electric light, and I may mention that these accounts do not take into consideration any depreciation whatsoever.

"They make no allowance for depreciation on your electric light plant None whatsoever." (Ten per cent. annually for depreciation of a plant is allowed by experts.)

Followed a short examination of the witness relative to municipal baths and cemeteries in Battersea. In concluding this part of his testimony Mr. Astill said:

"I may point out that the loss on our baths last year (operation) was £7943, which means a 2d. rate. The loss on the cemeteries was £4220. The loss on our electricity was £3849, and altogether the loss on our three what you may call municipal trading accounts we have is £16,000."

Sir George Bartley—"I gather that the general feeling in Battersea supports all this action? I do not admit that, by a peculiar division of the borough into nine wards, the Socialists and Progressives in the borough I admit have a majority, but if we take the correct number of voters the councilors who represent the Battersea Municipal Alliance have a majority. That is explained by three boroughs putting in representatives of the Municipal Alliance by large majorities while Socialists and Progressives got in by somewhat small majorities. I think I am right in saying that 40,000 votes were polled for the Socialist and Progressive party and about 44,000 for the Alliance, and therefore the Alliance represents the majority of the rate payers."

Here the witness was examined concerning some of the reported extravagances of the Works Department. At the conclusion Sir George Bartley asked: "You think that a great deal of your indebtedness is unnecessary, and you might have had the same advantages at considerably less outlay if it had been done in a more businesslike manner? No doubt a considerable saving could have been made."

After some questions about political conditions in Battersea, Mr. Astill was asked how he accounted for the fact that, notwithstanding all their blunders and extravagances, the Socialists were able to retain control of the Council. He replied:

SOCIALISTS' GRIP.

"Firstly, the general apathy of the rate payer of Battersea; secondly, the fact that Battersea is a very great stronghold of trades-unionism; thirdly, that Battersea itself employs about a thousand workmen and each of these workmen is a small electioneering agent himself, and influences to a great extent the voting of his fellow workmen."

These questions and answers are taken from "Municipal Trading, a report, ordered by the House of Commons to be printed July 23, 1903." Mr. Astill appeared at the request of the Municipal Alliance, an association composed of practically all the manufacturers and business men of Battersea. It represented the people who paid at least three-fourths of the entire taxes of the borough. They were protesting against the practical confiscation of their property through the excessively high taxation occasioned by the municiapl trading, the wasteful extravagance, and, worse, of the Socialist-labor union element.

During the last three years conditions have not improved in Battersea. Not a piece of public work of any importance has been performed without its scandal. Municipal employees make no pretense at delivering a day's work in return for a day's pay. I have gone to a number of places where city workmen were supposed to be engaged and I have seen enough to convince me that conditions exist which would not have been tolerated by the rings in Philadelphia and St. Louis when they were at their worst.

By the payment of a few shillings I secured the services of a resident of Battersea to show me about. At the town hall I found them suspicious of me. My inability to use the cockney accent gave me away and I was not permitted to see even so much as the backs of the books in the accountant's office.

Through the medium of members of the Municipal Alliance I learned where some public work was going on. Then my guide took me to the different places.

LOAFERS ON PAY ROLL.

On one road improvement three men were looking after the tools and making a pretence to work. The foreman and the rest of the crew of twelve had gone to see a football game—at least we were so informed.

From a public house near one job three policemen took two laborers away as drunken and disorderly. We were informed that these men belonged to the work crew and that their time was going on.

Some of the things I heard were so extravagant that I declined to give them credence. My time was not sufficient to enable me to investigate thoroughly.

The bricks the workmen were using came from municipal kilns. Six months ago I wrote in Los Angeles that some of the salmon-colored brick delivered by Joe Simons for use on the outfall sewer were about as bad as could be made. Since then I have broadened my point of view. Compared with some brick that I saw in Battersea, Joe's bats were highly respectable.

At a number of places I saw material piled up for future work. I was informed that a city employee, or rather a relay of city employees, watches this material. As it has to be "watched" night and day three men are employed.

At one point a wagonload of material had been dumped to repair some holes in the roadway. A grocer in front of whose place the material lay said it had been there for two weeks, and that it was "watched" all that time. Two workmen could have made the repairs in an afternoon. Yet forty-two days' pay had gone for "watching."

I have ascertained this week that I am not the only person who has seen and commented on the Battersea municipal employee on duty.

PLAYING CARDS, NOT WORKING.

Here are a few extracts from recent articles in the London Times. Each refers to Battersea:

"There was some new fencing that was being put up at the municipal cemetery at Morden. A certain member of the Council thought that the work was progressing slowly and costing an unconscionable amount and he paid a surprise visit to the place in working hours. He found most of the men engaged in playing cards on the tombstones."

"On another occasion, while the same job was going on, an official of the Council found the foreman and fourteen of his subordinates drinking in a public house two miles from the cemetery, and he learned they had been there some hours. He suspended them but they were subsequently all reinstated by a superior official anxious to keep on good terms with the Labor party. Thereupon the other official resigned, not caring to be longer connected with a public body where such things could be tolerated."

These are the first two instances cited in a two-column article that appeared in the London Times. Here is one of the concluding paragraphs:

"Such statements as these are so suggestive of jobbery and corruption that at first one hesitates to repeat them; but they are made freely enough by those who have a personal knowledge of what goes on behind the scenes at Battersea, and an abundance of evidence is available to support them."

There is a certain kind of stone work that should be done at the quarries before the stone is delivered to the authority using it. At Battersea this stone is delivered in the rough and dressed by municipal employees. It costs 50 per cent. more; but it carries out the grand principle of municipal Socialism and it helps to win the labor vote.

ENGLISH FORM OF GRAFT.

This is a specie of graft and corruption that the English law apparently cannot punish. To offer an elector money for his vote is graft but to work and vote for a useless municipal expenditure of £100,000 not only wins more votes in the labor council than the old way, but it is cheaper for the official and there is no risk.

The latest victory for municipal socialism in Battersea was won a year and a half ago. A private corporation offered to supply Battersea merchants and manufacturers with electricity in bulk for one-third less than the price charged by the municipal plant.

The manufacturers and business men in general petitioned that this company be permitted to operate in Battersea. They wanted cheaper power. But the agitators raised the cry that this would throw a number of municipal employees out of work and that the municipal plant would have to be operated at a heavy loss.

They controlled the most votes and the private company was forbidden either to manufacture electricity in Battersea or to deliver the product to consumers within the city limits.

The municipal policy of Battersea is controlled by the Bill Crooks ring. Before each meeting of the Council a secret session is held in the rooms of the Labor and Trades Council. The policy there outlined every totem-marked councilor is pledged to support. The secretaries of most of the unions belong to the council and nearly all of them are on the Works Committee.

This is largely accountable for the extravagant price paid for all manner of public work.

WOULD HERD "ISMS" UNDER SAME ROOF.

LOS ANGELES is to have a house of "isms," if somebody will build it. That is, a mammoth apartment and rooming-house, in which the members of the numerous "isms" can be housed, free from the disturbance and criticisms of an outside inquisitive world. A committee representing the most prominent "isms" is looking for an "angel" to build this establishment. The committee unloaded its plans to a capitalist yesterday. It desires a house that will accommodate about 200, with light housekeeping rooms for families and single rooms for bachelors and for maids who are only wedded to their particular cult. This house would not hold all of the followers of the "isms" and occult "sciences" prevalent in this city, but would do as an experiment, and the leaders in the movement think other houses would be built.

The object of this colonization of the followers of the various "isms" is to escape the criticism, the annoyance, questions and even the contact of people in boarding and rooming-houses, whom they unavoidably meet. Also, the noise and bustle of boarding-house life.

In most of these places there are always inquisitive people who are asking at all times all kinds of questions, especially about the peculiar belief of these people. This is annoying to them, diverts their minds from study and upsets their habits of taciturnity. Furthermore, the diet is not suitable either in the boarding-houses or in the restaurants. Some of the faddists eschew meats, others "cut out" pie, and still others balk at hash. While the spread may be bulky enough to satisfy the hunger of a street grader, there is very little for the faddist who disciplines his digestive apparatus according to the rules of his "ism." In the proposed model house they may cook and eat only that which "appeals" to them, or may fast and save money. They will not be required to rise at regulation hours in order to give the "chamber lady" a chance at their rooms, but may sleep until awakened by Gabriel's trumpet—if the room rent has been paid. The silence of a monastery is to be enforced day and night.

No one will call upon another unless first invited, and useless talk will be avoided. It will be a house where "no questions are asked"—and none answered. There will be a rule against general conversation in the halls and in the reading-rooms, and argument will be prohibited, as it is not the wish of the leaders that the member of any one "ism" shall be converted to the belief of another, or that an attempt shall be made to lead him forth. Every one will be permitted to think and live his own life, come and go when he pleases, and live apart from all the others. There will be a reading-room stocked with the literature of all the "isms" in the country, and here the roomers may browse and cram their minds to the limit. With this modern "palace of light," Los Angeles will be equipped with about everything under the sun, and the searcher after the unknown and the unknowable need go no further.

But the man with money who wants to build a house of "isms" hasn't been found yet.

FIRE DAMAGE IS $15,000.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Oct. 20.—A fire that started shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon from the overturning of a stove in a booth connected with the street fair in Kansas City, Kan., caused a loss estimated at over $150,000. A high wind made it difficult to fight the flames and it was necessary to call for help from this city. The Masonic Temple at Seventh and Ann streets, valued at $50,000; eighty booths containing valuable exhibits of various kinds, and five residences were destroyed, and the Central Christian Church at Seventh and Armstrong streets was damaged.

TWELVE SHOPPERS KILLED.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 20.—Twelve persons were injured in a panic during a bargain sale at a store here today. Two thousand persons were in the store. During the rush for the counters in the rear of the establishment, where the bargains were on display, there was a cry of: "There is a $5 bill on the floor,' by some person, evidently facetiously inclined. Several persons bent over to pick up the bill, and in the scramble that ensued women and children were thrown from their feet and trodden upon.

"In case these men are working more than the allotted time, Mr. Biddle, you have done the government a great service. On this complaint we will investigate thoroughly, but if the facts are not as stated, I shall be compelled to prosecute you for perjury."

In the half-minute that followed a queer sort of terror seemed to put half a dozen years on poor old Biddle's already burdened shoulders.

He coughed and explained, stammered and exclaimed, and besought Mr. Lawler not to make out the complaint.

He said he had intended to make his complaint on "information and belief" only. Evidently Lem had been "advised" by one of the quack labor attorneys.

When he was told that information and belief didn't hold in such a document, he finally asked for time to consider, and then suddenly refused to make the complaint at all. With some incoherent platitudes, he bowed himself out.

He stayed away only a little while, for within a day or two he reappeared, dragging a kindly-faced but wooden-headed Mexican with him.

He had found the man who worked the full circle of the clock. The abused had signified his willingness to make the affidavit.

Lem wished the proceedings to be hurried through. He pleaded an engagement, and smilingly told the cholo to do all that he was told.

So the papers were drawn up, and Lem could scarcely hold himself in.

As the ignorant one was about to scrawl his mark, Mr. Lawler called a brief halt in the proceedings.

He had an interpreter explain to the signer, with care and thoroughness, the nature of an oath, all that it signified, and the penalties of false swearing.

Before the interpreter had finished, the Mexican pushed away the pen, smiled sheepishly, made a grab for his dirty hat and looked furtively at the door.

Mr. Lawler stood silent, awaiting the exit of Lem and his hired man.

They went.

It is plain to be seen that this was merely a trap for the United States Attorney, as his enemies wished him to entangle himself in a lot of worthless prosecutions, which, reacting from injured parties, might eventually oust him from his position.

All is quiet in the Tajo block now, but there are beliefs that Lem is thinking up another one.

CONGER SEES PIRATE CHASER.

Former Ambassador to China Pays a Visit to War Junk Whang-Ho at San Pedro.

Former United States Minister to China E. H. Conger and a party of friends enjoyed a trip yesterday to San Pedro to inspect the Chinese war junk Whang-Ho. Publicity Agent H. S. Kneedler of the Pacific Electric system was in charge of the party, which traveled to the harbor city on the private car El Peregrino.

As the launch bearing the party circled about the strange ship her peculiarities caused her to stand out as a striking curio among the many other vessels lying in the anchorage. There is no question that the Whang-Ho when sent upon a cruise was destined to make it decidedly interesting for the pirates who fell into her power, and if these same pirates knew what instruments of torture her equipment inventoried there is no wonder that they preferred death to capture.

"There are many just such ships in the great fleet of Chinese pirate chasers," said ex-Minister Conger after the trip, "and the means which they use for the infliction of even ordinary punishment, to say nothing of the death penalty, is horrible in the extreme.

"I am glad this war-junk has come to America, for it will tend to scatter information which has formerly reached these shores by rumor only. Its authenticity and the genuineness of its equipment cannot be questioned, and the bits of its history which have accompanied it across the sea are undoubtedly only a small portion of its full story of carnage and destruction."

The Whang-Ho will shortly be thrown open to visitors, who will find much to interest them, not alone in its quaint construction and wierd equipment, but in the stories of its career as a pirate chaser along the Chinese coast.

In politics it frequently happens that it is the crooked man who votes straight.

Hearst has been accused of "working" the rural mail carriers. Well, aren't they part of the public?

The Atlantic seaboard, south from New York, has been a hard place on whiskers for several days past.

The flavor of the West has not entirely disappeared as long as we can scare up an occasional Indian war.

Los Angeles being a haven for men, is perhaps only another reason why it should also furnish a harbor for ships.

We are fast approaching, as a people, the time when even "love's young dream" will have dollar marks on it.

Sir Thomas Lipton is also evidently preparing to escape the disgrace of dying rich. He has become "angel" for an opera singer.

It is a mistake to suppose that a man can do as he pleases with his own money. It is only with other people's money that he can do as he pleases.

Pinar del Rio appears to be considerable of a storm center. When rebels are not raising trouble there the hurricanes and cyclones occupy the territory.

Folks in the suburbs should not become alarmed at those frequently appearing clouds of dust. It is only Ben Ward on a whirlwind campaigning tour.

Candidates for Congress who feel themselves forced to ask for the President's indorsement are usually the kind who will have a hard time getting it.

In the matrimonial market it is noticed that the custom of "giving the bride away" is being abandoned. The tendency now is to let the dead past bury its dead.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon's majority will not be so large this year as it was expected it would be a few weeks ago. Sam Gompers has decided not to stump the district.

The Weather Bureau has started in to use the new way of spelling, but the old way of predicting clear days for rainy ones will continue to be in force as heretofore.

After teaching school for forty years, Miss Eliza Benbough died last week at Pomona, in poverty. She was overworked and underpaid, an example of her profession.

A man should make the way he votes a matter of business. Let him take heed that he does not turn the advance guard of prosperity "about face," making it the rear guard of hard times.

Mention was made in the papers the other day of "schoolmasters' clubs." The world is becoming more brutal all the time. When we were boys schoolmasters used nothing worse than good birch switches.

Notice to winter tourists: Florida's Keys are under water, but the keys to Southern California were thrown away long ago, and the gates torn from the hinges. Come while yet there is room.

There is not nearly so much talk now as there was some time ago about tinkering the tariff. The tinkers noticed that the people had scowls on their faces whenever the subject was mentioned.

The genuine politician will rub the skin off his palm shaking hands with people, and smile over it, while, if he had to rub off that same skin chopping wood for his wife it would break his proud heart.

Californians are coming to the point where they are almost afraid to visit the East. What with hurricanes, cyclones, floods and thunder and lightning storms, the East is a very unsafe place to be in.

The professional baseball season in California will end two weeks hence. But the game will continue unobstructed on the vacant lots by the true lovers of the game who would rather play it than any other on earth except "hookey."

A debate has been held on the currency question by the American Bankers' Association in St. Louis. The arguments, however, failed to evolve a method by which a man without currency can get a grip on a good bunch of it without growing gray-headed in the effort.

WHAT SAY YOU, GENTLEMEN?

That body of citizens, composed very largely of Republican voters of high standing in the business community of Los Angeles, of acknowledged intelligence and patriotic impulses, who composed the non-partisan committees, took an exceedingly wise course in confining their attention at this time to local affairs and eliminating State and national issues from their campaign.

But what are you going to do, gentlemen, as to the head of the State ticket? This question appeals of course to the intelligent voters of all party names who entertain truly American sentiments in politics and whose really sincere desire is to see the strongest, truest, the most capable and most intelligent nominee among the candidates elected to the Governorship of the State; but we will not disguise the fact that this appeal comes most forcibly to independent Republicans. In the election of Governor there is more at stake than local or State issues. All the great national issues are really very much involved in this election. If this State should go Democratic on the head of the ticket, it would be proclaimed far and wide as a declaration of distrust in Republican policies and in the administration of President Roosevelt. Now the independent in politics is in no way committed by his alliance with that movement upon the gubernatorial problem in the campaign. He is left utterly free from any obligation to his own newly formed party in this respect. He is left to the decision of his own judgment absolutely as to his vote for the Governor.

There is absolutely no jot of reason which bars a Republican from voting for his party's State standard bearer. James N. Gillett is a Republican of life-long standing. He has done consistent and efficient work for the party throughout the whole of his public career, and he has always rendered these services to his party in a way that reflects the greatest credit upon the party. There has never been an act of Gillett's life, public or private, that was not an act becoming a thoroughly honorable man, becoming a patriotic American citizen, or in the least disqualifying him from receiving every vote of his party in this State on the sixth day of November. On the contrary, his consistent and honorable conduct as a Republican politician, statesman and public servant entitles him to the vote of every such citizen in the State.

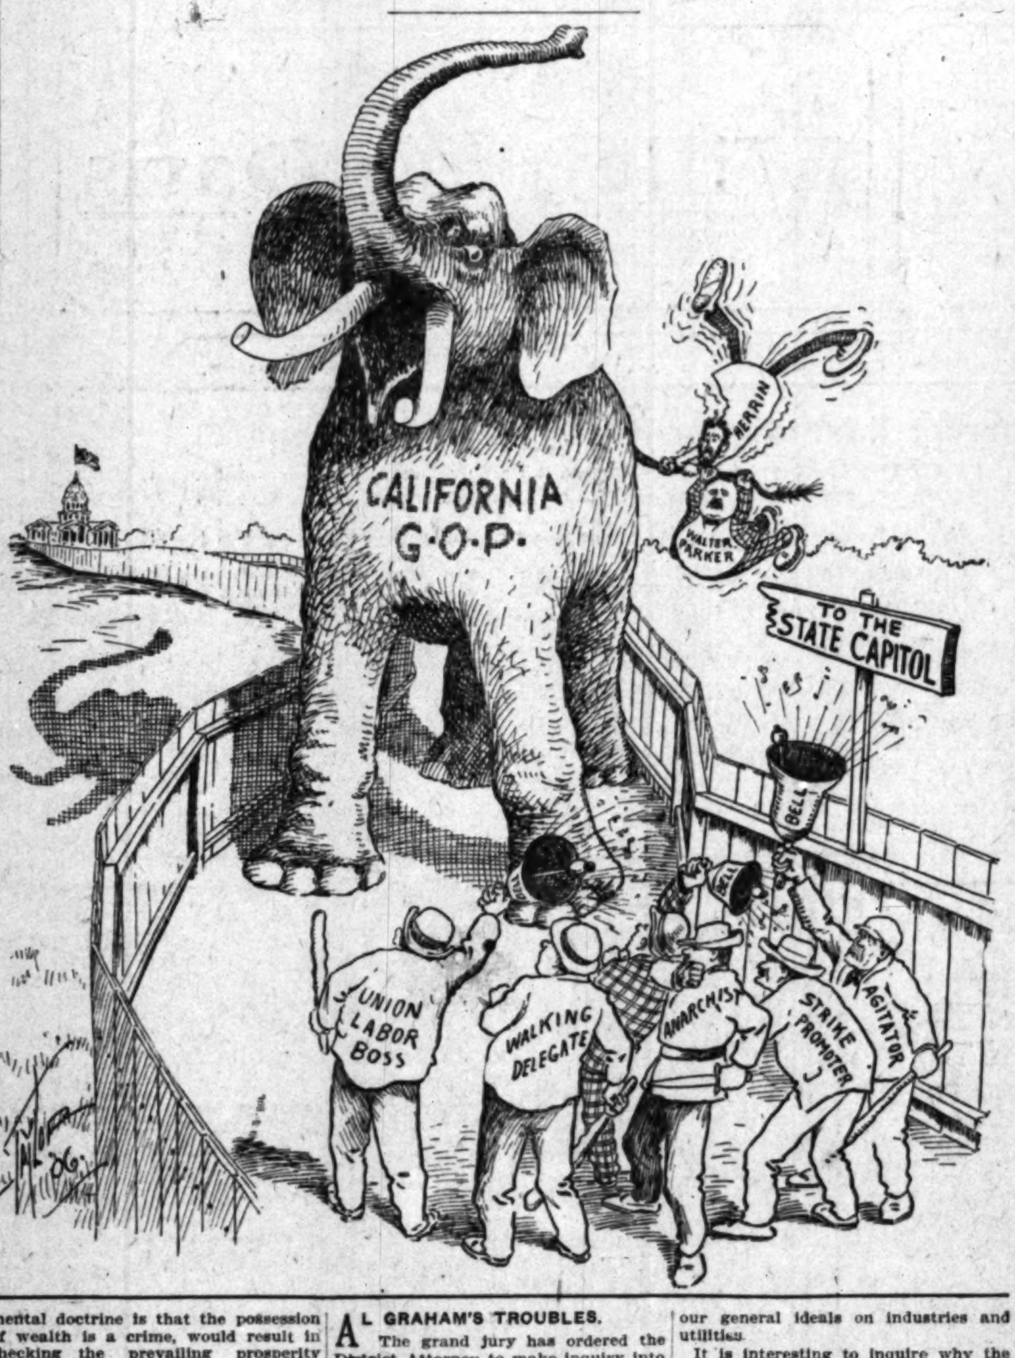
Now we have no doubt in the world, not the least particle of doubt, that Gillett will be elected Governor. But that is not enough to satisfy the reasonable demands of the Republican party, of the voters of that party of the State of California. There will be six candidates for Governor heading the different tickets. There will be more or less breaking away from all parties into new party lines. There has been an exceedingly great increase of new voters who have come into the State since the last election. It is assumed, and the assumption is entirely reasonable, that a very large majority of these are Republicans. But they are strangers here, and know comparatively little about the State issues or about the candidates. Some of these new voters are likely to be confused in their judgment. The Democratic party, with its allies, the labor union mischief-makers and Hearst's doll, Langdon, are doing all they can to create this confusion in the minds of Republican voters. It ought to be easy enough for intelligent Republicans to see through this somewhat thin cloud of dust. When you find the labor union mischief-makers of San Francisco, the anarchists, the strike-promoters and the close allies and upholders of Eugene Schmitz and the henchmen of Abe Ruef, crying out against Gillett and working for Bell it should not be so very difficult to draw true conclusions from this absolutely false pretense.

We say that the mere election of a Republican Governor will not be sufficient to satisfy the reasonable demands of the Republican party in the nation. If there should be any large falling off in the Republican majorities anywhere, that fact would be seized upon and twisted to do service for the political forces which are opposed at least to Republican principles, and some of which are opposed to everything that is in consonance with the Constitution of the United States and its Bill of Rights, with a square deal, with the right of every man to have an opportunity equal with every other man to live and earn a living. What is demanded of the Republicans of the State of California on election day in the first week of November is that they shall roll up a majority for Governor so overwhelmingly great that it will proclaim aloud in every State in the Union that California stands immovably fast for American Republican principles, for fair play, for the open shop, and for the administration of President Roosevelt.

The independent Republican voter will give these matters, which we acknowledge are largely partisan, the most careful consideration. For why are we Republicans? Is it not because we believe the principles of our party are the best for the whole mass of the American people? Is it not because we are convinced that the application of the principles of any other party in the republic, whether those of Democratic free-traders, those of labor unions, or those of the Independence League, alias Hearstism, whose fundamental doctrine is that the possession of wealth is a crime, would result in checking the prevailing prosperity which is blessing our people and in turning us back to the stagnation and misery of the Cleveland regime.

And, after thinking over these things, what are you going to do, gentlemen—you independents and all you gentlemen of Southern California who have prospered chiefly from two causes, first the Republican tariff policy and second the maintenance of industrial freedom in this part of the land—what are you going to do, gentlemen? Are you going to vote the free-trade ticket? Are you going to vote for the gubernatorial nominee of the Union Labor party, Theodore A. Bell? No! Not many of you, The Times is sure.

AT BAY.



THE TURN O' THE ROAD.

In the old story-books there was invariably the case of the young man who went forth to seek his fortune. In those blessed days the young man always started on the journey afoot, with his worldly goods tied in a bundle that he was able to swing on a stick across his shoulder. We can all remember the thrill we experienced when the story portrayed the tearful farewells incident upon the young man's departure, and how we followed him with straining vision until he came to the turn o' the road. There he paused awhile to look back upon the scenes of his boyhood, and, with a wave of his hand, he left us and disappeared from sight to be swallowed up in the great, big, devouring world.

It is different, now, of course. When a young man goes forth to seek his fortune in these times, he jumps a railway train or is whirled off in an automobile. His trunk and his "grips" are looked after by the local "express man." The farewells are no longer tearful, because when he arrives at the place where he is due to set up his office as a promoter, he has a long-distance telephone at his hand by means of which he can inform his folks that he has landed safely and will not need a remittance for at least eight or ten days.

There is no turn of the road for the young man of the present day, and more's the pity. It might be a good deal better for him if there were one.

Among the greatest men ever produced have been those who "left home to seek their fortunes." And by "great men" is meant those men, alone, who accomplished good in the world. A man may have become rich and yet failed to have become great. He may have become famous, yet not great. And, on the other hand, he may have attained neither fame nor riches, but became great in the true sense of the word.

Happy the man who carries in his heart the memories of his youth, and who often goes back in his dreams to the turn o' the road. It is there he will find the tender thought and the high resolve that made him strong to win the battles of life. The world in its mad hurry would drive us along too fast for our good, for our peace and happiness. The present and the future are far too insistent. It is a fine thing, in some ways, to "die in the harness," but the thing is overdone. We have too little time for retrospect, for memories and the dear dreams that make the heart tender.

Let us go back to the turn o' the road. Let us take the time, as often as may be, to review the past. Let us think of our mistakes, too, sometimes. Let us do anything but pitch headlong down to the journey's end without taking account of this criminal waste of life.

The turn o' the road. The place is there still. Go back to it and dream awhile.

The various sorosis organizations are showing a disposition to get together. It is probably the intention to not only put mere man in his proper place but to eliminate him entirely from the world's every-day affairs.

AL GRAHAM'S TROUBLES.

The grand jury has ordered the District Attorney to make inquiry into the manner in which all the money in the road fund for the Third Supervisoral District has been expended since the first of January. Capt. Fredericks lost no time in placing the case in the hands of a detective, who will make the inquiry and report as soon as practicable, which will probably not be in less than a month.

There are three very good reasons for the proposed investigation. The road fund of about $26,000 for this district has been exhausted; unpaid bills have accumulated, and Al Graham is Supervisor for the district.

The grand jury of 1905, it will be remembered, censured Graham for neglecting the roads in his district. There may be something more than mere censure in store for him this year after the investigation which the District Attorney's office is to make. There is little doubt that he has used his office for purposes of political intrigue. There is no doubt that he has neglected his Supervisoral duties. Perhaps he can account satisfactorily for the large amount of money which has been expended in his district, with nothing adequate to show for it. To charge that he has used it, or any portion of it, for improper purposes, would be premature and unwarranted in the absense of definite proof. But it is well that he is to be given a chance to explain. It will be fortunate, indeed, for Mr. Graham if he can make such explanation as will satisfy the grand jury and his colleagues on the Board of Supervisors, who have also ordered an inquiry.

Graham's delinquencies have aroused the voters of his district and the effort to replace him as Supervisor by an able and high-minded man, Dr. W. A. Lamb, promises to succeed. It will be a grand change.

ANTI-AMERICAN FOR ALL THAT.

It would be difficult to find any notion or whim in religion, morals or economics that has not been tried in the United States somewhere at some time or other. Since the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers from the Mayflower and of the cavaliers at Roanoke, the population of the United States has been drawn from all the peoples of the civilized world. They have come here with their ideas upon all sorts of subjects, and naturally there has been more or less serious attempt to develop these conflicting notions. Every kind of fanaticism has been tried in the United States, from drowning witches and burning Baptists in Massachusetts to reciprocity in burning people who were not Baptists in Rhode Island. Coming down later, we tried to teach the world to live on graham bread, and we also attempted to make more attractive the female form divine by putting it into bloomers. Great Americans have exploited these fancies. Our former confrere in the newspaper business, but not contemporary, the redoubtable Horace Greeley, was the ringleader of all the advocates for brown bread food and bloomer costumes

And so when noisy Socialists refer to the fact that the State of Pennsylvania three-quarters of a century ago tried the experiment of government ownership of railroads, neither that fact nor a dozen others like it will prove that the public-ownership fad is American. The trial of the experiment in Pennsylvania no more proves that that is an American programme than the drowning of witches at Salem would prove that to be in accordance with the Constitution of the United States.

This Pennsylvania attempt was originated in 1834. By 1857 the people of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania found out that they had a whole drove of white elephants on their hands in this railroad of theirs, and promptly closed it out to private owners—abandoned it as an utterly un-American experiment, not consonant at all with our general ideals on industries and utilities.

It is interesting to inquire why the State of Pennsylvania found this public ownership of railroads to be out of consonance with American ideals and utterly impracticable as an affair of every-day life. In the minds of dreamers and theorists and people of empyrical dispositions, the whole thing looks beautiful. In iron rails, rolling stock, officials and employés, the thing proved utterly unmanageable. Millions of the public wealth were squandered in construction. The railroad was used by those in control of it, politicians every one of them, to favor the communities which held with them and to punish those opposed to them in politics. The employés were robbed of large slices of their salaries in political assessments. The ballot boxes were stuffed in the most unconscionable way, by those in control of the railroad, who were afraid that the outs might get in and fatten upon the spoils of office in connection with the operation of this State railroad. You talk of lobbying on the part of the railroad managers of the present day. They learned the whole business from the lobbying of those in charge of the State railroad more than half a century ago. A regular tax of 10 per cent. of the pay of every employé of the road was kept out of their pay and put in a bag openly labeled "political assessments."

Individuals were allowed as a political favor to put private car lines on the public rails and to plunder the people in excessive rates for both passengers and freight. Everybody around Pittsburgh who could make the politicians believe that he had a little bunch of voters in his vest pocket had annual passes. Just as The Times special correspondent in England at the present time is showing to be the condition there today, so it was in Pennsylvania fifty years ago. The public debt grew and grew to enormous figures under this public ownership notion. Finally the people got so sick of the whole rotten system that the selling of the State railroad was made an issue in the election of a Legislature, and the great mass of the people, with true American ideas, won; the Legislature chosen proceeded to sell out the road, and although it is claimed that a price beyond its actual value was obtained for the property, the commonwealth recovered only about 25 per cent. of what it had cost.

A FUTILE CAMPAIGN.

Gov. James K. Vardaman of Mississippi is seeking election to the Senate of the United States, and he is basing his expectations of success upon the declaration that, if elected, he will inaugurate a campaign for the repeal of the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Vardaman will make as good a Senator, perhaps, as Mississippi is likely to select, and it is to be hoped that he will be elected to the Senate in order, if for no other reason, that he and all who sympathize with the movement to repeal the fifteenth amendment may learn how utterly futile would be such a campaign.

Vardaman proposes to make a fight on the floor of the Senate chamber against the amendment, and he expresses the belief that he would have the support of the entire South in such a fight. In this belief he is probably laboring under a mistake. The fifteenth amendment is practically a nullity in most of the States of the South. What could be gained by reopening the question? Even if Vardaman could succeed in his announced purpose, the South would gain practically nothing which it has not already. From a moral point of view it would lose prestige. It is by no means certain, or even probable, that all the Southern States would favor the repeal of the fifteenth amendment if the question were submitted to a popular vote.

The campaign which Vardaman proposes to start would have no chance of success. It would be futile. The North would have none of it. Public sentiment would be so strongly against the movement that it would be practically impossible to get the question before the legislatures of the several States for action. But if that could be accomplished, the amendment to repeal would have no possible chance for ratification, for majority votes in the legislatures of three-fourths of the States would be necessary for that purpose.

Mr. Vardaman insists that "a crisis in the relation of the races in the Southern States is at hand," and he thinks that "the problem of white supremacy or black domination should be settled at once." The "crisis" to which he refers is largely imaginary, and it is the creation, chiefly, of such unreasoning extremists as Gov. Vardaman himself. If these men would stop harping about the alleged crisis, would exercise a little more tolerance, and would show more respect for the Constitution, the race problems in the South would soon be solved with justice toward all. There is no denying, however, that the efforts of Mr. Vardaman to repeal the fifteenth amendment will afford a great deal of innocent amusement to his fellow-Senators and to the country. By all means, let him be sent to the Senate, to the end that we may all see what a spectacular ass he can make of himself.

HE GROWS UNDER FIRE—GILLETT, INDEPENDE

BY HON. W. B. MATHEWS.

The supposed prominence of railway influences in the recent convention at Santa Cruz has caused its candidate for Governor, the Hon. James. N. Gillett, to be subjected to unusually close scrutiny upon the question of his fitness for that important office. His private life and character, and the record of his public services, have been brought under critical review, both by his political adversaries and by independent voters in his own party; and, to this date, no flaw or defect has been pointed out or detected. He has ceased to be a stranger to us, and we know more about him, in respect both to what he has done, and to what he is likely to do, if elected to the office he seeks, than we probably would have known had the composition of the convention which nominated him excited less criticism. Like every good man, he improves on acquaintance, and grows more admirable under fire.

EXPERIENCE BEST TEACHER.

In tariff matters, as in all other concerns of life, experience is the best teacher. For want of a better cue with which to create trouble, for American capital and American labor, the low-tariff Democrats are asking for an unfriendly revision of the present protective tariff. They made the same request in the Congressional election of 1892, and got what they asked for, represented by the Wilson-Gorman tariff, enacted August 28, 1894. That low tariff was in force for three years, minus one month and one day, and resulted in the following money loss directly to the farmers of the United States, and indirectly to every other working and financial interest in the country. The losses may be recapitulated as follows:

Loss on farm animals....	$2,560,422,968
Loss on hay crops..........	464,739,066
Loss on corn crops........	363,725,658
Loss on wheat crops......	300,832,581
Loss on cotton crops......	221,863,355
Loss on oat crops..........	138,481,331
Loss on wool crops........	111,272,023
Loss on potato crops......	83,291,365
Loss on tobacco crops....	29,873,517
Loss on barley crops.....	7,250,877
Loss on rye crops.........	1,864,142
Loss on buckwheat crops..	172,137
Total loss from low tariff.	$4,283,787,520

On the basis of 75,000,000 population then, that total loss of $4,283,000,000 was equal to $57 loss for each and every man, woman and child in the country.

We repeat, experience is the best teacher.

DOGS AS POLICEMEN.

A writer in the Century magazine gives an interesting account of the use of dogs as assistants to the police in Belgian cities and in Paris. In the latter city they have proved efficient in rescuing from the Seine many victims of accident and would-be suicides, while in other lines of work connected with the police department their services are valuable. But it is in the Belgian cities that the employment of dog police seems to have been brought to its highest efficiency. In the city of Ghent the training and maintenance of dogs for police duty has proved to be a profitable investment. A dog costs the city of Ghent a little over 5 cents per day for maintenance, and thirty dog police cost 3285 francs per year. It is claimed that thirty dogs "do more than four times the work that would be accomplished by twelve men, who would cost the municipality 12,000 francs."

The idea of dog policemen seems to be a good one, all right. One distinct and obvious advantage of the system, not mentioned by the Century writer, would be that they could go on the "dog watch" without difficulty or friction. And in this connection the thought occurs that it would be a good idea for San Francisco to investigate the dog police question. If that city needs one thing more than another, it is an efficient police force. The question of reorganizing the force is now under active discussion, and the time for the experiment is opportune. There can be no reasonable doubt that the addition of a few good dogs to the San Francisco police force would add greatly to its efficiency. Some persons may think that the force would be a dog-gone sight better if it were composed entirely of dogs, but we do not go so far as that.

The American people are very prone to boast about the amount of money they spend on education. Nothing could make a poorer boast. The amount looks big in the aggregate, but it is really trifling when analyzed. And the fact is that we pay our teachers a wage too small to be spoken of without a blush.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.] [SACRA]MENTO, Oct. 19.—The po- reports from Los Angeles and in general have distinctly the Republican barometer in Mr. Bell's home is in the and it is here that his friends assiduous in proclaiming his popularity and the impe- his genius, however youth- necessarily give to him. reports from the South have encouraged some doubting here to question whether "popularity" is really so great supposed, and whether he will carry all before him in his simply because they home counties. It is true Mr. Bell was successful Republican rival, Mr. Coombs, entirely upon this fact that is his superhuman popu- based. that will do Bell anything is the reve- subserviency to Schmitz it seems to be unquestion- he received a telegram from one of the minor bosses in San Francisco warning him to "eliminate" these gentlemen from his attacks. Bell does not contradict this charge, simply because he cannot, and its truth is evident enough from the fact of his instant and compliant obedience. It is almost ludicrous to find that a man who bases his whole campaign on a denunciation of bosses that do not exist is yet so servile to the bosses that do exist and to the men that have done more to disgrace California and to lower her reputation than the "railroad" influences have ever been even accused of. We may safely assume that Mr. Bell would be similarly subservient to the Schmitz-Ruef combination if he should find himself at the Capitol, and no "railroad" influence that could be imagined would be so great a calamity as this. It would be impossible to imagine any one having the effrontery to issue such an order to Mr. Gillett. His whole record proves him to be a man who does not take orders from anyone.

There is very good reason to believe that the Bell newspapers have received orders to the same effect. It is certainly noticeable that they are now silent on the subject of the municipal abominations that are going on in the metropolis. Immediately after the Santa Cruz convention, when Ruef climbed into the band wagon over the tail board, and after it had started, there was no vituperation too strong to be directed against the Mayor and the boss of San Francisco. To prove that Gillett was nominated by the orders of Ruef was considered to be the winning card, and the fact that he would have been nominated in any case and that he would have much preferred Ruef's opposition was conveniently ignored. But now it seems that the labor union vote of San Francisco must be conciliated and that the majority of union men who will vote for Bell are also warm admirers of their patron saint, Ruef. Therefore, Ruef must not be attacked. Strong words against him are "inadvisable," as the telegram to Bell points out, and he must be "eliminated" from censure. Whether the Bell newspapers have received similar orders may be eventually known, but it is certain that their attacks upon the robbers' den in San Francisco have suddenly ceased. There can be very little doubt that in his heart of hearts Ruef sincerely hopes that Bell will be elected. It must be so by all the laws of human nature. Ruef can do all that he pleases with Bell and he can do nothing that he pleases with Gillett. Obviously, he would rather have a "monkey up a stick" at the Capitol than a man who cannot be worked upon.

An instance of Democratic desperation is just furnished by an attack on Gen. C. C. Chapman, the president of the Appellate Court. Without one single fact or piece of evidence, Gen. Chapman is accused of using the State stationery for his own election purposes. The lie is instantly nailed down, but no lie is ever overtaken by its contradiction, and while the newspapers that published the slander have also published the refutation it is done without a word of apology or regret.

There were also two failures, one of a safe and refrigerator concern for $90,000, because of bad colections, and the other of a hotel man. Still we can console ourselves with the refusal of the Election Commissioners to put decent judges on the ballot at the same meeting at which they voted $300 insurance money to a brother of the Mayor who is a public official. Outsiders are to be squelched, so Contractor E. W. McIelland of Los Angeles was prevented from blasting the Palace Hotel and must take it down brick by brick to keep from disturbing the footpads.

Some of the refugee camps in the public squares present unmistakable signs of prosperity, with easy chairs galore, steel engraved cards on the door telling the name of the occupant. In Hamilton Square a busy cigar store supplies 10-cent weeds to the refugee inhabitants. Frequently a lady with diamonds appears before the Relief Committee to demand her rights and those of her companion refugees, now that a hard winter is approaching and rains will fall on refugees as well as others.

Homesick.

The lithe flames leap within the gloom,
And make the room
A very flower of rosy bloom.

I see within their dying glow

And ever faster falls the snow,)

A cottage by a sunlit sea;

I hear the swallows twittering

And sing the rapture of the spring.

The cottage door is opened wide;
I step inside—
Then mists of tears the vision hide.

The Bachelor's Dilemma.

"In deciding an action brought to collect a bill here today," says a Times dispatch from Des Moines, Iiwa, "Judge Roe held that an unmarried man allowing debts is entitled to keep but one night shirt."

Another blow to the much-abused bachelor! He is a poor creature, no doubt, and probably deserves all he gets—but does he really deserve what, according to the law, as interpreted in Iowa, he does NOT get—a shift of nightshirts?

The bachelor is a moss-back, with unenlightened convictions as to what are the paramount duties of a man and a citizen. He is a selfish and self-centered chump, who idiotically prefers his own club or hall-room comfort to all the discomforts of a home. He is a bear and a curmudgeon, who coldly and superciliously declines to kiss the drooling, pretty-faced babies of his married friends. He is a conceited cad, who regards the wreathed smiles of his women friends as naught but snares of the fowler.

The Rambler cheerfully admits that the modern bachelor is all these horrid things, and many more, and that he ought to be put where he belongs—by himself, on some chilly island near the North Pole. Yet, the Rambler contends that he should be allowed more than one nightshirt, wherever he may be banned. He is already almost beyond the pale of civilization—a short shrift will quickly make an outer barbarian of him.

Give him another chance, is the Rambler's urgent plea. Compel him to have a dozen nightshirts instead of one. He will find it utterly impossible to keep the proper quota of buttons on twelve, and in his dilemma he will doubtless seek the surest remedy at hand—the (to him) extremely bitter pill of matrimony. If you also force twelve pairs of socks on him, your case is surely won. No mere bachelor could ever live with twelve nightshirts and twelve pairs of socks, and at the same time keep his sanity.

As every man must be properly buttoned and darned, the Rambler feels called upon to pen five words of advice, that she who runs may read: Ladies, seek it to him!

WILL ADDRESS EBELL CLUB.

Photographer Curtis of Seattle Will Talk of His Noted Pictures of Indians.

"Photo-historian of a vanishing race," is the title bestowed upon E. S. Curtis of Seattle, and it seems to be well chosen.

When the last Indian has followed the last buffalo to the happy hunting-grounds, and the smoke of the peace pipe no longer ascends from any portion of the great western plains, the customs and characteristics of that people will still live in the pictured record which Curtis has made, and will be a heritage to future people.

Curtis will address the Ebell Club tomorrow afternoon, and his pictures will be on display for the club members and their friends for several days.

The pictures are photographs with the scientific accuracy that a camera produces, but their artistic qualities lift them above the realm of photography as it is generally understood, and they affect one as the great paintings of a master.

Curtis is now engaged upon a history of the American Indians and he is receiving the sum of $15,000 a year to do the field work, the money for the project being supplied by Pierpont Morgan.

A passenger train is reported wrecked yesterday eighteen miles north of Houston, Tex. The wreck was on the Houston East and West Texas Railroad at San Jacinto River. Seven passengers were injured, four of whom were women.

PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Mayor McAleer yesterday vetoed the electric sign ordinance passed two weeks ago by the City Council. It will probably be passed over the veto, as there is an extensive demand for electric signs from the business men.

Fire Commissioner Schwamm yesterday declared that a grave injustice has been done W. Kahle, a German metal worker, by the commission withholding a permit for him to operate a small gasoline engine at his factory.

The proposition to use a new system in the city's book-keeping is calling forth many communications, and one Los Angeles firm offers to install the system for almost one-half the amount of the figures of the New York firm recommended for the work by the investigating committee.

Mrs. Nanon Torrance, who claims she is a cousin of Mrs. Potter Palmer and hunting a kidnaped son, paid a $3 fine as a common drunk in Police Court.

L. M. Johnson and C. L. Martin began suit yesterday against W. S. Withers and the State Bank and Trust Company to set aside a contract of purchase of Riverside land. The plaintiffs allege that Withers represented that the acreage was rich in magnesite, but that they could find only a certain amount of the mineral.

The grand jury yesterday was inquiring into the affairs of Supervisor Graham as to heavy expenditures made by him in the Cahuenga Road District, where $25,000 of the county's money was spent this year.

H. H. Davenport, a stockholder in the Tropico Water Company, began suit yesterday against W. G. Glassel, Ralph Rogers, M. E. Cary and W. B. Rogers to oust them as directors of the concern. Davenport alleges that they were not legally elected as directors.

A charge of insanity against Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Warner failed to hold yesterday and they were discharged. He was taken to the County Hospital and she will be cared for by friends.

Clarence H. Bray was sentenced yesterday to five years in prison for stealing a mare owned by D. Hayman.

Frank Lawrence, who stole a watch from a Redondo grading camp, was given ninety days yesterday.

E. H. Richter began suit yesterday to recover $20,500 damages from the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company, alleging that he was permanently injured in a trolley car collision.

AT THE CITY HALL.

"INJUSTICE" IS THE CHARGE.

FIRE BOARD'S ACT CRIPPLES ESTABLISHED PLANT.

Anthony Schwamm Accuses His Brother Commissioners of Unjustly Treating Worthy German Metal Worker—Electric Sign Ordinance Vetoed by the Mayor.

W. Kahle, a German metal worker, who for several years has conducted a small factory at his residence, No. 1704 East Sixteenth street, has been practically put out of business by the action of the Fire Commission. That body has refused Kahle a permit to operate a gasoline engine, although he was the first man to erect building in the block, and has been operating an engine there for a long time before this action.

It is Kahle's misfortune that he doesn't understand English. He found an advocate Friday in Commissioner Anthony Schwamm, who maintained before the commission that a grave injustice would be done the man if he was denied the engine permit. At the first hearing of the case before the commission, Kahle was present but did not know when his case was called and could not present his claims.

Commissioner Schwamm said yesterday that the action of the commission in refusing the desired permit would work a great hardship upon Kahle, who cannot make another application until a period of six months has expired, and whose work will be crippled during that period.

Schwamm said: "Kahle was the first man to build in the block, and he operated a small plant for art metal work at his home. He has been there for several years, and is an industrious, hardworking man. Kahle does not understand English and is not aware of the requirements necessary to establish an engine. For a long time past he had used a small gasoline engine, and was not aware that it was necessary to get a permit for it.

"Later, other buildings were erected in the block, and these people who came in long after Kahle was established then raised a complaint about his engine. He made proper application, and is now turned down, although his was an old established business."

Lester Robinson, who is a member of the Fire Commission, is also an officer in the Hughes Planing Mill, and Thomas Hughes, chief owner of the mill, has established his residence in the block in which Kahle had long before been operating his mantel works plant. Robinson at Friday's meeting of the commission bitterly opposed the issuing of a permit to Kahle, and declared the man should sell out and get off the block.

Commissioner Schwamm was highly indignant, and declared that the commission had done the German a grave injustice by its act in sustaining the demand of Robinson.

CITY BOOK-KEEPING.

HOME FIRMS MAKE BIDS.

When the City Council adopted a resolution providing for an investigation of municipal book-keeping methods, with a view to establishing a better system in Los Angeles, it opened up a long vista of troubles. The end is not yet; even the middle doesn't seem to have been reached.

A commission was duly appointed, composed of representatives of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the Municipal League, Messrs. J. M. Schneider, A. B. Cass and G. E. Bittenger, and after consideration it recommended that a New York firm be given the contract to install the new system, the firm guaranteeing that the cost of such installation would not exceed $15,000.

When the subject came before the City Council for action there was a cry against granting the work to a New York firm when there are numerous expert accountants in the city and State, ready to do this class of work. The subject was finally referred to the committee of the whole.

munications have been received from individuals and firms who are willing to undertake the work, and the indication is that the figures of the New York firm may be at least cut in twain, even if a larger saving is not affected.

A letter on this subject was sent to Mayor McAleer on Friday, and has been referred to the City Council. It is from Thomas J. Fry of the Oceanic Trust Company, No. 420 Pacific Electric Building, and the communication says:

"We beg to say that we can well afford to do what the New York accountants proposed to do for almost half the amount they asked; and we have some suggestions to make which we believe would enable you to have this work done at once."

A City Hall rumor is current to the effect that the whole proposition will be dropped for the present by the City Council, unless the various civic organizations prod up definite action.

ELECTRIC SIGNS.

MAYOR VETOES ORDINANCE.

Mayor McAleer yesterday signed his veto message on the electric-sign ordinance passed by the City Council two weeks ago. The ordinance was called forth by petitions signed extensively by business men of Main, Spring and Broadway, and it is probable it will be passed over the Mayor's veto. Mayor McAleer states his reasons for vetoing as follows:

The purpose of this ordinance is to allow electrically lighted signs to be maintained at night over the sidewalks of the city. My objections to this ordinance are as follows:

First—The ordinance is unenforceable and invalid, and, it should go into effect, we must be prepared to tolerate all kinds of signs over the sidewalks whether illuminated or not, for the reason that the courts will doubtless refuse to enforce its penalties against persons who should erect signs without lights, or illuminated otherwise than by electricity, when their neighbors are permitted to maintain signs simply because they are electrically lighted.

Second—Our main business thoroughfares are now the most beautifully lighted in the world, and there is no reason or ground for permitting overhead signs on account of additional illumination therefrom for the streets.

Third—This ordinance would permit all kinds of illuminated signs, regardless of the business advertised, or the wording upon the signs, or the candle power of the lights. If it should become a law, there is no doubt but that numerous signs will immediately be erected, which will be disfiguring to the streets and offensive to the public. Therefore, the city authorities should not favor such unrestricted license in the use of the streets.

Fourth—This ordinance is also objectionable from the standpoint of fire protection, for the reason that the maintenance of large and heavy signs in front of buildings would add to the difficulties of protecting them against destruction by fire.

Fifth—In any event, if signs are to be allowed over our sidewalks, provision should be made for obtaining permits from some official or board clothed with authority, to regulate their erection, to the end that offensive, objectionable or dangerous signs should be prohibited.

Oil Bid Specifications.

New specifications have been made by the Board of Public Works on which bids will be asked for supplying the city with 25,000 barrels of crude oil, in place of the proposition to furnish 30,000 barrels, as the advertisement read for the former bids. Bidders may offer to furnish the entire 25,000 barrels or they may furnish quantities of 5000 barrels or multiples thereof. The oil is to be 55 per cent. asphalt, and it must be delivered at the pleasure of the board, and payment will be made as it is taken from the tanks on orders from the board. Bids are asked for delivery at the tanks, and also for oil applied to the streets.

Tax Money Rolls in.

At the closing of the City Tax Collector's office at noon yesterday Tax Collector Johnson stated that there had been received in payment of this year's taxes more than $150,000, and this is fully twice the sum received for the same period last year. A noticeable feature of this year's taxpaying is that the full amounts are being paid in a majority of cases.

May Divert Sewage.

The Board of Public Works and City Engineer Hamlin, yesterday morning made an inspection of the old outfall sewer, with a view to planning for relieving the volume of sewage before it reaches the lowest places in the system. Ranchmen in the district above Western and Vermont avenues are awake to the fact that here is a valuable opportunity to obtain irrigation for alfalfa and trees, and they are negotiating with the Board of Public Works for the opening of taps at points above the point mentioned. It is believed that the ranchers and the board can cooperate to mutual advantage in this arrangement, and that much relief for the main sewer will thus be effected.

Change in Ordinance.

The accident which occurred on South Broadway Friday, in which a workman fell from the second story of a building under construction to the basement, called attention to the fact that in many of the structures now in course of erection there are no steps into the basements. Councilman Healy tomorrow will ask the City Council to so amend the city's building ordinances that it will be necessary for contractors to place temporary steps into basements to be maintained during building operations, for the safety and convenience of employés.

Election Supplies

Supplies for the forthcoming election are beginning to arrive at the office of the City Clerk. They are made up with a complete precinct outfit in each package, and there are 139 precincts delivered to the City Clerk tomorrow. to be thus supplied. The ballots will be Druggist Will Be Fined.

Selling a medicine without having it registered and without a physician's prescription caused the conviction of A. H. Chamberlain, a West Fifth-street druggist, in Justice Rose's court yesterday. Chamberlain will be up for sentence Monday.

A neuralgia cure was the point at issue. According to the evidence of officers and others, the druggist was selling this cure, put up in bottles. In this respect and in the manner of sale it was like a proprietary medicine. And the contention of the defense was that it was such. But evidence showed that the prescription was neitherd registered nor patented.

After hearing the case through, the court decided that the neuralgia cure was no proprietary medicine. Not being sold in response to a physician's prescription, the preparation was deemed illegally handled. The violation of the State law being shown, the defendant was adjudged guilty, and the fine will be announced on his appearance in court Monday.

Donegan Fights Case.

Fred Donegan, the contractor who knocked down his wife, from whom he had been separated, will fight the case in police court before a jury this week. Yesterday he entered a plea of not guilty to a battery charge, and furnished bail for his appearance Tuesday.

Donegan was arrested on complaint of the woman, from whom he had been estranged. She and her mother allege that he made an unprovoked attack on her, and the arresting officer says that when he came into the house the woman was senseless. Donegan claims that he came on invitation of his wife, and that the two were going to a dance. He claims he was forced to strike her practically in self-defense.

ALLEGED REAL ESTATE FRAUD.

W. S. WITHERS SAID TO HAVE MADE FALSE CLAIMS.

L. M. Johnson and C. L. Martin Purchase Tract of Land Represented, They Claim, to Be Rich in Magnesite—Dissatisfied With Bargain, They Bring Suit.

L. M. Johnson and C. L. Martin, real estate agents, have begun suit against W. S. Withers, also a real estate man, and the State Bank and Trust Company to have the courts set aside a contract of purchase into which they were induced to enter, so it is claimed, by alleged fraudulent representations of Withers.

Last June, it is alleged, Withers called upon Johnson and Martin and wanted them to sell a two-thirds interest in a 320-acre tract of land, situated in Riverside county, upon which he said that he held a contract of purchase. It is alleged that Withers boomed the tract on the ground of the valuable deposits of magnesite upon it, and as magnesite is of increasing value in the arts, and in many ways is being utilized in business, Johnson and Martin became interested.

One ore deposit was represented, so it is alleged, as covering sixty acres, and a prospect hole sent down had shown about 50,000 tons of the valuable mineral. On these representations Johnson and Martin say they made a deal, and purchased the Riverside tract for $20,000 for a two-thirds' interest. The sum of $1000 was to be paid down when the deed was placed in escrow, $9000 before July 5, and the balance of $10,000 before August 5 last.

Having paid their first $1000, Johnson and Martin allege, they began to look over their purchase. They say that they quickly discovered that they had been hoodwinked. Going over the 320 acres carefully it was impossible to find more than 5000 tons of magnesité, they claim, and, returning to Los Angeles, they gave Withers notice of withdrawinng from their contract. The papers and the $1000 had been deposited in escrow with the State Bank and Trust Company, and Withers asked for time so that he could fix things up. For this reason the plaintiff avers that they refrained from bringing suit sooner. But, in the final outcome, Withers refused to call the deal off, and yesterday the action was begun to have the contract set aside.

CAHUENGA ROAD FUND.

GRAND JURY INVESTIGATES.

The grand jury has been inquiring into the affairs of the Cahuenga Road District, shown by The Times several weeks ago, when it was told that Supervisor Graham had about $25,000 to the credit of his road district last year and had spent the entire amount this year, and with outstanding debts and expenses running along that would probably result in his successor being placed in an unpleasant position after he takes his seat next year.

Graham was censured by the last grand jury for keeping such a large amount of money on hand, when the roads were in need of repair; but since then $26,134.94 has been expended and between $5000 and $6000 worth of work done that has yet to be paid for. While no charges of misappropriation have been made, rumors were more or less rife that for the purpose of making a political campaign the pay rolls were more or less stuffed. The Board of Supervisors has adopted a resolution holding up all warrants for work in the district until an investigation can be made. Dist.-Atty. Fredericks is investigating the details of the expenditures during the period of time between January 1 and October 1 of this year.

ELECTION CHALLENGED.

FOUR DIRECTORS SUED.

H. H. Davenport, who sets out that he is a stockholder in the Tropico Water Company, has begun suit against W. G. Glassell, Ralph Rogers, W. B. Rogers and M. E. Cary to oust them from their positions as directors of the water company.

The plaintiff claimed that at the annual meeting, held on October 8, each of the directors named received 1526½ votes, but that as none of them were stockholders they were not eligible for election. He alleges that, on the other hand, Hugh Glassel, E. W. Richardson, D. Griswold, C. Cormack and A. W. Collins were not only stockholders and eligible, but received the highest votes. Davenport wants the court to take cognizance of the matter and determine if the men now in office are not usurping the position of a board of directors.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

FRIENDS INTERVENE. W. B. Warner and his wife, the unfortunate couple who tried to commit suicide at Nordhoff, and who were brought to the city and charged as being insane, were examined before Judge Gibbs yesterday. The Insanity Commission did not find that either Mr. or Mrs. Warner is insane, but the husband was sent with his own consent to the County Hospital for two weeks for treatment. Mrs. Warner is being cared for by the Ladies of the Maccabees. Extreme poverty was the cause that prompted suicide.

GOT FIVE YEARS. Clarence H. Bray, who pleaded guilty to stealing a mare belonging to D. Hayman on July 20, was sentenced to five years at Folsom by Judge Smith. The defendant's wife and baby were in court and the District Attorney's office was willing, for their sakes, that as short a sentence as possible should be given. But Judge Smith said that there was no use talking, that Bray was a bad man, a graduate of Whittier, and had served a term in the State's prison, and that it would be useless to waste sympathy on him.

CARRIED THE DOPE. Joe Bennett pleaded guilty to having passed morphine into the City Jail, but as he was the catspaw of one Frank Howe, he was allowed to go free on probation for two years. Howe, who also pleaded guilty, was sent to Folsom for four years. Howe, it appeared, was serving a six months' term in the City Prison, and had done a short term at San Quentin before.

TOOK THE WATCH. Frank Lawrence pleaded guilty to petit larceny, having stolen a watch from C. W. Harris in a grading camp near Redondo. He got ninety days in jail.

EXPENSIVE SHOES. J. M. Glass, a recent arrival in the State, stole a pair of shoes from a lodging-house at No. 200 San Pedro street on October 11, and yesterday pleaded guilty to burglary. He said that he came here from El Paso with a man named Murphy, and that meeting him a day or so after their arrival in the city, his friend pointed out the lodging-house and casually mentioned that he was rooming there. Next day the two again met, and on comparing finances, neither one had a cent. Murphy told Glass that he had a spare pair of shoes at the lodging-house, and that if he, Glass, would go down there and get them, he was willing to sell them to raise $1. Glass took the shoes, and he in turn was taken. The matter was continued by Judge Smith until Tuesday to permit of further inquiry.

WEALTHY BACHELOR. Alfred Guillou yesterday filed a petition for probate of the will of the late George Gregg, who died on October 13. The deceased was 68 years of age at the time of his death, and was a bachelor. His estate is of considerable value, the personal property alone being valued at $100,000, and the real property at least $3000. Brothers and a sister in the East and nieces residing in Berlin and Hamburg are legatees under the will.

WANTS DAMAGES. E. H. Richter has begun suit against the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway Company to recover $20,500 as damages for injuries sustained. On August 13, plaintiff avers, he was a passenger on a car from Sunnyside to Los Angeles, and a collision occurred, in which he received a blow in the face and was struck over the head and spine with a quantity of wreckage. His eyes were injured, he claims, and his jaws so displaced that they will never again be normal.

MRS. TORRANCE FOUND DRUNK.

CLAIMS SHE'S COUSIN OF MRS. POTTER PALMER.

Woman Who Seeks Police Help Falls Into Toils Later on Charge Her Alleged Enemies Made When Accused of Kidnaping Her Boy. Druggist Illegally Sells Medicine.

Mrs. Nanon Torrance, who claims to be a cousin of Mrs. Potter of Chicago, and also maintains that her son was kidnaped from her a short time ago, paid a $3 fine in police court for drunkenness yesterday. Mrs. Torrance had made a previous appearance about the Police Station, not as a prisoner, but seeking aid.

The woman comes from Sausalito, and it is claimed by the authorities that her son was taken from her a week ago because she abused him and was constantly under the influence of liquor. She has money—not a great deal, but enough to maintain herself.

It was soon after her arrival from the northern town that Mrs. Torrance made her first appearance in the station as a suppliant. She told her story, sufficiently bizarre to give her a bit of yellow newspaper notoriety. On the strength of it she posed as an injured individual.

Then came the arrest for drunkenness Friday night. Conviction in court followed yesterday, and Mrs. Torrance paid her fine without protest.

Three Stores Filled With Fall Fabrics

LET US SHOW YOU WHY

you can get B. & K. strictly up-to-date garments at prices no higher than first-class ready-made cost you.

Retail Clothiers pay the factory men a big profit on the finished product. The factory men, having paid the jobber of the fabric an advance on the price that the weavers set—these profits, when added to the retail clothiers', make it THREE PROFITS before you wear the garments.

The B. & K. system of buying for three busy stores makes it possible for us to deal directly with the mills and save these intermediate profits, which go into expert workmanship and artistic cutting, producing the highest grade of men's tailor-made and made-for-you garments, obtained at ready-made dealers' prices. QUESTION FOR THE PARENTS.

Where Are Your Children After School?

May Be in Danger if You Do Not Know.

Committee Will Look Into the Subject.

Fathers and mothers of Los Angeles, where are your children after school hours?

Do you know where your high school boys and girls spend the afternoons after school is out? Do they report at home as soon as the car will take them there, or do they get in just in time for the dinner hour?

Do you realize the supreme importance of such knowledge on your part? It is not a case where ignorance is bliss. Such ignorance may mean the life-long destruction of your promising boy, or of your fair daughter, just blooming into womanhood.

A note of warning is soon to be sounded to the parents of every boy and girl of high school age in this city, and to the parents of every down-town school pupil to be on their guard in this grave and vital matter. The revelations which may accompany this warning will make those interested pale with horror, and will probably bring indignant denial until the bare facts are found to speak for themselves.

A committee composed of the best-known and most influential women in Los Angeles has existed ever since the beginning of the last school term for the purpose of throwing around these young girls and boys, in whom are centered the bright hopes of the city's future, all the safeguards possible. The committee has worked in secret up to the present time, but a meeting was held during the past week in the Chamber of Commerce, at which a Times representative was present.

The members were engaged with a report of the investigations carried on last year, these forming the basis on which to shape a course of action for the present term. The initial step is to reach the parents of the city with a strong appeal for vigilance over their children.

CAROUSING IN SALOON.

The formation of this committee was brought about in the following manner: The husband of one of the members was searching for a young man who was about to lose his position on account of drinking. The quest for the young man took his would-be rescuer into a saloon on Second street. He went into the back rooms of the saloon and was horrified to find it nearly full of school boys and girls with their school books and straps. These rooms have since been done away with by the crusade carried on last spring against such places, but prior to that they were filled with these young creatures.

The youth for whom this man was searching was also in the saloon. He was with a woman of unmistakable stamp, drinking and carousing, and there was trouble in dragging him away. The woman approached the would-be deliverer, and what followed is only published in the interest of the city's purity and righteousness, and because the earnest women who are working to better matters wish to arouse the parents of Los Angeles to the true conditions which they must face.

"You are a nice looking man," said the abandoned creature. "You come back here this evening," and going close to him she whispered: "I know the nicest little girl who would just suit you." To the man's utter horror and unbelief, she mentioned the name of the school girl daughter of one of his best friends.

The horrid inference was like a blow in the face. The man could not credit such a thing, but he went home and enlisted his wife's assistance in finding out the truth of the matter, before he even breathed such suggestions to the girl's father. His wife is a beautiful and much-admired woman in Los Angeles, and for a long time was president of the child study circle. She lent her aid with a will.

SAVING ONE GIRL.

Stationed where she could cover the back entrance of the saloon with her eyes, she kept watch the next afternoon, and just as dusk was falling she saw this lovely looking girl, school books under her arm, emerge from that ante-room of destruction.

The girl was saved and that committee was formed to protect the school boys and girls of Los Angeles. The lady who started it has only sons, and some one said to her "Oh, you do not need to worry, you have only boys."

"I could have struck her," said the enraged mother, "my boys' characters are just as precious to me as those of any mother's daughter in the world. I make it my business to know where they spend their time, and it behooves me to do so, when the poolrooms and billiard halls are kindergartens of crime which are debauching so many of our boys."

"I never let my boys know that I doubt their word in any particular," continued this wise mother, "but if there is any question of it in my mind I find out for myself whether they are telling me the truth."

What the members of this committee wish to impress upon the parents of this city is this: It is your business to know where your sons and your daughters spend their time.

TOO MUCH LAXITY.

"There is too much softness and laxity in the bringing up of boys and girls of today," said a committee member whose large experience on the Juvenile Court board has been of great value in this work. "The truth is," she continued, "the parents are too often off having a good time for themselves, and too much occupied with outside matters to guard their children."

A particular instance of this was found by the officer of the Humane Society one night last week.

Two young girls and two boys between 14 and 16 years of age were just going home from a theater, when the officer stopped them.

"Don't you know you ought to be off the streets at this hour?" he asked. He sent the boys home, and took the girls home himself. Their house was dark, and the mother was not there, so the officer remained with the girls awhile, and presently there came a messenger with a hurried note from their mother, saying she had gone out with an automobile party, and would not be back until very late. The poor little girls locked themselves in, according to the officer's direction, and waited until that mother came home.

Another instance of this sort was an open secret among several of the schools last year. It was whispered from pupil to pupil, and those too well brought up to have anything to do with the crowd involved, at least knew of its existence, and discussed its doings among themselves.

FOUND IN THE PARK.

It was this: A family living near Westlake Park includes two exceedingly pretty young daughters, school girls. The parents were accustomed formerly to making flying trips about the country. Very delightful for the parents, but these girls were left unchaperoned and unprotected for several nights out of a week. The girls were popular, their girl freinds frequently came and spent the night there, the boys would come to call in the evening, and there were gay doings. One night at 3 a.m. in Westlake Park, the policeman detailed there found this young crowd. The officer knew the father of the girls quite well, and they were not brought up in court. The parents were informed, and their eyes opened. They were amazed, and could scarcely credit their senses, but all the while the boys and girls were gossiping about these things, and it did a great amount of harm it is believed.

Parents need not congratulate themselves that their grammar school children are aloof from these dangers. The following is an incident that happened at one of the nicest grammar schools in the city last spring. The lady who told it at the committee meeting was president of the Mothers' Circle of the school.

CREATURES OF PREY.

A pretty, well-dressed young woman came to an entertainment at the school and was cordially waited upon by the daintily-gowned eighth-grade girls in charge of the refreshments. The young woman chatted with the girls, told them where her house was, that she had recently come to live in the neighborhood, and that she was very lonely, and would like to have the girls visit her, she would take them out in her machine.

The outcome of the subsequent and innocent-seeming acquaintance with this woman was eight separate attempts, made by her and a man companion, to lure these young girls to destruction at her home.

One mother, almost crazed that her child should have been approached in such a fashion, and fearing to tell the girl's father, went immediately to the president of the Child Study Circle and an investigation was begun. Seven other cases of the same nature were uncovered, but when the officers of the law were taken to the house the vile creatures of prey had flown.

The pastor of the Olivet Congregational Church took the matter up. He traced the dastardly couple to an entirely different school district, where they had rented another house and were endeavoring to work their devilish scheme in the same manner.

Still another, and one of the greatest, sources of danger are certain rooming-houses in the very heart of the city, where no questions are asked. It is known that boys and girls from the High School go to these places after school hours, and pass evenings there when their parents believe them to be at the theater or at each other's houses.

These dangers exist in every city for boys and girls, and especially for boys and girls left to their own devices. The police of this city know them, the police reporters know them, only the parents seem to be asleep.

The Baord of Education has provided earnest teachers and vigilant principals, but they cannot follow the children to their homes.

First Peasant: Say, what time is it?

Second Peasant: Look at the church clock.

First Peasant: That's what I'm doing. I can see it says 12. But is it midday or midnight?—[Bon Vivant.

Entering the shafthouse they ordered the two engineers to throw up their hands. They were heavily armed, and under their drawn weapons ordered the engineers to carry twenty-eight sacks of high-grade ore from the shafthouse to the wagon. After making the engineers load the wagon, the robbers drove off.

CANDIDATE ARRESTED.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—Counsel representing State Senator James P. Counsel at the same time entered a civil suit for slander against Emery, asking $250,000 damages.

The libel charges grew out of a speech delivered by Emery at Lebanon last Monday, in which he charged Senator McNichol with bribing Democratic members of the State Legislature in 1901 to vote for William T. Marshall of Pittsburgh for Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to make certain the reëlection of M. S. Quay to the United States Senate.

It is said to be the beginning of a war to the finish in this city between capital and labor.

NEWS OF THE MINES—Review of the Week's Diggings in the Southwest

LUCKY CALUMET THEY'D BUY.

AMALGAMATED COPPER COMPANY WANTS THIS MINE.

But Nordquist, Owning Controlling Interest, Refuses to Sell, Because He Has Firm Belief in Future of Property—Year Ago Stock Sold for Eight Cents a Share.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SPOKANE (Wash.) Oct. 17.—Amalgamated Copper, the greatest mining company in the world, has attempted to acquire a Coeur d'Alene property, the Lucky Calumet, in which many Los Angeles people are interested. John H. Nordquist, who holds absolute control of the Lucky Calumet, refused the offer, though it totaled more than half a million dollars for his share.

"Yes, the Amalgamated tried to buy the mine," said Mr. Nordquist. "Fred Greene of Butte, one of their experts, spent a week examining the property, and after he had returned to Butte, the company wrote me three letters trying to buy the mine.

"I did not accept, because I think it the biggest mine on the Snow Storm Hill, and that hill may soon be one of the greatest copper producing localities in the United States."

The Lucky Calumet company owns ten claims adjoining the Snowstorm mine on the west, and 4500 feet on the ledge, which has been opened over the whole length by cuts.

On the 1000-foot level of the Snowstorm mine adjoining, the ore body is 100 feet wide within 350 feet of Lucky Calumet ground. The ore is exceptionally rich in copper and silver. On September 10, the stock paid a $90,000 dividend. A year ago it was 8 cents a share. Much of Snowstorm stock is held in Los Angeles. A 1200-foot tunnel is now being driven to cut the Lucky Calumet vein at a depth of 800 feet.

Mr. Nordquist is the man who drove the long 1776-foot tunnel that made the Snowstorm a mine, taking in payment treasury stock when it had no market value. He has mined and prospected on the hill for nineteen years.

About 30,000 shares of Lucky Calumet were absorbed by the Los Angeles market this week at 45 cents a share.

TO COLONIZE SEARCHLIGHT.

PLANS FOR IRRIGATION OF THE PEACEFUL VALLEY.

Rich Soil, With Water, Will Become Suitable for Raising Potatoes, Onions and Cereals—Benson to Bring Homesteaders Into Valley—Thirty Thousand Acres Now Open.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SEARCHLIGHT (Nev.) Oct. 17.—"Full many a flower" that was "born to blush unseen," may soon have onions and potatoes for neighbors, if the plans of H. M. Benson for colonizing the Searchlight, or Peaceful Valley, do not go awry.

The town of Searchlight, noted as a mining center, will in that event become the center of distribution, as well as a fine market for the farm products which it is aimed to raise in the great stretch of rich valley land lying between the Crescent range and that upon which Searchlight is located.

There are 31,000 acres of government land there, open to entry, and a movement is on foot to bring a large number of homesteaders into the valley within a month. This week an oil rig will be at work boring eight-inch wells to secure water, which is the only element lacking to make the land ideal for farming.

If artesian wells are found in this process, there is no doubt that the valley will be a semi-tropical garden spot, but even with the natural rainfall, and with a well sufficient to supply all domestic needs, the rancher will be able to raise good crops of cereals and care for great numbers of hogs and cattle, which would be able to gain a luxurious living from the pastures of bunch grass, which is unusually tall and green in this country.

A company, composed of W. W. Padrick, Los Angeles, W. N. Sprague, Los Angeles, Daniel M. Ferguson of Oakland, and Mr. Benson, has been formed for the purpose of colonizing the valley, digging the wells and laying out a site for a tiny hamlet which would be a sort of agricultural suburb of Searchlight.

All Nevada will watch the progress of this movement with interest for there are millions of acres of government land similar, if not equal to, this in Searchlight valley and it is lying idle for want of irrigation facilities.

A year ago last June, H. M. Benson, son of a wealthy California rancher, who has been engaged in mining at Crescent, crossed the valley on foot, on his way to Searchlight, and was struck with the remarkable appearance of the soil. He found that it was alluvial, a sedimentary deposit caused by river action. A month later, he returned on horseback. He started northwest about thirty miles from Searchlight and looked over the whole valley carefully.

During his travels he became convinced that there was good soil all the way to the Colorado River. He conducted a series of experiments, planting wheat, barley, oats and timothy. This was in December and, in May, he cut samples of grain averaging four feet eight inches in height. In March, Burbank potatoes and silver-skin onions were planted and in July potatoes that averaged one and three-quarter pounds and silver-skin onions averaging three inches across, were exhibited.

Speaking of his agricultural attempts, Mr. Benson said:

"I experimented with Tokay grapes and, in September, planted some cuttings which at once took root and will produce splendid fruit at two years of age, with an average rainfall of seven inches. I am fully satisfied that the soil of the Searchlight Valley is adapted to cereals and staple commodities such as onions and potatoes. Also this valley shows bunch grass averaging three-quarters of a ton an acre and at least two feet nine inches tall at almost any spot between the divide and the city of Searchlight.

"There is a surprising rainfall over this country. From November 15 to July 1 last, it was fourteen inches in the Searchlight valley, while in the San Joaquin Valley it averages only seven inches during a season.

"Our plan to bring a colony here is no idle dream.

"There are two classes of government land open to entry, No. 1 and No. 2. The first is land reached by a railroad and may be taken up for an entry fee of $16 and $2.25 an acre at the end of fourteen months, providing the requirements as to residence and tilling of the soil have been observed. The second may be taken up the same way, with the exception that it is cheaper on account of having no railroad. The entry fee is the same but the cost per acre to the homesteader is but $1.25. The land which we are colonizing is in the second class.

"We have already laid out a townsite about fourteen miles west of Searchlight, which will be plainly visible from the latter across the valley. Our intention is to plant yucca trees and Spanish needles, which are natives of the desert, all along the main street. Lots on the principal business thoroughfare are to be 25x150 feet to a twenty-foot alley. All other streets are to be 100 feet in the clear, with lots 50x150 to twenty-foot alley. A city park, a church and a school site will be given free. The waterworks will be a private institution.

"My associates have done me the honor to name the town Benson. A branch road from the Salt Lake has already been surveyed to it."

The colonization of the Searchlight Valley and the opening up of the rich lands there will add much to the present importance of Searchlight.

This portion of Lincoln county is making wonderful progress in other directions also. At Eldorado Cañon, a few miles from here, Denver and eastern capitalists are developing rich silver deposits, while within twelve miles in the other direction, near the Colorado River, there has been a recent find of gold ledges running from $200 to the ton, into the thousands.

Three miles east of Searchlight, the Bambergers have purchased some property which will be at once developed.

UNIONS ENTER MINING CAMPS.

WOULD RETARD THEIR GROWTH BY BRUTAL METHODS.

"Times" Subscription Man Threatened With Ride on Rail—Despite Labor Organizations, Signs of Prosperity Are Everywhere—Rapid Development of New Districts.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BULLFROG (Nev.) Oct. 19.—The labor union is retarding the development of this district. Whatever there may be of stagnation here, at Gold Center, Rhyolite and Beatty is due, in large measure, to the nefarious methods of the unions. Wages have been pushed to a price so high as to become an absolute bar to prosperity and the proper development of the country.

The wage scale ranges from $8 for an eight-hour day for carpenters to $6 for cooks, $5 for waiters and miners and $4 for dishwashers. At Beatty a woman who conducts a restaurant employed an old man as dishwasher. She well knew that he was physically unable to earn the price paid. Finally she told the man that he must go. He pleaded with her and said he could find no work elsewhere. She agreed to board and lodge him if he would attend to her chickens and make himself generally useful. Union sympathizers fell upon him and pounded him unmercifully. They told him they would teach him not to "scab" and labor under the scale.

At Rhyolite a solicitor for The Times succeeded this week in securing twenty-three subscribers to the daily edition. These names represent the substantial business element of the community, but wherever the solicitor went about the camp his steps were hounded by walking delegates of the organized gang. As he passed along the street remarks of this nature were made to him: "There goes the —— —— ——;" "We will get him yet."

The first regular passenger train on the Las Vegas and Tonopah Railroad, a branch of the Salt Lake Route, pulled into Beatty this morning. Beatty will be the terminus of the road for several weeks, as considerable heavy rock work is to be done before the grade can be completed to Rhyolite, five miles away. This circuit of the cañons places the road in close communication with what promises to become the producing mines of the district. A spur is now being graded to the Montgomery-Shoshone property. In this neighborhood wherever a hole is sunk to a depth of ten or twelve feet there is an abundance of purest water. Beatty is perhaps the best watered town of the desert.

The grade for "Borax" Smith's Tonopah and Tidewater road has been thrown up for a mile or more at Gold Center, and the survey stakes for the Goldfield line are to be seen among the clumps of sage brush and cactus.

All of Beatty's citizens are today busy tacking up flags and bunting in preparation for "Railroad Day." The residents of Rhyolite will join in the entertainment of the guests from Los Angeles and Salt Lake. One of the incidents of the first day will be a trip into the great mine tunnel at Gold Center, where everybody will be invited to select his own quartz and pan it himself.

On Tuesday, there will be drilling contests with such alluring cash prizes as to attract the best talent of Bullfrog. There will also be band concerts and an automobile excursion to Rhyolite. The day's festivities will close with a typical miners' ball in the evening.

One of the interesting sights of Beatty is the arrival and departure of the desert flyer—an automobile which runs to Goldfield. The distance is seventy-seven miles; the fare, $25; time consumed, from five to six hours.

An active stampede is now on toward the Greenwater country. This is just over the line in California, being in the Funeral range and within the shadow of Death Valley. The main outfitting point is Johnnie Siding, a station on the Beatty Railroad, forty-seven miles down the line toward Las Vegas. The railroad has named it Amargosa. There the stages and freight teams enter upon the long trek. The fare is $16, and the freight rate is on a basis of $60 per 1000 feet for lumber.

It is a copper proposition, and recent assays show 47 per cent. of the metal. There is more activity there than there has been at any new camp during recent years. Four townsites are already touching elbows, and "Borax" Smith's railroad expects to be into the camp early in the new year. Greenwater is forty-eight miles from Amargosa. Greenwater, Ramsey, Clark and Kountze are bidding for popular favor, each seeking to be the railroad center. Copperfield is also a budding prospect.

Saloons are there in plenty, and their doors never close.

But water is another question, and it is quite an item in this modern camp. It costs four-bits for enough water for a morning ablution. For that very reason washing is tabooed at Copperfield. Water costs $7.50 per barrel, and sometimes the price jumps to $10. It all comes by team from Ash Meadows and Furnace Creek.

At Greenwater things are not so cheap as at Beatty, or Los Angeles. The toll on a plain order of ham and eggs is $1.

At Beatty or Rhyolite a fairly good meal can be had for from 50 cents to $1. Newspapers cost 10 cents apiece.

Yesterday Farmer Taylor drove into Beatty from the Owens Lake, bringing coops filled with chickens. He had traveled ninety miles in two days to market them. The chickens brought $1.25 each.

At a little railway siding, near Rose's Wells, last night, a Tonopah mining man and a prospector staggered into camp. Their lips were parched and their tongues were swollen. They had narrowly escaped death. Amply provisioned, as they thought, they had started a few days before, with two mules, to a point seventy-five miles into the heart of the desert. On the way home they missed the water holes. There was nothing for the burros, and the poor beasts were abandoned to their fate. The men's sole nourishment during the last two days and one night, consisted of six lemons and one gallon of water.

LAMB BECOMES COPPER KING.

ANOTHER ROMANCE GLIMMERS IN FUNERAL RANGE.

Young Man Goes Into Mountains With Small Capital, Stakes Out Claims and Sells for Big Sum—Located on Spot Adjoining the Mines Owned by Schwab and Heinze.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Oct. 17.—Romance still glimmers about the melancholy crags where the Funeral Range shoots toward the heavens from the wastes of Death Valley. Among these crags has just arisen a new king of copper. One short year ago he was eating slumgullion, and was clad in dungarees among the shacks of Rhyolite.

The name of this new copper king is Clarence H. Lamb, and he can feast on pheasants and flamingoes' hearts for three years before he will have turned thirty. He looks like Napoleon, and talks like a bashful boy. His first extravagance, after turning his hard-won bonanzas into double eagles, was a new pipe; his second, a new carriage for his new baby; his third, the handsomest rope of pearls for his wife that he could order from Tiffany's. He still wears corduroys and tucks his trousers into brogans.

Lamb was born in a small town about sixty miles south of Chicago. When he was 4 years old his parents took him to Lincoln, Neb., where he lived until he was 16. After leaving the grammar school, he learned the jeweler's trade.

When he was 21, he made a flying trip to Cripple Creek, discovered that his knowledge of mining was a joke, and became a jeweler again. Upon leaving Cripple Creek, he circled to Los Angeles, by way of eSattle.

One day when in Pasadena he promised himself that he would return there, sooner or later, and build himself a splendid home. That promise will be fulfilled this winter. When he had accumulated a capital of $2500 he married and went to Nevada to get rich. Now he is said to have a million.

When Lamb came into this State, the railroad that now runs to Goldfield from Reno ended at Tonopah, and he had to do the last lap in a stage. Among his fellow-passengers on the stage was a chap named Rosencranz, who knew all about the restaurant business, but who was dead broke. Lamb liked the restaurant man, and, when they reached Goldfield, he suggested that his dollars and the Rosenkranz experience might be profitably combined in a restaurant. The pair accordingly started what was known as the Oxford Restaurant, where their gross receipts kept barely ahead of expenses for several months. They paid their waiters $10 a day and their cook $20.

Tiring of the restaurant struggle, and glad to get out of it with most of his original capital, Lamb went still further into the wilderness, this time to Rhyolite. Here he dallied in small claims, got an occasional rake-off from a lucky grub-stake, and pottered along, somehow, till the 24th of March, last year. Then he heard how Fred Berney and Phil Creaser, grub-staked by Dennis Clark of Spokane, had made a big copper strike in the Funeral Range, just over the California border. He thereupon suggested to his partner, William J. Cleary, on March 25th, that they should go to the Funeral Range and get a little copper of their own.

The road leading to the crests of the Funeral Range was over a circuitous and desolate trail cut by the twenty-mule teams that hauled the borax out of Death Valley. Lamb and his partner reached Furnace Creek ranch, in three days, in a wagon drawn by two horses and laden with barrels of water. Then for two days they toiled steadily upward. The horses fell sick, the water supply was lost and the men suffered great hardships. They were dying of thirst when they came upon water, green with copperas.

That was how the town now building not far away from that spot came to be called Greenwater, and that was how, also, Lamb and Cleary discovered the trail that led to the big copper strike where Patrick Clark of Spokane is now extracting so much wealth and near where Charles M. Schwab, Frederick Heinze and "Borax" Smith are doing likewise.

Lamb and Cleary promptly erected the monuments that marked eight claims snug up against the Clark ground. They called these claims, four of them, the Anxiety, and the other four, the Copper Shoes. And so it happened that when the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company of Goldfield bought the Anxiety and Copper Shoes, a week or two later, Lamb suddenly found himself a plutocrat, with Cleary for a running mate. Lamb says that he made only one mistake. For if he had put off the Sullivan offer for a little while, he could have been just twice as rich as he is.

Death Valley

Fortune awaits those who invest in Death Valley. The Avawatz Mountain Gold Mining Co., with three rich claims in this wonderful gold district, offers shares at the low figure of 10c per share, the par value of which is $1.00. Ore assays $104.75 to the ton. If you are wise, get in on this. It will bring certain rewards for all who take shares in this company.

LOU DILLON
Goldfield

The production of ore from the great Goldfield Mohawk mine, which now aggregates from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 per month, sets a new mark for bullion output from a gold mine. This, in connection with the yield of gold from the Goldfield Combination, which is paying 240 per cent. per annum dividends, the Goldfield Jumbo, Goldfield Florence, Goldfield Red Top, Goldfield Silver Pick and others that are contiguous, and on the same great vein system, stamps the immediate territory as the richest in all the world. The Mohawk veins all trend westward, and the properties that are situated directly west of the Mohawk are the Silver Pick and Lou Dillon. The tremendous mine output from this group of bonanzas has doubled the market value of Silver Pick stock in two months and has been responsible for the purchase of the Lou Dillon by a syndicate of Nevada capitalists.

* * * * * * * * *

A company has been formed under the title, "LOU DILLON GOLDFIELD MINING COMPANY," to take over and operate the property. Exhaustive mine development has been begun with a view to exploring the great Mohawk series of veins where they cross the Lou Dillon. Able mining engineers declare emphatically that they undoubtedly traverse Lou Dillon ground. Though representing one of the largest cash transactions of the year, the price paid for the Lou Dillon was exactly one-half what the property could have been turned for two days later. The Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company is incorporated for $1,000,000, divided into one million shares, par value $1. Three hundred and fifty thousand shares have been placed in the treasury. For immediate development the unsold portion of 250,000 shares are offered at 30 cents per share, representing one of the most extraordinary investment opportunities of the year.

The Lou Dillon property, comprising over 19 acres, adjoins the Silver Pick estate on the West. It is not more than 1200 feet from the great Mohawk and is only 800 feet from the Combination mine which is earning 240 per cent. per annum dividends.

Developments of recent date on the Silver Pick have been of sufficient importance to give great value to the Lou Dillon, aside from its contiguity to the Mohawk. At least eight lessees are actively engaged in developing Pick ground and are making a mine showing that indicates that the property will soon be on even terms with the great bonanza mines of the districe.

On a lease, which is within a few hundred feet of the Dillon, several veins of high grade ore have been encountered that carry average values of from $70 to $340 per ton. Sinking is being done as rapidly as possible in order to open these veins at the same depth at which the great Mohawk ore bodies were disclosed. According to their pitch and trend, they come together in the Lou Dillon ground and, with every degree of certainty possible it is predicted that when they meet they will form a tremendous deposit of high grade ore.

Plans have already been perfected and work begun in the thorough development of the estate of the Lou Dillon Goldfield Mining Company. A 60-horsepower hoisting plant and other mining machinery have been ordered and will be installed at once. In the meantime sinking is in progress on company account, and by lessees. No less than four ledges of gold ore have been exposed on Lou Dillon territory. These all apex within the boundaries of the property, a fact that is of first importance, as it precludes the possibility of legal controversy with reference to extra-lateral rights, and gives the company the ownership without possible question to all the ore bodies that lie beneath the surface of the claim. Several of these are making history for the Silver Pick property, and have made such a great mine showing that Silver Pick stock is now in strong demand at 90 to 95 cents per share. They all center on Lou Dillon ground and pitch into Silver Pick territory, where they have been opened up extensively, showing high grade shipping values in numerous places. That the Lou Dillon management will encounter them in the present plan of development, and open one of the great bonanza gold mines of the camp is practically a certainty, based upon examination made by the most expert mining authorities of the district.

A comparison of prices between Lou Dillon-Goldfield and that of shares in adjoining properties will show that this is one of the most extraordinary investment opportunities presented in recent years in Southern Nevada. The great Mohawk, which lies well within 1200 feet of the Lou Dillon, is quoted on the Exchanges of San Francisco, Goldfield and New York at $3.85 to $4.00 per share; Red Top, the next door neighbor to the Mohawk, is in firm demand at $1.50 to $1.60 per share; Silver Pick, which lies immediately next to the Lou Dillon, commands a price ranging from 85c to 95c per share according to recent market fluctuations. Other stocks representing holdings in mining properties situated in the immediate vicinity of the Lou Dillon, are quoted from 45c to $3.00 per share. Of one, the Combination, which is now paying 240 per cent. per annum dividends, you cannot now buy any stock at all. The holders refuse to name a price.

The price at which the first treasury offering of Lou Dillon may be purchased does not more than represent the actual value of the property as a "good prospect." We realize that in the purchase of the Lou Dillon we secured an exceedingly valuable piece of mining ground at a very low figure. And in line with our policy to put our clients in with us on what is termed a ground floor basis, we are offering a limited allotment of treasury shares in the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company, at a price that attaches to the security an unusually attractive speculative, as well as investment, feature.

The President of the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company is Hon. John Sparks, Governor of the State of Nevada. The Vice-President is John D. Campbell, famous as the man who took a million and a half dollars worth of ore out of the Goldfield Jumbo in less than a year from a lease covering a hundred lineal feet of ground, and famed as President of the Stray Dog and Indian Camp Manhattan Mining Companies. The Treasurer is L. M. Sullivan of the L. M. Sullivan Trust Company, and the Secretary is James E. Degan, cashier of the Nye and Ormsby County Bank of Goldfield. These men stand for everything that is good and clean in mining and finance, and any company with which they identify themselves is entitled to the support of the most conservative investors.

* * * * * * * * *

Few, if any, of the prominent mining promotions of recent years from Southern Nevada have embodied such unlimited possibilities as the Lou Dillon-Goldfield Mining Company stock. In fact, the possibilities of an investment in the issue are without limit. Less than a year ago Mohawk was selling at 25 to 30 cents per share; today it is quoted above $4.00; six months ago Silver Pick was a neglected issue around 20 cents per share; it is an active trader today around 90 cents per share; Red Top was two years ago in little demand at 16 to 20 cents per share; today it cannot be purchased for less than $1.60 per share; the same is true of a great many stocks representing interests in companies owning neighboring property. Lou Dillon-Goldfield is offered today at 30 cents per share, this being the initial subscription price, and representing not more than the actual value of the company's holdings as they stand practically undeveloped, within a few months Lou Dillon should be in exceptional demand at $1.00 or more per share; just as surely as can possibly be predicted. The Lou Dillon is believed to have the continuation of the great Mohawk vein system; it has proved veins of gold ore; it has location directly on the trend of the greatest gold-bearing veins that have ever been uncovered in the history of the world of mining. Able management and aggressive development are the only essentials required to make the Lou Dillon one of the great gold-producing mining bonanzas of the country. These have been provided and the future of the property is assured beyond cavil.

* * * * * * * * *

There were a great many who failed to secure Eagle's Nest Fairview at the subscription price, owing to delays in sending in reservations. That issue was over-subscribed 600,000 shares in two weeks. To these we beg to say that equally as great an opportunity is presented in Lou Dillon-Goldfield. Immediately after the subscriptions on Eagle's Nest closed, the stock took a sharp jump of 7 to 10 points. Beyond any question it should continue in its upward movement until it is selling at par before the year's end. The same should prove true of Lou Dillon-Goldfield, and we urge investors to wire reservations and on receiving telegraphic notice of allotment of stock to follow immediately with remittances in full. This will be the last offering of Lou Dillon, and those who do not order Lou Dillon-Goldfield subscription stock at once will miss one of the greatest investment opportunities of the year. Subscriptions for less than 100 shares cannot be considered. Reservations will be considered in the order in which they are received up to the time the full treasury allotment is subscribed for, and the right is reserved to refuse or cut down any late order. Use the wires.

HE WORLD'S PLATINUM.

California Is Now Starting in to Produce Most of it—Hitherto We Have Depended Upon Russia—More Precious Metal Than Gold.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ASHINGTON., Oct. 14.—The government Bureau of Mines declares that California will be producing the bulk of the supply of platinum, which be called the most in- of the metals, having its way into so great a number electrical and scientific uses. At its present price, it is metal par excellence, considerably more than gold. cause of the rise in the platinum is the recent war and Japan," said Dr. Day, chief of the Bureau "Nearly the whole world's of the metal has been derived from mines in the Ural where much of the work by political exiles. But, stands at $28—three times the price of seventeen years ago.

Platinum finds its most important uses in the electrical arts. It is largely employed in connection with both telegraph and telephone, and every incandescent light must have a small piece of platinum wire to carry the current to the carbon filament inside of the glass bulb. The metal is utilized in X-ray work, and to no small extent in photography. Being proof against corrosion by air, and able to defy attack by any single acid (though it can be dissolved in a mixture of nitric and hydrochloric acids,) it is admirably adapted for all sorts of scientific apparatus—especially such apparatus as is employed in chemical laborotories, where its power to resist high heat renders it an admirable material for crucibles and various other receptacles.

in the price of platinum has been astonishing. In when it was only $9 an syndicate made an attempt the market, buying up the of the Ural mines for ahead, and setting out all the loose scrap plati- world. There proved to of the latter than had upon, however, and so bubble burst, the metal, which had soared to $11 in 1892. In 1897 and since then risen, until today it high that the hottest blast furnace will not affect it. It may be fused, however, at 3300 deg. Fahrenheit, in an electric furnace. As ductile as gold, it may be beaten out into plates less than a thousandth of an inch in thickness, or may be drawn into wire sixty-millionths of an inch in diameter. Such wires, known as "spider lines," are employed in telescopes, the tubes of which, by the way, are sometimes lined with a thin film of platinum. That the metal is largely used in the manufacture of surgical instruments is well known, of course, and its high price is likely to increase its vogue for watch chains and other articles of jewelry.

Away back in the year 1736 a Spanish traveler and scientist named Antonio d'Ulloa came across a new white metal in the gold-bearing sands of the Rio Pinto, in South America. Evidently it was not silver, because it was twice as heavy as the latter. It was not so white; it did not take on so high a polish, it could not be worked so easily, and it was far less abundant. So its discoverer named it "platina," meaning "little silver."

A substance with such remarkable properties—heavier than gold (in fact, the heaviest of all metals,) and proof against corrosion and heat—could not fail to excite attention, and, in the long run, to find a steadily-increasing demand in the arts. Thus it comes about that platinum today is indispensable. Gold is a convenience, but the "little silver" is a necessity. For many years past mining experts have been looking for it all over the world, and trying to discover it "in place"—that is to say, in the original rocks of which it must have been part. But up to now no such discovery has been made. It is found only in river sands and beach sands which have been brought from a distance by streams.

In 1898 a sudden and urgent demand developed for osmium—a rare metal which was wanted for the manufacture of incandescent mantels for gas lights. This stimulated a search for platinum, owing to the fact that osmium is usually found where platinum occurs, and as a result, it was ascertained that the black sands of California and Oregon contained some platinum—though how much was not realized until recently. The sands of Del Norte county, and especially those of Hay Fork district of Trinity county, were discovered to be very rich; and along the Trinity River nuggets as much as a quarter of an inch in diameter were picked up.

Immense quantities of black sand have been thrown aside in heaps incidentally to mine for gold at numerous places on the Pacific Coast, and these accumulations will afford a profitable yield of platinum for many years to come. The method to be adopted for separating out the metal (based as it is upon scientific principles) is singularly different from that in use in the mines of the Urals, where the workers dig pits from fifteen to forty feet deep, until the level of "pay dirt" is struck, and thereupon drive tunnels in all directions. The material taken out (which consists of gravel carried down from the mountains ages ago) is washed in primitive mills, mostly by women—nearly two hundred cartloads being required to furnish one pound of platinum. In the placers thus described, by the way, are frequently found wonderful quartz crystals, the carving of which is performed with great skill by the Russians.

CRACKERJACK IS BOOMING.

ALMOST ENTIRE DISTRICT IS UNDER LOCATION.

Many Los Angeles Mining Men Interested in This Section, Which Was Discovered Less Than Year Ago—A Number of Rich Claims in Neighborhood—Townsite Platted.

About sixty miles northwest of Daggett, on the Santa Fé Railway, and a score or so of miles north of Silver Lake, a station on the Tonopah-Tidewater ("Borax" Smith) Railroad, now building, there is being developed the Crackerjack district, as it has been named after the principal property in it. It extends north from Silver Lake to Owl Peak, a distance of thirty-six miles, and its easterly edge joins Death Valley. The district is about as wide as it is long, and lies at an elevation of from 4200 to 4600 feet. It is located on the same mineral belt as Tonopah, Goldfield, Bullfrog and Greenwater. It is really the continuation of Greenwater.

"Cyclone" Wilson, the original locator of the Jumbo, one of Goldfield's most famous producers, discovered the Crackerjack region in December, 1905, and located what is known as the Beck & Wilson claim.

Although less than a year has elapsed since Wilson filed his location notices, almost the entire district is held now under location. These locations have not been made by "tenderfeet," but by practical mining men.

It is the unanimous testimony of these men that the district is generally and highly mineralized, and that development will place it among the world's most remarkable mineral areas. The Bullfrog miners declare that on the surface it carries more value and more promising indications of rich productiveness than are apparent in their own district, while the development to date indicates longevity most positively.

Gold, silver, copper and lead abound in this district. Tunnelling will be the principal form of development. Water has been discovered at five feet below the surface, and a community well is now being put down. Most of the ground of the district is held by Goldfield, Bullfrog and Los Angeles mining capitalists.

The Crackerjack Gold Mining Company, controlled by Los Angeles people, has four claims lying contiguously. On these claims there has been opened a 3-foot ledge or ore assaying $114, and a 2-foot ledge assaying $128. A shaft which is being sunk is all in ore. One blast in this shaft detached a chunk of hematite ore weighing ninety-four pounds and showing free gold on all sides. A tunnel is also being driven on this property, which will cut the hematite vein and give a depth of 200 feet from the apex. This tunnel continued almost 100 feet, should also cut a copper vein, averaging about 40 feet wide and carrying values of 2 per cent. on the surface.

Adjoining the Crackerjack property on the southeast is the Tom Boy claim, owned by John Anderson, A. H. Schliebetz of the Los Angeles Brewery, and L. A. W. Johnson of Los Angeles. It was located last January. A 14-foot hole has been sunk on this property. The depth of ore body here is shown by the fact that it crops out 200 feet below the surface in a cañon; the ore assays range up to $5000 per ton.

THOUSANDS OFFERED.

Just northwest of the Crackerjack's property are the claims of Capt. John Hargraves of Rhyolite, and formerly manager of the famous Anaconda mine at Butte, Mont. These claims show an 18-inch vein, carrying silver at the rate of 600 to 1300 ounces per ton. Capt. Hargraves has given a bond to sell his property at $35,000.

Fred Bender, also of Rhyolite, owns fifty to sixty claims, one a half mile east of the Crackerjack's claims, which show values of about $41 on the surface.

A little east of the Crackerjack's claims, Capt. McLaughlin (a retired sea captain,) has a claim in which the ore carries 15 per cent. of copper.

The Beck & Wilson claims, including the one originally located by "Cyclone" Wilson, adjoin the Crackerjack property on the north, and show an outcrop of ore 6 to 12 feet wide that can be traced for 3000 feet.

Facsimiles of some of the letters written by the smallest pupils in the schools of this city, illustrating the natural tendency toward spelling phonetically.

THE spelling reform, launched by the Simplified Spelling Board, with headquarters in New York, finds response in all the leading educators of Los Angeles. They are practically a unit in indorsing the movement, and in expressing the belief that a few years hence will see the proposed changes firmly adopted by American writers and American newspapers.

City Superintendent of Schools Moore is enthusiastic in his indorsement of the reform, but does not contemplate introducing the proposed changes into the city schools until they have been in a measure assimilated by the people.

"It has to come," said Dr. Moore yesterday. "It is the common-sense thing, and the 300 words suggested will come, with many more, in the course of a couple of years. I do not think President Roosevelt exceeded his authority in suggesting certain changes. Governments have always had to do with spelling reform. Why, the Roman emperors used to add letters to the alphabet, and take great liberties with it, as well. The Japanese are just now talking of adding the letters of a foreign alphabet to their language. We will not introduce the simplified spellings into the schools here until the changes have been more generally accepted, but eventually it will come to that."

The Simplified Spelling Board says that, "recognizing the conservatism of the peoples that speak English," it expects to make haste slowly, sees its most promising field in the schools, and claims that in the Middle West the 300 words have already been introduced in many cities. The board now numbers among its members President Jordan and two of the professors in Stanford.

Now that the ball has been started rolling, it is a question if it will ever stop until it has reached the bottom of a list, limited only by the English language. President Roosevelt is already credited with "batl," "muzl," "ruf," "sadl," "kild" and others in the same line, in use in the documents of the War Department.

HE BEATS THE PRESIDENT.

Los Angeles has at least one pupil in the public schools after Mr. Roosevelt's own heart. He wrote a letter to mythical Ernest Thompson, at Erieville, N. Y., telling how he spent New Year. This is part of it:

"We went hunting and we kild for rabbit, and we kild ten squirrel, and we kild one oul and ten snipe."

Barring the size of the story, this lad is entitled to a medal for suggesting one of the President's famous phonetics, even before the latter thought of it.

In the same series of letters, a girl touches on military terms as follows:

"I suppose you remember those sham batls we used to have, when Hal chaised you, the time I fell throu the ice."

These two examples indicate remarkable intuition on the part of President Roosevelt, as to how a child would naturally spell two of the words suggested by himself.

PLENTY PUR SPELRS.

Many a felo wil welcum the nu wa because he has had trubl hiding his lack of nolej of the old speling-buk methud.

It is no secret that many well-educated men—authors, scientists, and even teachers—can't spell according to the book, if their lives depended on it. There may have been a time when they could, but that was before they were too busy to think about how any certain word is spelled. They finally forgot, and didn't care.

"Phonetic spelling is the only kind that will stay with a man," said a well-known educator yesterday. "Experience and observation prove that we become uncertain in our orthography of rarely-used words, and after a quarter of a century I find that some of the more ordinary ones have taken on a mistiness in my memory."

"If spelling really counts for anything," said a man connected with a publishing house, "we have had manuscripts of high school graduates and teachers and principals of city schools, that were scandalous. Their orthography, as measured by the recognized forms, was not worthy a pupil in the eighth grade of the public schools."

Certainly, many people of mature years will refuse to accept any of the simplifications, as taking undue liberty with their pet words, just as we still occasionally find a person who writes "cheque," "colour," "plough," but the rising generation is more susceptible.

The small boy began this spelling reform so long ago that the "mind of man runneth not to the contrary," and Artemus Ward, Josh Billings, James Whitcomb Riley and others of equal fame have kept up a lively play on "simplifications" of their own invention.

Through the courtesy of the office of the City Superintendent of Schools, The Times was given access to a series of letters written by pupils of the lower grades, to a mythical personage named Ernest Thompson, in response to a letter from him, asking Tom Denton to tell him how they spent New Year.

HOW THE CHILDREN SPELL.

Many of the boys and girls may recognize sentences from their letters, but nobody else knows. It is done not to ridicule what they have written, and not simply to amuse the reader, but to call attention to the naturalness, in children, of some of the phonetic words that have been suggested, and also to the desirability of all the simplicity that can be given without too great sacrifice.

"When I was about to go to bead I her the engion coming, and I got my weal and went," says a boy in referring to a fire at the close of his day at the beach.

"Lisen," writes a girl impressively; "I have never sen snow, but I have sen ice, because I have sen it on ice waggons."

"It must be fun to through sno balls and slid on the ice," cries another lassie, in glee.

A boy writes with tears in his voice: "You know I kept my skates to go skating on the river, but I got left; there was ice on the horse through for a few mornings, not thicker than paper. The river is about 25 feet wid."

This boy wants to go back: "It seams funey to go fisheing in winter time; I am youst of going skating. I don't like this cuntry; it never getes cold hear. I weather be in the snow micking snow balls. Thay don't now wate ice skates is hear."

"I wated about 2 hours," says another boy, telling of the Pasadena rose tournament. "First their came 12 polic on hoarse back, next came otomibeals decoratid with real flowers."

"I went over to Eastlake and scene the animals," declares another.

A small boy writes about "rost" potatoes, and the fun they had in a tent in the "eavning," when they took "to peaces" of wire and "rosted" meat in the fire.

One boy has a particular faculty for putting extra letters in his words. He writes "watter," "sorray," "slead" and "going beack."

The list might be carried out ad infinitum, showing that in spite of all the efforts to teach the children how to spell, there is a woeful lack of uniformity.

FRANCIS CONSERVATIVE.

Prof. John H. Francis, principal of the Polytechnic High School, expresses himself as in favor of simplifying the spelling, but he is more conservative than some others. He said:

"Yes, I am in favor of the spelling reform, but I'll tell you; we have put in a great many years teaching the children of this country to spell the English language as she is, and it is a serious matter to begin tearing it up at so rapid a rate. It would have been far better for all authorities to have first gotten together and agreed upon a small number of desirable changes, and after these had been generally adopted, take up others. I suppose, as leaders of thought along these lines, the schools ought to be the first to take hold of such reforms, but it is a big proposition to make the wholesale changes suggested by the Spelling Reform Board. In expressing this idea I am in line with many prominent educators, including President Wheeler of Berkeley, and others."

KEPPEL FOR REFORM.

County Superintendent Mark Keppel promptly announced himself in favor of the reform, but thought the reformers had made a mistake in suggesting so many words at one time.

"About one hundred words would have been generally accepted without opposition," said Mr. Keppel, "but they went too far in suggesting 300. I think, however, that within five years all these words will be in common use and others will then follow."

He has at this time no idea of suggesting the adoption of the list for use in the county schools.

Prof. Bettinger, deputy to the City Superintendent, said shortly and decisively: "I'm right in favor of it."

THE SIMPLIFIED LIST.

Talk of the 300 words selected for reform by the Simplified Spelling Board naturally creates great interest as to what words are actually included in the list. It is evident that this first list is simply a "clearing of the decks" for others that may be expected to follow in due time.

Words that have for almost a generation been included in American dictionaries in the revised form, words that are so rarely used that the average reader never has known how they are spelled, and words that are optionally spelled in more than one way, make up the greater part of the list. Therefore, the simplified spelling comes as a suggestion to the orthoepists of the world to adopt one simple form, and that in many instances is the form in use in the United States.

For the clearer understanding of the readers of The Times the list has been segregated into three parts, to wit: "New simplifications," including 144 words in common use, involving radical changes, which almost everybody will recognize at a glance; "Rarely Used Words," including twenty-nine words, with new spelling; "Long Accepted Changes," including 127 words, as commonly spelled in this country, but lacking concurrence on the part of English authorities.

It will be observed that many of the changes involve the spelling of the past-participle of verbs with a final "t," instead of "ed," and the reformers call attention to the fact that this is merely a return to ancient and authoritative usage. The list of 300 words, divided into three classes, as stated above, follows:

DEFEND THEMSELVES.

the filing of the articles of incorporation on July 22, 1902, with a capital stock of 2500 shares of the par value of $100 each. The first officers of the company were A. C. Freeman P. A. Stanton, G. W. Van Alstyne, Henry E. Carter and Edward Mansell. That only a part of the capital stock had been subscribed for, and that none of those who had subscribed had ever put up a dollar of their subscriptions. On August 5 a meeting was held by these directors, at which officers were elected, and no other meetings were held until November 20.

HOW IT STARTED.

Getting down to Garrett's connection with the company, the answer states that prior to November 7, 1902, Garrett and Harry Lee Martin were associated in business, and that the personal relations between them were intimate, and the defendant Martin had implicit confidence in the honesty, integrity and fidelity of the plaintiff; that at this time A. C. Freeman and Nora Freeman were the owners of the real property and appurtenances and water rights at Inglewood, and the plaintiff at that time learned that they were desirous of disposing of this property.

That on or about November 7 the plaintiff represented to Martin that this property embraced upward of 1500 acres, and that Freeman was willing to sell for the sum of $150,000; and the plaintiff requested that Martin join with him in the purchase of these lands. After inspecting the property, Garrett and Martin talked over methods of raising the purchase price, and Martin avers that he told the plaintiff that if the latter did not wish to join in the purchase that the plaintiff should secure his land for Martin, and Martin would raise the sum of $150,000.

A few days later, Martin asserts in his answer, Garrett informed him that I. W. Phelps, his father-in-law, had agreed to furnish him with any amount of money he might happen to need for the purpose of making this purchase over and above such amounts as might be contributed thereto by others who might associate themselves in the purchase of this land from Freeman.

IN ON GROUND FLOOR.

Garrett is said to have urged Martin to take as large a share in this purchase as possible, and to get his friends to do the same, with the result that Martin, James Cook, Charles Lloyd and Willoughby Rodman subscribed for stock to the amount of $25,000. The defendants left all the negotiations for the purchase of this 1500 acres in the hands of their friend, Garrett, and it was agreed that the simplest way of taking their pro rata interests in this property was by taking over the stock of the Inglewood Water Company and deeding to the company all this land, water rights and buildings to be secured from Freeman.

According to the representations of Garrett, Freeman was to be paid in cash. That of the sum of $150,000, $25,000 was subscribed by the defendants; $50,000 by Mr. Phelps, father-in-law of Garrett, and the remaining $75,000 was to be raised by a trust deed given to the Southern California Savings Bank; that the papers were placed in escrow, the deeds made out to the Ingleside Water Company and the $25,000 cash and notes of the defendants and the $75,000 borrowed from the bank turned over to Freeman.

Then in the answer comes the startling allegation that Garrett practically buncoed his friends out of $50,000; that while he claimed the purchase price was $150,000, the fact is asserted that he paid to Freeman a total of not more than $110,000, and, "that plaintiff did not either by advances made to him by his father-in-law, I. W. Phelps, or otherwise, pay or contribute any portion of the purchase money paid said Freeman for said property."

ONE ALLEGED FLIM-FLAM.

That the second mortgage given to Freeman for the sum of $20,000 over and above the alleged $150,000, was supposed to have been for 100 acres of extra land which Garrett asserted was necessary for the company to have; while, in fact, the defendants assert that this second mortgage was part of the original purchase price.

The defendants go into details regarding the final transactions by which Garrett secured in his name 2495 shares of the capital stock of the company; and on December 1, 1902, shares of stock were issued to defendants based upon the proportion of money which they contributed toward the total purchase price of the Inglewood Water Company stock and property.

It was only about January 10, 1903, say the defendants, that Garrett made a final settlement with Freeman for the purchase of this 1500 acres and other property and rights, but that Freeman did not convey to the company or to plaintiff and his associate any of the additional lands, comprising 100 acres, or any other land outside of the original purchase; and that plaintiff did not himself, nor did his father-in-law for him, pay or contribute any part or share whatever to said purchase price of $110,000.

On February 21, 1906, there stood on the books of the water company 1554 shares to the name of Garrett. Prior to February 1, 1906, none of the defendants "had any knowledge of any of the frauds of plaintiff hereinabove alleged, but they and each and every one of them believed that the price paid to the said Freeman for said lands conveyed by said Freeman to said Inglewood Water Company was the respective sums of $150,000 and $10,000, and they each and all of them believed that plaintiff had paid and contributed to the purchase of said property the sum of $50,000."

EVIDENCE OF FORGERY.

Coming down to the representations of forgery, told of in the complaint, the defendants say: "That on or about the first day of July, 1903, by an instrument bearing date of the first day of July, 1903, defendant, A. C. Freeman and his wife, Edith R. Freeman, transferred and conveyed to said Inglewood Water Company certain personal property then upon block 110 in the townsite of Inglewood, Los Angeles county, Cal., 'together with all and singular the said block 110.'

"That said instrument was delivered to defendant Martin, who was then the secretary of the Inglewood Water Company, who thereupon indorsed said instrument upon the back thereof, 'Bill of Sale,' and placed the same among the papers of said Ingleside Water Company. That in the month of August, 1903, defendant Martin, as such secretary, received through the mail addressed to said Inglewood Water Company the instrument above described; that at the time said Martin so received said instrument there was an indorsement on the back thereof made by the County Recorder of said county in the words and figures following:

" 'Recorded at request of grantee, July 28, 1903, at 31 min. past 1 p.m., in Book 1832, page, 187 of Deeds of Los Angeles County Records. [Signed.] Calvin Hartwell, County Recorder, by D. W. Perman, Deputy.'

"That when defendant Martin so received this instrument through the mail, the indorsement on the back thereof made as aforesaid by said Martin of the words, 'Bill of Sale' had been altered and changed so as to read 'Deed and Bill of Sale,' and in the body of said instrument the following clause had been added and inserted, to wit: 'Together with all and singular the right, title and interest of the said A. C. Freeman in the said ranch and townsite, which in him remains.' "

"FIXED IT UP."

The defendants claim that this alteration in this bill of sale by which it was changed into a deed were made by the plaintiff after the instrument had been executed and delivered and was without the authority of either Mr. or Mrs. Freeman. When asked about this change Garrett stated to Martin that he had "fixed it all up with Freeman."

It was in the month of December, 1905, that Martin claims to have become suspicious and to have lost confidence in his old-time friend, Garrett. He consulted Attorney Ross T. Hickcox for the purpose of making an investigation of the affairs of the company. For this purpose he turned over to Hickcox all the papers, books, and deeds and Hickcox made a thorough examination.

His report to the old friends of Garrett was startling. Evidence was shown which apparently proved that the real price for the water company and 1500 acres was only $110,000, and many other irregularities, including the alleged forged deed, were sprung on the startled stockholders.

A secret meeting of the defendants was held, and it was decided to prosecute a civil action against the plaintiff to recover the stock which stood in his name on the books of the company, and through which he had been the whole thing, as well as to recover certain lands which should have been deeded to the company, which were held in Garrett's name; and to quiet title to the property conveyed to the company in the alleged altered instrument.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

The complaint and other papers in this suit were prepared against Garrett, in which the company sued to recover 1554 shares of stock and $14,800 cash on one count and $8173.76 for cash and securities which were delivered into the hands of the plaintiff, and for a number of smaller sums.

Subsequently to the preparation of these two complaints Garrett was called to the office of Hickcox on February 21 last, where the defendants demanded of him that he make a settlement upon the complaints, which were shown him.

They sprang upon their old friend Garrett, according to their own stories, all the evidence they had dug up regarding the manner in which he had secured absolute control of the Inglewood Water Company, and, according to the defendants, Garrett threw up his hands and then talked compromise. In the end Garrett resigned as an officer from all of the companies, including the Realty Trust Company, the Inglewood Water Company, the Inglewood Farming Company, the Inglewood Domestic Water Company, the Los Angeles-Centinela Land Company and from the directorate and vice-presidency of the Guarantors' Investment Company.

Besides getting out of the inner circle, Garrett assigned all his 1554 shares of stock to the Inglewood Water Company, and also assigned to the company a contract with the realty company to secure payment of $10,000.

THAT "CLEAN HANDS" CLAUSE.

The "third defense" incorporates all the allegations made in the "second defense," and, continuing, it alleges that, "By reason of the wrongful, fraudulent and inequitable acts committed by plaintiff, as alleged and stated in said second defense, plaintiff cannot in good faith or in good conscience, or equitably assert any right to any of the property in his complaint described, and that he is thereby debarred from maintaining this action or obtaining any of the relief sought therein."

As a further proof that they had not blacklisted Garrett out of his stock and securities, the latter a few days after February 21 last applied to Hickcox, through his brother, H. S. Garrett, to assist him in raising money to meet certain of his financial obligations.

The defendant decided to help him, and on February 26 paid him $4000 as part payment for the Realty Trust Company's contract regarding the Hilmar Colony lands. On July 12 last Garrett gave notice, through his attorneys, that he would repudiate the contract for sale unless they would put up the balance. In the negotiations which followed the defendants agreed to buy out the plaintiff's contract with the Realty Trust Company for $47,246.40. Out of this was to be credited the $10,000 due the Inglewood Company in the settlement of February 21.

GETS SOME CASH.

This $37,246.40 was paid to Garrett partly in cash and partly with notes of the Inglewood Water Company, which were delivered to him on August 2 last, and a deed was at the same time given by Mr. and Mrs. Garrett to the Inglewood Water Company to correct an error in a former deed, given February 21. Because of these legal acts, taken upon his own initiative, the defendants in Garrett's suit claim that he is estopped from questioning the validity of the settlement, and from maintaining this action.

In their "fifth defense" the defendants incorporate practically all that they allege in the fifty preceding typewritten pages, and pray judgment of the court that the injunction heretofore granted upon stipulation be vacated; that the plaintiff take nothing by his complaint, and that he has no right, title or interest to or in any of the capital stock of the Inglewood Water Company, quieting title to all the lands and for costs of suit. The attorneys for the defendants are Ross T. Hickcox, Willoughby Rodman, E. A. Meserve and Hunsaker & Britt.

HICKCOX'S ANSWER.

In the separate answer of Ross T. Hickcox, which will be filed Tuesday, Mr. Hickcox denies absolutely that on February 21, or at any time, he or any of the defendants conspired to deprive and rob or to blackmail the plaintiff out of his stock in the Inglewood Water Company, or $10,000; or to rob the plaintiff of any stock by accusing the plaintiff of wrongfully and falsely, or at all, of the crime of forgery, or any crime; or of threatening plaintiff with criminal prosecution on the charge of forgery; or that he or they threatened the plaintiff that they would have him arrested, and a notice of his arrest published in the newspapers.

Attorney Hickcox then proceeds to give an extended account of his investigations into the affairs of the Inglewood Water Company, the confronting of Garrett with the evidence secured, and adds that:

"Plaintiff agreed to surrender, and did surrender, all stock of the Inglewood Water Company owned by him on February 21, 1906; and assigned the certificates representing said stock and delivered the same to this defendant. Plaintiff executed an agreement to pay the Inglewood Water Company the sum of $10,000, * * * that it was agreed and promised by defendant Martin, and this defendant, to plaintiff that if the aforesaid demands be complied with, the aforesaid proposed actions would not be instituted."

HECK GOLD MINING STOCK AGAIN TO JUMP.

Any Sane Man That Reads This Announcement Owes it to Himself and His Family to Take Heed. Any Reasonable Woman Depending Upon Herself For Support Should be Vitally Interested in These Statements.

Advices from Casper Heck, superintendent of the Heck Gold Mining Company, are so favorable that we are compelled again to advance the selling price of the stock of the Heck Gold Mining Co., located in the Gold Roads District, Mojave County, Arizona. Not alone do the advices warrant it, but the second allotment of stock is nearly exhausted, so rapid have been the sales.

These advises mentioned were given out to the California Promotion Syndicate, as fiscal agents, in strict confidence, as being preliminary to the superintendent's report, which will be sent to stockholders very shortly. Therefore, on Saturday night, November 3d, at 9 p.m. there will be no stock for sale at 15c, and we doubt very much whether any of the 15c allotment will be left at that date, consequently all subscriptions prior to that date cannot be filled at this price, we reserve the right to return the subscription and the money sent.

The date of this increase is absolutely fixed, and those who purchased stock before our prior raise, know that we mean it when we say that the stock will go up. Just how much, we are not at liberty to say, but it will be, at least, 33 1-3 per cent of the present selling price, and probably will be 100 per cent. Pretty good investment at either percentage.

The first allotment of the Heck Gold Mining Company's stock was so quickly subscribed and the repeated orders at 15c came in so fast that it is very encouraging and means an almost assured success for the Heck Gold Mining Company's property, unless every known indication of mining fails us.

Already new properties are being opened up all around us, and prospectors are in the field on account of the showing made by the Heck Gold Mining Company's property, many coming over the line from Searchlight and other Nevada points.

We quote herewith an article published in the San Francisco Chronicle of October 14, and which bears only upon the great impetus in mining stocks. The Chronicle is the most conservative paper on the Pacific Coast, and they would not print this article unless they had good assurance that it was the truth.

"Revival of Mining Stocks—

"Fortunes Made by Trading in These Securities on New York Exchange

"Special Dispatch to the 'Chronicle.'

"New York, October 14.—The Journal says: With more than a million shares of mining stock traded in on the New York curb in the last six days, investors in all parts of the world are beginning to realize that the increase in mining stock trading seems at hand. New York Stock Exchange houses that for years refused to handle such shares, are now compelled to open mining departments. The course of prices has been only one way the last few weeks. Fortunes have been made on the New York curb rivaling those made by the "forty-niners" in California. Several of the prominent Stock Exchange houses handled 50,000 shares a day each of these curb stocks during the week.

"The secret of the wild excitement in the mining stock market seems to be the fact that legitimate business men have taken up the promotion of mines. The improvement of mining machinery is making it possible to bore into the earth after the precious metals deeper, cheaper and more speedily than ever before. Prospecting is being done more carefully and never in the history of mining were so few dollars wasted on worthless claims as now."

Brokers, financiers and bankers who have scorned mining for 50 years are now compelled to trade in mining stock, for the reason that mining is accredited as substantial as any other enterprise, and the people are now assured of big returns.

Nevada has great properties, so has California, but Arizona miners have been quietly digging away, and if you will look over the records, we think you will discover that the percentage of loss in mining in Arizona is far less than the loss in any other State in the Union. There is no hue and cry, but real work done and real gold extracted and lots of it at that.

It is hard to conceive how the Heck property can fall down. It is surrounded on all sides by mines that have produced lots of gold and practically touches a mine that is paying nearly one million dollars a year in dividends.

Think of the Gold Roads now paying $1.00 every year on each share of its stock. How would you like to buy some of their stock at 15c? Well, Heck stock at 15c is just as good a buy if you take into consideration the conditions that prevailed at the Gold Roads mine when they were in the same stage of development that we are in. We have just as honest men; we have better prospects, and we have the determination to make this a mine, and it is going to prove a producer, unless, as we said before, every indication fails us, and this is hardly probable. Our assays are richer as we go down, and our vein is widening. Our book, "More Gold," is free, and you owe it to yourself and your family to get a copy and read it thoroughly. It may be the means of your financial salvation.

Here are some vital points, we want to call your attention to:

First.—We are located at Vivian, Arizona, in a country that is ideal for mining. We are surrounded on the East, West, North and South by mines that are producing or have produced great quantities of gold in the past. We are only 50 miles south of Searchlight, Nevada, and in the same range of mountains. We are incorporated under the laws of Arizona, and our stock is absolutely non-assessable.

Second.—The price per share is now 15c and will be 15c until Saturday, 9 p.m., November 3d, but it is probably worth many times as much, and you can rest assured it will be raised at the tioned, and will possibly go to 30c which cent. stock value increase, and you certai to make that 100 per cent, don't you?

However, do not forget that we right to refund all subscriptions coming allotment at 15c has been fully subsc you had better get in early.

Third.—We know the officers of the Mining Company as reputable business men, and we have had their property our own experts, and therefore can back word they say about it. Sincerity and count with you, do they not?

This company gives two bank references, United States Senator in their prospectus, dence they must be clean and honest set of incidentally know they are. Therefore, we dorse this proposition as an investment for a willing to wait a reasonable time and risk a with a favorable prospect of a return of 100 or greater than the risk involved.

This is not a fully developed mine, but it is best advanced prospects abounding anywhere; the element of risk been eliminated. If this vailed, you could not buy this stock at 15c You must remember the greater the risk, the gain, and if you do not want to risk your money, vise that you buy United States bonds, which 2 per cent. per annum, and you won't have to worrying about your security either.

But if you want to take a little longer chance, your money in the hands of men who are well mended, and live right in Los Angeles, who worthy of your consideration, then we would like you come in and carry as much of this stock as The Heck Company offer bank references—as do we.

Your buying today may make you a rich man —no one can tell. Just go back over the history of the famous mines in the world, and you won't go back very far either to know that such things pened over night.

From our personal examination as well as that of experts, we feel we ought to have a producing mine a year and a half. Our superintendent, Casper Heck, president of the company, who has been mining years, and is on the spot all the time, watching ing to the interest of the development, says we make it a mine in a year. He is a conservative man, he ought to know. Still we have had some dealings mining and extend that limit to the year and a half, be greatly fooled.

So, now, if you want to make real money and quick, you had better get in before Saturday night, vember 3d. You can, at least, make stock value nothing else, and 33 1-3 per cent. or 100 per cent to be sneered at.

Our office will be opened hereafter Saturday nights 9 P.M. for the accommodation of those who cannot here during the day.

Use the phone freely, telegraph or write us for a "More Gold," an interesting book that will tell you about this famous property. Telegraph for it at expense.

Better send for it today. It does not cost you a penny, and might be the means of making you a fortune. Then, too, we haven't an unlimited supply of books or stock either.

GUARDIAN FOR MRS. CRESSEY?

HER BROTHER FILES PETITION IN PROBATE COURT.

The Matter to Be Taken Up by Judge Gibbs on Monday—Woman Is Now Said to Be in Precarious Condition—Sensational Charges by Her Brother.

The condition of Mrs. Nellie E. Cressey, wife of Capt. F. J. Cressey, the man against whom a sensational suit was brought a day or two ago, has become so critical that yesterday her brother, H. M. Daniels, who arrived from his home at Waterloo, Ind., filed a petition in the Probate Court, asking that a guardian be appointed of his sister's person and estate.

The petition contains a recapitulation of the facts and statements that have heretofore appeared in The Times, and in addition, some highly sensational charges are levelled at Capt. Cressey, in connection with his treatment of his wife. Apropos of the mortgage placed upon the home, and to which previous attention was given, it is asserted that all transfers to him of property by his wife were obtained by Capt. Cressey by undue influence, and not of the free will of his wife; and that, unless a guardian be appointed, this property will be lost to her.

Mr. Daniels sets out his belief, and so alleges the fact to be, that Capt. Cressey has expended large sums of his wife's money for life insurance, not only insuring the life of Mrs. Cressey, but other persons, the policies all being made out to him as beneficiary.

For six weeks past, Mrs. Cressey has been afflicted in mind and body, but, it is stated, her husband refused her a physician, though urged by neighbors and friends to obtain medical advice. Not until September 11 did he give way, it is alleged, and then he summoned Dr. Richardson, who, after examining his patient, strongly advised Capt. Cressey to employ a competent nurse, or else to send his wife to one of the hospitals. Capt. Cressey refused to act on the advice and dismissed Dr. Richardson after his second visit, on September 12.

From that time on, Mrs. Cressey was without medical attention, it is claimed, or the careful nursing that she required, and she became completely demented. Anticipating the arrival in the city from Indiana of Mrs. J. Baxter, a sister of Mrs. Cressey, Dr. Richardson was again hurriedly summoned last week and he insisted that he be permitted to call Dr. Brainerd, as a specialist in nerve and brain diseases, in consultation. Capt. Cressey is alleged to have refused to permit such course to be taken, but finally surrendered, and Dr. Brainerd was called in. The latter advised, as had Dr. Richardson, that Mrs. Cressey be sent to a hospital, where her case could be watched. Again Capt. Cressey is said to have refused and to have maintained this attitude to the present time.

Meantime the woman is lying in a precarious condition and all the facts surrounding her illness are of such a strange character that Mrs. Cressey's relatives are desirous of having her taken where she can receive the very best medical attention. Her father, R. G. Daniels, H. M. Daniels, the petitioner in the present proceeding in the Probate Court, and Mrs. Baxter, the sister from Indiana, all unite in asking the court to appoint Edward L. Payne as guardian of Mrs. Cressey's person and estate, and the matter will be taken up by Judge Gibbs, upon presentation by Attorneys A[illegible]G. P. Parks and G. P. Adams, some time tomorrow.

CRESSEY'S SIDE.

SAYS HE'LL PRESENT IT.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) Oct. 20, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In the issue of your paper of the 19th inst. appears an article relative to a suit filed in the Superior Court of this county, asking for the recovery of certain property alleged to have been obtained by me from my wife through undue influence, etc., and I write to state that at the proper time and in the proper way I shall make a complete defense to the allegations set forth in the complaint now on file in the Superior Court, brought not by my wife, who knows nothing about it, but brought by one Edward Payne, who was appointed by the court as guardian for my wife for the purpose of bringing the suit against me.

The facts as they are will be given at the proper time, and I ask that public opinion be suspended for the present in the interest of justice to myself and my wife. The action by Mr. Payne, which seems to have been at the instance of my wife's brother, who lives in Indiana, and who arrived here on the morning of the 18th inst, was brought within eight hours after the brother arrived here and before he said or intimated one thing to myself, though entertained a portion of the day in our home. Such procedure is not only unwarranted and ill-advised, but was a great surprise to me, the action being wholly ex-parte, and entirely without my knowledge.

Mrs. Cressey is greatly improved, she having during the past three days spent considerable time on the front veranda of our home.

FREDERICK J. CRESSEY.

MONEY AND ITS DOINGS.

The demand for money in the local market is a little more active than the great activity which has marked past recent weeks. This remark may be extended to embrace, not only the Pacific Coast and the United States, but the world.

There is a good deal of new money coming into the city by those coming in the beginning of the tourist season, and the steady stream of new homeseekers which reaches Los Angeles every day in the year. The leading banks are all opening new accounts in greater number, and showing greater aggregate of money than the accounts that are closed.

There is some difference of view on the part of the larger financial institutions as to the exact condition of the money market. Some of the largest bankers in the city claim that money is a little scarcer and rates decidedly firmer. Those who entertain this view say that customers who have been prone to "kick" a little at a 5 per cent. rate are now glad to get money at 6 per cent. Others say that the inflow of new money more than offsets the increased demand, and these claim that the interest rates are even a little bit easier.

It is now tax-paying time, both for city and county and State taxes, and the property owners are paying up freely. The aggregate taxes of the city and county and State for Los Angeles city and county will amount to over $3,000,000. A good many taxpayers do not take advantage of the privilege of splitting their payments, making one now and the other in the spring, but to save trouble pay the whole amount at once. Probably 65 per cent. of the whole sum due on taxes will be paid before the first of December. The city money is all tied up and taken out of the channels of circulation, and the same condition practically prevails for the county taxes. This undoubtedly tends to tie up a great deal of money. It would be much better for the public generally if these tax funds could be distributed among the different banks and the banks would be willing to pay up collateral to cover the deposit.

The bank clearings for the city of Los Angeles last week came to $11,673,612, an increase over the previous year of about 13 per cent. This is about the exact percentage of increase in the population at the present time over that of a year ago. Glancing at the other Coast cities, San Francisco shows clearings of almost $46,000,000, an increase of about 7½ per cent, over last year. This is the normal condition in the Bay City since a month or two after the fire. Seattle surpasses her own past record with clearings of over $13,000,000, showing an increase over last year of a little better than 60½ per cent. Portland, Ore., clearings amounted to nearly $7,500,000, an increase of over 42½ per cent. Salt Lake comes close behind the Webfoot City, with clearings of nearly $6,500,000, an increase of over 47 per cent. Tacoma falls considerably below $5,000,000, but this is an increase over the previous year of 32 per cent., and Spokane crowds $6,000,000, with an increase of nearly 45 per cent. Taking the clearinghouse cities of the whole country, the record for last week was almost 20 per cent. over that of a year ago.

The week was an active one in real estate, recording 1406 deeds, the lowest for one day 145 and the highest 304. There were 59 trust deeds recorded during the week. The mortgages for the week run to 405, and the releases to 338. On one day there were 81 mortgages recorded, and the amount of money involved on that day was $222,161. The lowest number of mortgages put on record for any day in the week was 55, and on that day the smallest sum was $117,370. The week shows real estate mortgages going on record to the amount of $1,049,359. As to the rates of interest, on loans thus secured by real estate, there is no apparent change from the previous weeks. There were several mortgages put on record at $14,000 to $15,000 and up to $25,000 at 10 per cent. interest gross, which means about 7 per cent. net. One of these loans was made by a bank, being for $25,000. Most of the mortgages being taken are on private account, and there is no difference in rate of interest between private loans and those made by banks. The same is true of the releases going on record. The bank figures in very few of them comparatively, most of them being private money. There was one loan made during the week of $25,000 at 9 per cent., but it was part of the purchase price for a piece of property. Another mortgage went on record for $60,000 on the same conditions, at which the rate was 7 per cent. That makes a net rate of about 4 per cent., and is the cheapest money seen for many a day.

On the Los Angeles Stock Exchange the Continental and Associated oil were the leaders. Of the Continental stock there were as many as 2000 shares a day sold on several days, at range of price from 18 to 20 cents a share. The Associated sales ran as high as 14,000 in single days, and as low as 2000. The prices for this stock were as low as 37½ and as high as 38 5-8. The total sales of Associated for the week amounted to 30,000 shares, and of Continental to about 6000 shares.

In mining stocks, of Johnnie Consolidated there were sold as many as 20,000 shares in one day, the total sales for the week coming to over 40,000 shares. The prices ranged from 17½ to 19½ cents a share. Eldorado Cañon was another leader, with sales of from 1000 to 5000 a day, the week totaling over 15,000 shares sold. The prices went as low as 4 1-8 and as high as 4 7-8 cents.

The direct disturbing element in the monetary situation was the unexpected advance of the discount rate by the Bank of England. This usually takes place on Thursday of each week if at all, and the surprise was that the directors of the bank last week changed the rate on Friday, putting it at the almost unheard of figure of 6 per cent. The discount rates for this central institution of the world are interesting in the immediate past. March 9, 1905, the discount rate touched the lowest point it ever reaches, 2½ per cent. September 7 of the same year, it was put to 3, September 28 to 4. April 5, 1906, it went back to 3½, the usual course of things in the spring. May 3, when the great drain for gold incident to the destruction of San Francisco came, the rate was raised again to 4 per cent. June 21, the draft on London for gold having ceased, the rate went back to 3½ per cent., which is about normal. September 13, to stop another immense draft on American account, the rate was advanced to 4 per cent. This not sufficing, on October 11 the rate was put to 5, and on Friday last to 6.

The discount rate of the Bank of England had not been to 5 per cent. previous to October 11 since 1902, and it has not been 6 per cent. since 1890, when the great financial disturbances came upon the world owing to the Baring Bros. failure in Argentine.

The United States has drawn from Europe during the current year a total of $90,000,000 in gold. The proportion of reserves to liabilities in the bank has fallen from 50 per cent. to a little more than 30 in the past few weeks.

Previous to the advance on Friday of the Bank of England rate to 6 per cent., the Bank of Germany had held its rate at 6 per cent. Interest in Berlin is usually about 1 per cent. higher than in London, but there is no announcement yet of an advance to 7 per cent. by the German bank.

NO FEDERAL ORDER.

There seems to be an impression abroad that the different departments of the government have ordered the use of the new spelling, but this is a mistake: Said Postmaster Flint:

"Fine thing. We use them here. My secretary uses them in her letters, and I notice them in the letters we receive. It is coming about naturally and is sure to be general. It is a mistaken idea, if anybody has such, that any instructions have been received to make use of the simplified words, at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, or anybody else. No orders whatever have come from the Postoffice Department, but different postmasters have just begun using the new words on their own account."

AS BANGS SEES IT.

One of the difficulties to be encountered in following out the phonetic idea, is well "hit off" by John Kendrick Bangs in the following lines:

"Phonetic spelling 'd make a strike
If everybody spoke alike,
If every word that we employ
To express the thoughts that we enjoy
Were voiced the same by every one
From Florida to Oregon.
But in New England horse is hoss;
A New York bawss is Boston's boss;
In Green Vermont a ball's a boll,
As though it rhymed with pretty poll.
New Hampshirites of bluest blood
Speak of a road as if 'twere rud.
The Newport woman calls a car
A caw, to rhyme with daw, not bar.
In Maryland they speak of Kyows
And rhyme them with a Tabby's meows.
And frequently a little dog
In verse is harnessed to a morgue.
The little bird up in the tree
Is mentioned very variously.
Some people with an accent shirred
Refer to him as quite a burred,
Whilst other folks, of culture void,
Delight to call him just a boyd.
Some persons use the word 'rehearse,'
When they sit down to pen a verse,
As though 'twere clearly spelled rehoice,
And made a first-class rhyme for 'choice;'
And he who uses voihe to tell
A tale instead of verbe—oh, well,
Pray how in thunder can he spell
Phonetically I can't see,
E'en when he's backed by Carnegie."

PRESIDENT IS PLEASED.

Honor to His Mother by Georgians Brings a Letter of Thanks.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NORFOLK (Va.) Oct. 20.—The President has heartily approved the suggestion that Georgia shall reproduce as its States building at the Jamestown Exposition the old colonial Bulloch Hall at Roswell, Ga., the birthplace of Martha Bulloch, the President's mother.

The President has written a letter to W. N. Mitchell, president of the Georgia State Centennial Commission, who made the suggestion, in which he says:

"I need hardly say how much touched and pleased I was by the proposition to reproduce my mother's old home at Jamestown. Whatever the decision in the matter may be, allow me to think you most warmly for your suggestion."

FAMOUS ABBEY BURNS.

Relic of Norman Monks of Twelfth Century Is Totally Destroyed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SELBY (Eng.) Oct. 20.—The famous old Abbey Church here, known as Selby Abbey, is a total ruin, the result of a fire which broke out in the organ chamber at midnight. The local fire brigade was unable to quell the flames and the brigades from York and Leeds were unable to save the historic building, only the bare walls of which are left.

Selby Abbey was considered to be one of the finest monastery edifices in England. It was founded in the twelfth century by the Benedictines, and part of the original nave and transepts survived. The abbey possessed some interesting sculptures and tombs of the abbotts who presided over its destinies during the rule of the Normans.

BULKHEADS AND CHANNELS.

Announcement is made by the United States Engineer office that application has been made by the Wilmington Dock Company for permission to build bulkheads and to dredge channels from the upper end of proposed turning basin, just south of Mormon Island, Inner Harbor, San Pedro, to and in front of Wilmington, and also in the west basin. A map showing the location of the proposed bulkheads and dredgings will be on exhibition in the engineer's office until 11 o'clock a.m., Wednesday, the 31st inst., and interested parties can inspect this map and present, in writing, on or before that day, any reasons based upon navigation interests why the application should not be granted.

WOMAN'S PRESS CLUB LECTURE.

The Woman's Press Club will hold its first meeting of the year at the Burbank Hall, adjoining the Burbank Theater, on Thursday evening. The club has secured the services of Leo Cooper, director of a school of acting, who will address the members and their friends, on "The Renaissance of the Modern English Drama, with Hints to Playwrights." As the club numbers several playwrights among its members, a helpful meeting is anticipated. As Mr. Cooper is leaving for the East, on account of illness, this lecture will be his last in Los Angeles.

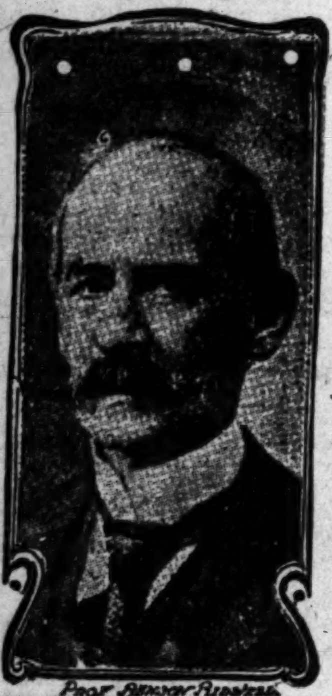
A Life Income for You

Don't Speculate—Invest

I Have Made Millions of Dollars for Thousands of People by My Patents

I expect to make millions more. This stock has increased in value more than 100 per cent. since September 1, 1905, and should make you a life income in handsome dividends. Be a safe and sane investor and get as much of the stock as your means will allow. The natural increase of business and inquiries for motors has forced the price of stock up several times. It will soon go still higher.



Prof Benson Bidwell

PROF. BENSON BIDWELL.

Inventor of the Trolley Car System.
Inventor of the Gearless Motor.
Inventor of the Railway Car Telephone System.
Inventor of the Bidwell Cold Motor.
Inventor of the Water Electric Generator.

My Patents Will Double the Capacity of Any Motor

I never made an unsuccessful invention. My first invention was the electric fan, just as it is run all over this country in hot weather. I didn't get a patent on it, but see what a tremendous success it is!

I next invented the Trolley Car System, just as it is run today. I made it perfect and successful right from the start. It has never been improved since I invented it. Look at the millions of money it has made for the stockholders. The stock in the trolley manufacturing companies sold below 1: cents a share in 1893 and 1894. Poor men could buy that stock then. Thousands of them did buy it, and every one who held on to it is a rich man today.

No Man on Eart hEver Lost a Penny He Invested With Me

If so, I will make it good. Next I invented the Railway Car Telephone System. It is a system by which passengers or train crews can telephone from still or moving cars anywhere the same as if seated in an office. It is a more perfect system in operation than any other telephone you ever saw. This is on the road toward millions for the stockholders.

This Is My Greatest Invention

Now I have invented something bigger and greater than either of the above. It is called the Bidwell Cold Motor. It is guaranteed not to burn out, and is exactly the kind of a motor the steam railroad people have been looking for. It will change all the steam railroad systems over to electric roads because it will be cheaper to run than steam and can be run faster and more safely than any present method.

The one drawback the railroads have had in changing over to electricity has been that no motor as at present made can be run 150 miles at 60 miles an hour without burning out. It would melt the very wires.

By using the Bidwell Cold Motor a train of cars could be run from New York to San Francisco without a stop at the rate of 60 or 80 miles an hour and not even warm up and without a hitch.

Besides running faster, they would be more safe and sure than steam cost less to operate, and would last longer than any other motor now known.

The Bidwell Cold Motor is the greatest invention out since I invented the trolley car.

The Opportunity of a Lifetime

I want to give every man and woman a chance to come in with me on this for I expect to make millions for the stockholders out of this new patent.

The stock will be sold on the square. There will be no hocus pocus about preferred or common stock, nor any other scheme, trick or wrinkle by which anybody can be frozen out.

Every dollar invested will represent one hundred cents of the best stock. Every share will be exactly like every other share. The profit on every share will be the same as the profit on every other share. In short, there will be nothing but a square deal all round. This stock is fully paid and non-assessable.

I have a lifelong reputation for square dealing. I will personally see to it that every stockholder gets a square deal on this.

More money is mare every day by good judgment in investing money than by all the labor and wages in the country. Safe and shrewd investments in this stock will make fortunes.

You will never get rich on wages. No one ever did. Every man in this world who ever got big money got it either by speculation or investment. Speculation is unsafe. You stand more chance to lose than you do to make. Investments are right the other way. Make a safe investment and it is sure to bring you returns.

Don't hesitate about this stock. It is absolutely safe and sure.

Here Is an Important Point to Remember

There never has been a failure of consequence in electrical manufacturing. Stop and think of that. All are immensely successful. All pay big dividends and have made their investors wealthy.

This company will soon be one of the biggest in electrical manufacturing in the world.

This is bound to be so, because there is not a place now where a motor or generator is used but will have to sooner or later change for the Bidwell Cold Motor or Generator. Why? Because we make something better than any other kind known.

Hetty Green, the Richest Woman in the World, Says: "The Way to Get Rich Is to Invest in Necessities."

The Bidwell Cold Motor is one of the greatest necessities of the twentieth century. This stock has already taken five jumps up. Now is the time to buy. It will soon advance. The profit is yours. Don't speculate—invest. Here you have a necessity. Look at this list below. Every one of these people made his fortune by supplying some great necessity:

Have You $50 or More?

How would you like to be the owner of a four-story brick building, 100x50, containing approximately 103,000 granite lime bricks? Would you feel like paying $500 for such a building?

This is virtually what we are offering you for an investment in the stock of the United States Granite Pressed Brick Company (par value $10 per share,) and we have the honor of presenting for your consideration 1000 shares at half this price, or $5.00 per share, for this first allotment only.

The investment of $5.00 per share in this Company means that within one year and three months from date, your investment, figuring 80 per cent interest on your money ought to be worth $50, or ten times the actual money you paid for the security, or five times the par value of the stock. In other words, we are offering you an investment that should net you on the first allotment of stock 80 per cent interest on your money annually. This seems a little bit exaggerated, but it will not be hard to convince you of this fact, if you will but come to our office, or go to the office of the United States Granite Pressed Brick Company in the Merchants' Trust Building, where reliable and responsible men, who have been in the brick business all their lives will prove conclusively to you that they have a brick so far superior to anything on the market, which can be made for less than $7.00 per thousand, and that they have contracts practically in hand that will take their entire output at $25 per thousand, and their present proposed plant will make 20,000 of these bricks every day. Figure this out in your own mind before you read another line, and you will come to the conclusion that the profits on 100 shares of this stock will give you an income greater than the average salary of school teachers, stenographers, bookkeepers, clerks, etc.

At the present time there are three pressed brick concerns in Southern California, who are possibly behind in their orders, and the demand for pressed brick at the present time is far in excess of the supply. Even an ordinary burnt pressed brick concern could enter into business now and make lots of money in Los Angeles, even with their big expenses to meet. But here we have a brick that is so far superior to anything else on the market, a brick that will stand the test of the elements, the scrutiny of the builder and architect, the crucial test of two governments; that can be had in any color, shape or size, that can be made today and put in the walls tomorrow, that can be constructed of materials that abound in great quantities right adjacent to Los Angeles, and can be made at a cost of less than $7.00 per thousand, and yet undersell inferior competition, at least 33 1-3 per cent., and in many cases undersell them a hundred per cent, what do you think the outlook of such a company is going to be? Don't you think it is very brilliant?

Imagine our total expense, figuring everything at a greater actual cost than it really will be, figuring this total expense at $155.65 daily, and for this expense you have 20,000 finished bricks that can be used the next day, and an advance order for them at $25 per thousand, making a grand total of $500.00 daily sales. Subtract $155.65 from this and the net profit per day is $344.35. Figuring on the total capitalization of this company, (which is only $250,000,) a 300 days' run for a year would net a profit of $103,305, and the stock offered to you now at $5.00 per share would mean $4.00 profit on every $5.00 you invest, or eighty per cent. interest on your money (40 per cent. interest at par,) and 80 per cent. interest would mean a stock value of $50 per share at the end of the first year, or a holding increasing ten times in one year, little better than real estate at best.

We appreciate very much that this all sounds like a fairy tale, but all we ask you to do is to come and look into the proposition yourself. Let reputable men--experienced men—tell you and show you the reason and the whyfore of this proposition, then go around to their bank references which they will give cheerfully and see if they are not men that can stand the "lime light" of investigation.

Furthermore, this Company has authorized us to offer $500 to be paid to any charity purpose if any one can disprove the statements of profit, cost and quality of this brick, and they think just as much of this $500 as you do, but you could not buy their word at 500 times $500.

Let us tell you a few words about what this brick is made of, and why it is the best brick made.

First, the brick is uniform in size, remaining the same in size all the way through the process and maintaining it as long as it stands in the building. In the use of ordinary pressed brick, there is a great waste of material and labor for the builder in laying and culling, as it is not perfect in size, for the reason that the ordinary pressed brick is burnt, and the result of burning generally contracts each brick at a various ratio thus effecting a loss of material and labor to the man who is working with it.

Second, our brick has four faces; in other words, it has a perfect exposure surface on four sides, instead of one side, as the ordinary pressed brick has. This means that a brick if chipped on one side can be reversed and used on the other, and therefore there is no waste as in the present day brick. Then, too, the faces on the granite pressed brick are much smoother than the one face on the other ordinary kind.

Third, we can vary the size of the brick to suit conditions, even making it up to six feet in length. Our patents cover this feature, and our secret formula protects it as well.

The Company can make window sills, key stones, window caps, burying and bonding stones, skew backs, belt courses, cornice patterns, and copings; in fact, anything produced in cut stones can be made by our secret formula, and please remember there is no cement used in the manufacture of the United States Granite Pressed Brick in any shape, form or manner.

Now, a few pointers about the consumption of brick. In California alone, 35,000,000 of pressed bricks are used annually, and this is increasing every year, and does not take into consideration the thousands and thousands to be used in San Francisco.

There are three concerns maikng pressed brick in Los Angeles and vicinity. Their price ranges from $35 to $60 per thousand, and it takes them (provided no orders are ahead of yours,) three to four weeks, as the burning consumes at least 32 days.

The Granite Pressed Brick can be made today and ready for delivery tomorrow, in any color or variety, but this is not so with the ordinary pressed brick as is made here at the present time. While they vary in color, the tone is always a tan, and in many cases, you will find various shades of brick in the same building, and we will make a reasonable wager that you can look right across the street now and prove what we are saying. Don't you see a few light ones and some dark ones? This naturally makes a very bad looking building, to our notion. Granite Pressed Bricks are guaranteed uniform in color and size, and contain no cement, thus assuring against deterioration. In fact, the older our brick the greater its bonding power.

Remember the Company's guarantee and their offer that to disprove these statements means that they pay $500 to charity and don't forget that.

Granite Pressed Brick is made of crushed granite, which insures its uniformity of color; there is no burning process, therefore the color is permanent, and not burnt out, or varied.

The German governmeut use this brick almost exclusively, and it is now being made in the Eastern states by the same process, with the exception that sand is used instead of granite, and the sand does not hold together as well as the granite. We have an unlimited supply of high grade granite that will last us for 100 years, or more, at one price alone. This insures a uniformity in price, and our profits will be the same year in and year out, which means really an income worth while for life.

We might also add that the United States Army erected several barracks made of this brick, and the war department has the following to say, over the signature of J. H French Quartermaster of the United States Army.

"Referring to your letter of the third inst. I am directed by the Quartermaster General to inform you that the Committee for the construction of buildings at Whipple Barracks has awarded the contract to Fifold & Gallaher, of Phoenix, Arizona, and authority has been given to use the Granite Pressed Brick."

Now, it is pretty hard to go back on such statements--pretty hard to doubt the word of the United States government, is it not? What we want to do is to bring you in contact with the people who know more about the brick than we do, who are the practical men. We know of the money-making feature of the proposition, we know how you will come out if you invest in it, as we have made this clear in this advertisement, but we want you to hear the other side of the story. We do not want you to invest a cent until you have thoroughly satisfied yourself that our statements are correct, and we reiterate again the fact that the United States Pressed Brick Co., offer $500 to to any one who will disprove our statements, this ought to be assurance enough that the bricks will stand the test.

You can bring any architect, or any number of architects; any builder, or any number of builders, to our office, or to the office of the United States Granite Pressed Brick Co., to verify these statements, and the quicker you bring them the better we will like it. Tomorrow is the day if you want to get in at $5 a share.

We had reserved 2000 shares to be sold at $5.00 per share, and at this writing 1000 shares have been subscribed by one party in this city, and we now offer for general subscription 1000 shares for $5.00 per share, not less than ten shares or more than a thousand will be sold to any one person. Immediately upon the sale of this 1000 shares the price of the stock will advance, and another 1000 shares will be offered at an advanced price, and so on until we have sold 11,000 shares total, which will net the United States Pressed Brick Co. more than enough money to equip themselves within 90 days, to turn out 20,000 bricks a day, and we will also say that the output can be doubled, if necessary, at a very small expense, thus doubling your income.

More Food for Thought

Please send for our ltierature, or let us tell you more definitely what this brick is composed of, and then let us lay before you evidence that you cannot sidestep, evidence that you will make you real money, so heed 5 per cent. discount for cash subscription or one-quarter down and one-quarter each month for three months.

CHARACTER CULTURE.

RECEIVING GREATER ATTENTION FROM EDUCATIONALISTS.

Movement Not Confined to Any One Nation, but Is Apparent in Nearly All the Countries of Europe as Well as the United States in Public Schools.

It is a significant fact in educational advance that the emphasis is being put with increased earnestness on the character-forming ideal, writes J. A. S. in Boston Transcript. The movement, it is pleasant to record, does not appear confined to any one nation. The enthusiastic awakening of the people in Japan, the movement for educational reform in Germany, the western influence in India, the social renaissance in Italy, the growth of democracy in France and the advance of community spirit in Great Britain have promoted the sentiment for character building as the chief aim and most essential result of public education.

Probably no national recognition of the moral aim in education antedates the action of the Japanese government, which introduced moral instruction into all schools in 1868, and has from the first placed the greatest value upon its enforcement in the 30,000 schools of the nation. Definite character training is the order in the 3000 public schools of England, enrolling about one million children. A beginning has been made in India, where the city public instruction officials are issuing circulars giving suggestions for moral education and impressing its importance. Interesting experiments are also under way in France and Germany, where there has been an awakening to the necessity for emphasizing the moral aim in education.

The scheme of instruction varies in the different localities. In Cheshire county, England, for example, where direct instruction is the rule, the moral lessons are part of the regular course of secular instruction and are supplementary to the prescribed religious lessons. This weekly lesson is inserted on the school time-table as "a lesson on character, conduct and citizenship;" and it is not given to elementary schools or classes. Regular textbooks are indicated for the teachers' use in giving these lessons, that for younger children being in the form of story lessons. The approved form of instruction is an address interspersed with questions and answers and supplemented by many illustrations and examples from nature and history, sacred and profane, given with vivid earnestness and enthusiasm. Graduated syllabi for elementary schools and for secondary schools have been prepared by the Moral Instruction League of Great Britain. In these documents it is explained that there can be no single moral instruction method; for according to the individual genius of the teacher, the vehicle may be biography, natural history, or a number of varied illustrations. The places vary with the views of the teachers, some of whom prefer a series of connected lessons on one subject such as temperance or truthfulness, while others adopt a less exhaustive treatment.

The general idea is that illustrations should be chosen from nature and history rather than from fiction. The instruction is all positive rather than negative, the main object being to extol the good rather than to denounce the evil. The syllabi consist only of the merest outlines of the lessons to be taught. Those for "infants under 7 years of age" being seven in number, cleanliness, tidiness, manners, kindness, fairness, truthfulness and courage. For the text standard, 7-8 years, gratitude is substituted for tidiness. Honesty, justice, self-control and work are added for standard 3, age 8-9 years; and so on through the gamut of virtues, patriotism, peace and war, ownership, self-knowledge, the will, coöperation and ideals being listed as subjects to be taught to children at 13 and 14 years of age. The value of athletics; temperance in drink; the foundation of morals; betting and gambling; responsibilities of elder scholars; capital; combination among workers; political parties, marriage and married life; fatherhood and motherhood appear on the syllabus for secondary schools, for pupils up to 16.

Reviewing these, it is not remarkable that the teachers (who are expected to give this instruction in addition to their regular labors) are urged to "take a broad and organic view of life." And the question naturally arises, will not specialists, fitted by special study and spiritual qualities for the task, be required to occupy the posts of moral instructors?

It is apropos to note that in Japan the little children are interested in moral conduct by means of object lessons. Fairy tales are rigidly excluded. Even in the higher classes object lessons are in much favor; and it is a noteworthy fact that the instruction is imparted not so much in a logical and systematic way as from the heart through the eye. The duties succeed one another, proceeding from the family to the school and from the school to the duties of the citizen. In the higher classes, it seems, the various ethical systems are taught. The textbooks in use by the Japanese public schools were prepared by a special commission having representatives of Buddhism, Christianity and Confucianism serving on it. An eight-volume work dealing with moral instruction has been published by the government which has been the standard for the schools since 1903.

Character culture is a tentative condition in the United States, where there has been a keen awakening to its importance. All the various phases of educational method are here and there in vogue in the public schools. The English scheme of direct instruction, through didactic instruction has many advocates among the school teachers of this country, who have formulated outlines of their own or have followed those published at various times in the educational journals. The kindergarten has for its chief aim the laying of the foundation of moral character. Manual training and school gardens are bringing a direct and hopeful moral influence to bear. There are no more effective agencies for character culture than the school cities, the leagues for good citizenship, etc. Language, history and literature teachers have and utilize their exceptional opportunities of combining moral impressions with their class instruction. The object lesson in moral education has made its appearance in the form of lantern-slide lectures, illustrating "fighting," "true sportsmanship," etc., a plan destined, no doubt, to have wide vogue.

It is significant of the strong undercurrent of popular sentiment in favor of character culture in public schools that the representatives of all classes of religious belief and of ethical bodies are getting together to bring about the introduction of a suitable and acceptable form of lessons on the regular school curriculum. In Philadelphia an Episcopal clergyman, a Hicksite Friend and an ethical culturist are among the members of a committee on moral training in the public schools. Albany, N. Y., has a Moral Educational Board. To provide the introduction of character culture lessons on the school course is the proposition for civic organizations or local leagues of citizens, with branches in each city school, whose function and plan of work would be to voice the sentiment in favor of character training; to bind more closely together the homes and the schools, and to give the moral and spiritual influence of the parents, the teachers and the public a vital coherence and unity. J. A. S.

UNWISE TO USE BRAIN TOO MUCH.

DANGER OF OVER-EXERTION OF BRAIN POINTED OUT.

A Specialist Says It Is Good Plan to Try to Stop Thinking at Times and Thereby Save the Nervous Wreckage so Apparent in the Present Day.

"The brain is man's most faithful friend and would be man's best companion if he understood it better," said a prominent specialist.

"I use the word brain to comprehend what we term the mind and the process of thinking, and not as a physical object or a medium which directs our actions or through which we, or the animate spirit, directs us, just as theorists please to take it—we will look upon it as a thing with which we may hold communion and proceed upon that hypothesis.

"On the stage the prize idiot in the cast, usually a young nobleman or a dude, always raises a laugh when he speaks his lines about the effort of thinking and the wearying effect such a mental process produces upon his physical being. He really speaks a greater truth than either he or the audience takes in, for thinking is an effort, be the thought in itself ever so frothy and ephemeral, and could we lessen the process of thought at will, as an engineer applies the air brakes to his train, much of the trouble and disease in life would vanish like the meadow vapor before the rays of the rising sun.

"It is this impossible process entirely to still what is called the thinking process which is one of the most interesting studies of the specialist, for it is, plainly speaking, the inability of the individual to eliminate certain thoughts, or a certain thought, from the brain cells, or to still it into inactivity, which fills the insane asylums, produces nervous wrecks in other individuals and causes trouble, confusion and chaos all around in everyday life.

"Persons to whom this fact appeals should endeavor to take their own brain into communion with their own selves; to set it up as another person, with whom they may hold converse, and the objective and subjective mind admits of this through conscious action, and in some happy and fortunate individuals through unconscious action.

"A little practice will make this possible to the student, though his progress will be by degrees and not in one jump. He should first understand that thinking is largely a matter of habit, that the brain is one of the most willing organs in his body at his command, and, honest and faithful as it is to him, will respond to his calls upon it. He should therefore give it as much needed rest as possible by the process of sleep, and during waking hours by not calling upon it for thought except when necessary. The average person will put in a tremendous amount of unnecessary thought effort upon the simplest everyday matter of life.

"Again, he will allow his objective mind to cling to one or several thoughts with persistent tenacity. In this event he wears out particular cells of his best friend, and where this habit is maintained he often becomes a nuisance to his friends and family by developing into what is termed a 'crank;' and at times he exhausts these same cells in this manner and lands in the asylum.

"Most people use their brains too much, either in utter idle waste or in overconcentrated work, and when their best friend begins to show a mild resentment by showing signs of fatigue they ply it with stimulants which science or the distillery have placed at their disposal. Even under these mean circumstances the brain, disgusted though it is with such shabby treatment, goes on doing the best it can for its owner until temporary insensibility, insanity or death ensues.

"It will be found that coöperation with the brain in the process of stilling thought is not as difficult as would be supposed, for the brain will remain quiescent if you will only permit it, and become strengthened thereby, just as it will respond to the limit of exhaustion when called upon. This theory is very easily evolved into successful practice, and I commend it to men of active minds, especially professional men, for it will be found to lessen nervous tension, soothe the temper, promote the appetite and produce good nature in otherwise nervous, touchy and disagreeable people."—[Washington Star.

MANAGEMENT—The management of the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company is in the hands of the most experienced copper operators in the world, without exception. Wallace Corbett, president and general manager of this company, is known throughout the United States, as one of the most successful operators in copper mining. He has been connected with the Boston and Montana Company for fifteen years. To find out his record, telegraph any bank in Silver Bow county, Montana. O. O. Kincaid of the Company, is one of the best-know bankers in Nevada, besides having had four years of practical experience in mining.

Jack Adams, who is largely interested in the Company and one of the directors, has been general superintendent of the Amalgamated Copper Company interests in Butte since the formation of that Company.

R. P. Kelly, another director, has made an enormous fortune in copper mining in Montana within the past ten years.

These are among the largest stockholders in the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company. Mr. Corbett will have personal charge of the development of the Company's estate. We make this statement without fear of contradiction, that no Company has been launched where there is a greater array of copper mining talent, than can be found in the Butte and Greenwater Company.

COMPANY'S ESTATE—The mining estate of the Butte and Greenwater Copper Company consists of ten full claims located in the very heart of the Greenwater District, Inyo county, California. The claims are Copper Bar Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4; Copper Eagles Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6.

ADJOINING PROPERTIES—The Investor Group, owned by Nash and Wallace, adjoins the Copper Bar Nos. 1 and 2 on the west. The Water View Group, owned by Clark and Benson, adjoins the Copper Bar No. 3 and 4 on the west. The Good Luck and Investor Group adjoins the Copper Bar Nos. 1 and 3 on the north. The Ion Dyke Group, owned by Kurze, divide or lie between the Copper Bar Group and the Eagle Group of the Butte and Greenwater corporation.

The property to the west of the Copper Eagle, is owned by Beadle and Drake. The property to the east of the Copper Eagle is owned by Clark and Benson. The War Eagle Group and the Anaconda Group are one claim length north of the Copper Bars.

The Gold Note Group, which recently changed hands for $250,000, lies one claim length west of the Copper Bars, while the Greenwater United Copper Company lies two claims lengths west of the Copper Bars.

GENERAL LOCATION—The property is located one mile from the Death Valley and Greenwater in a southeasterly direction, and on the general strike of the Death Valley and Greenwater ledge, which can be walked on from the Death Valley property across the intervening properties, and then across the property of the Butte and Greenwater estate. The property is a half mile southeast of the Greenwater United.

GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE GREENWATER DISTRICT—The first work done in the district was on the property of the Furnace Creek Copper Co., where a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 320 feet. This Company had strong surface indications to start with, assays running as high as $6.00. surface indications to start with, assays running as high as 30 per cent. in Copper. Stock was put on the market originally at 25 cents a share, and is selling today in the neighborhood of $4, and has sold as high as $6.00.

The Death Valley and Greenwater Stock was put on the market the 15th of August, at $1.00 per share, and is now selling around $3.50 per share. The Company is capitalized at three million shares, par value $1.

The entire property is selling today on the basis of ten and a half million. Since the present owners obtained control of the Death Valley and Greenwater, they have been working 60 men on the surface and sinking four shafts, where the four gasoline hoists, which are now en route, will be installed.

CAPITALIZATION—The physical conditions of the Greenwater District are of such a nature that the enormous amounts of money that has been found necessary to be expended in ordinary copper mining operations in order to get sufficient development to put the rank and file of companies on a paying basis does not hold true in the Greenwater district.

The contour of the country is such that the property can be opened up by a system of tunnels. A tunnel driven on the ledge for 500 feet, will give not less than 350 feet of stoping ground. The modest capitalization, 1,500,000 shares with 40 per cent. of the stock in the treasury, will give ample funds for the proper development of this Company, and we unhesitatingly recommend this stock as a most desirable investment.

DEVELOPMENT—Development work is already started on this property and will be carried on continuously. The Company is sinking a shaft on the Copper Bars and driving a tunnel on the Copper Eagles.

"THE TIMES" ORIENTAL PARTY IN JAPAN.

"THE TIMES" PARTY'S HAPPY JAPAN DAYS.

Invasion of so Many Sight-Seers Caused Excitement Among Brown Folks—Art Treasures, "Bargains" and the Courtesies.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NAGASAKI (Japan) Sept. 26.—The Times Oriental Party leaves Japan for China today. Nine days have been spent in the empire of the Mikado, nine of the happiest and most eventful days in the lives of the excursionists. To describe what they have seen would be impossible, for after the first day at Tokio, when all of the party was together, they scattered through the country. There were so many places to visit and there was such a short time in which to make the various side trips, that to keep the party together would have been difficult, even had that been the programme. Not until the departure of the steamer from Kobe on Sunday, the 23d inst., was the entire party together again. They had been "doing" the country in small groups of from six to ten. They had been on the go every day from dawn until nearly midnight, or until the next dawn. They had crowded into the brief time they had all the sightseeing possible. They came aboard loaded down with parcels large and small, for the Jap has been found not averse to parting a tenderfoot from his money, an art in which some of the excursionists heretofore considered themselves more or less adept. More interesting even than the stories they had to tell of their experiences were the general comparing of things purchased and the displaying of the "bargains" which they had struck. They will bring home with them thousands of things beautiful, for they have found the Orient one great curio store, in which the cheapness of articles is almost amazing. Simple as is the Jap, he has learned how to make clever imitations of his richest wares, and not a few of the "bargains" have been found to be anything but what his customers thought they were getting.

The official itinerary of the party gave the excursionists their choice between a rail trip through the interior of Japan from Yokohama to Kobe and the trip between those ports by steamer. When the Dakota left Yokohama less than half the party was on board, the others having elected to remain on shore and take the trip by rail. Most of those who remained with the steamer will take the rail trip through the country on the homeward journey a month from now.

The steamer trip to Kobe was made without special incident, other than a pretty compliment paid the party by the United States battleship Wisconsin, which, when the Dakota sailed, was preparing to depart for San Francisco via Honolulu. As the Dakota steamed out of the harbor and passed about six hundred yards from the big man-of-war, the marine guard was paraded on the forward deck in dress uniform; the blue jackets lined the rail, and thrice was the Stars and Stripes, floating from the stern, dipped in salute. Then across the water came the roar of cheers as the more than 500 men on the war vessel shouted their good-bys. Nor was that all. Presently from the bridge was raised a special signal in flags. The Dakota's passengers, of course, could not read the signal, but later its interpretation was given to those on deck. It read: "Good-by. A pleasant voyage. We're going home." And those who sat down to dinner in the spacious dining saloon of the Dakota that evening had even a greater reverence for the Starry Flag.

The coming of the party to Kobe had been heralded in advance, and the Japanese storekeepers had been informed that we were to spend enormous sums of money. One rumor which went the rounds had it that there were nearly one hundred millionaires in the excursion. Those who went shopping soon learned that the merchants were imbued with the idea that their customers were possessed of unlimited means and in many places prices were advanced accordingly. The report had the effect, however, of securing for the visitors a display of the very best goods and resulted in their receiving every possible courtesy from both officials and civilians. In almost every city visited, the excursionists were freely admitted to places from which the ordinary tourist is barred. Some of the business streets were decorated in their honor and every possible facility was given them to see what they desired to see.

The side trip from Kobe to Kioto, a rail journey of two hours, proved to be one of the most delightful features of the excursion thus far. Kioto for hundreds of years was the capital of the Japanese empire and is one of the most interesting cities in the country. It is a city of shrines and temples, and in its shops are made some of the finest of Japanese wares of various kinds, including the far-famed Satsuma ware. Quarters had been secured for the entire party at the Miyako Hotel, situated at the edge of the city and perched upon a high bluff overlooking the town. The welcome the Times party received at Kioto, and especially at the hotel, was a revelation of Japanese hospitality. Many of the excursionists, who had taken the rail trip from Yokohama, had been in Kioto two days in advance of the arrival of those who came by steamer, and to them had been accorded the same generous welcome.

The party completely filled the big hotel, which is one of the best in the Orient. Gen. Otis was assigned to the apartments which had been occupied by His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught, who twice visited the hotel during his recent tour of Japan, and to all members of the party every possible attention was accorded. Nearly two days were spent there. On the first afternoon the entire party took a jinrikisha trip through the city, visiting the temples and about eighty Shinto shrines in the city and these buildings represent the architecture of every age. The old-fashioned, calm and aesthetic appearance of the city makes it attractive to tourists; but the arrival of The Times people gave the natives something which they will talk about for years to come. Never before was there such a descent upon the shops. Every member of the party seemed determined to embrace the opportunity to purchase some of the famous porcelain or the beautiful cloisonne which cannot be duplicated in the world. The excursionists may have left several thousand dollars in the quaint old city, but they carried away with them gems of art which they could not have purchased elsewhere. A trip to Japan without a visit to Kioto would not be complete and a visit to Kioto without seeing the Miyako Hotel would be something to regret.

Sunday night (September 23,) the party, tired but happy, again boarded the Dakota, but owing to the tides the time of sailing was postponed until daybreak the following morning.

The voyage on Monday between Kobe and Nagasaki was the prettiest sea trip of the entire tour. It was a daylight trip through the Inland Sea. All day the magnificent vessel glided over waters of glassy smoothness between what seemed to be thousands of small islands, on which the vegetation was so dense that the ground could not be seen. At times the ship was within easy pistol range of the land and in the sheltered nooks along the beautiful shores could be seen scores and scores of fishing villages. Vessels of almost every description were passed, and at one time during the day no less than eleven big steamers could be seen. Many of the islands are fortified, and from the steamer's deck the frowning muzzles of great guns could be seen half concealed in the beautiful green of the trees and grass.

We reached Nagasaki Monday at noon, and almost before the engines stopped preparations were begun for coaling ship. The excursionists went ashore immediately after the ship reached her mooring, and taking jinrikshas, rode over the mountain range to Moll, a small town distant about six miles. There was nothing attractive about the town and it was not to see it that the trip was made; but the route is through one of the most beautiful parts of Japan. Upon their return, the excursionists found the work of filling the ship's coal bunkers in full operation, and it gave them a view of ant-like human labor, the like of which can be seen nowhere else. The Dakota has taken on board between 5000 and 6000 tons of coal, and every ounce of it was lifted up the sides of the huge vessel by human hands without the aid of machinery. On a bamboo staging, erected against the vessel's sides, small platforms are placed, on each of which stand two Jap laborers. The coal is brought from shore in large scows and at the foot of the staging it is shoveled into small baskets. These baskets are then passed from platform to platform, those below handing the baskets to those above until the deck is reached and then the coal is poured into the bunkers. It is like a bucket brigade at a village fire, and if it were water they passed instead of coal, they could soon sink any ship. Men and women work all day long in the hot sun, some of the women carrying their babies strapped to their backs, and the wages they receive are 20 sen (10 cents in U. S. money,) per day. For two days more than 1200 of these laborers worked, seemingly without a moment's rest. The line of baskets never stopped during working hours, which were from 6 to 6, and if the laborers paused to eat, others took their places in line. Each of the baskets contains about two shovelfuls of coal. Despite their strenuous efforts and the killing pace set for them by those in charge, the laborers are happy, and a happier lot would be hard to find. They are talking, singing, laughing constantly. They finished their work on the Dakota last night and this morning are coaling a British tramp steamer which arrived last night.

When the Dakota reached Nagasaki the United States transport Logan was in port, and the excursionists were invited to board her at their pleasure. She is carrying the Twenty-first Infantry home from Manila, and is due to reach San Francisco in about twenty-five days. Many of the military officers visited the Dakota and the visits were returned, the Times party receiving every courtesy on board the Logan.

Tonight the Dakota will sail for Shanghai, and will reach there in about three days. From there the party will go to Hongkong and thence to Manila.

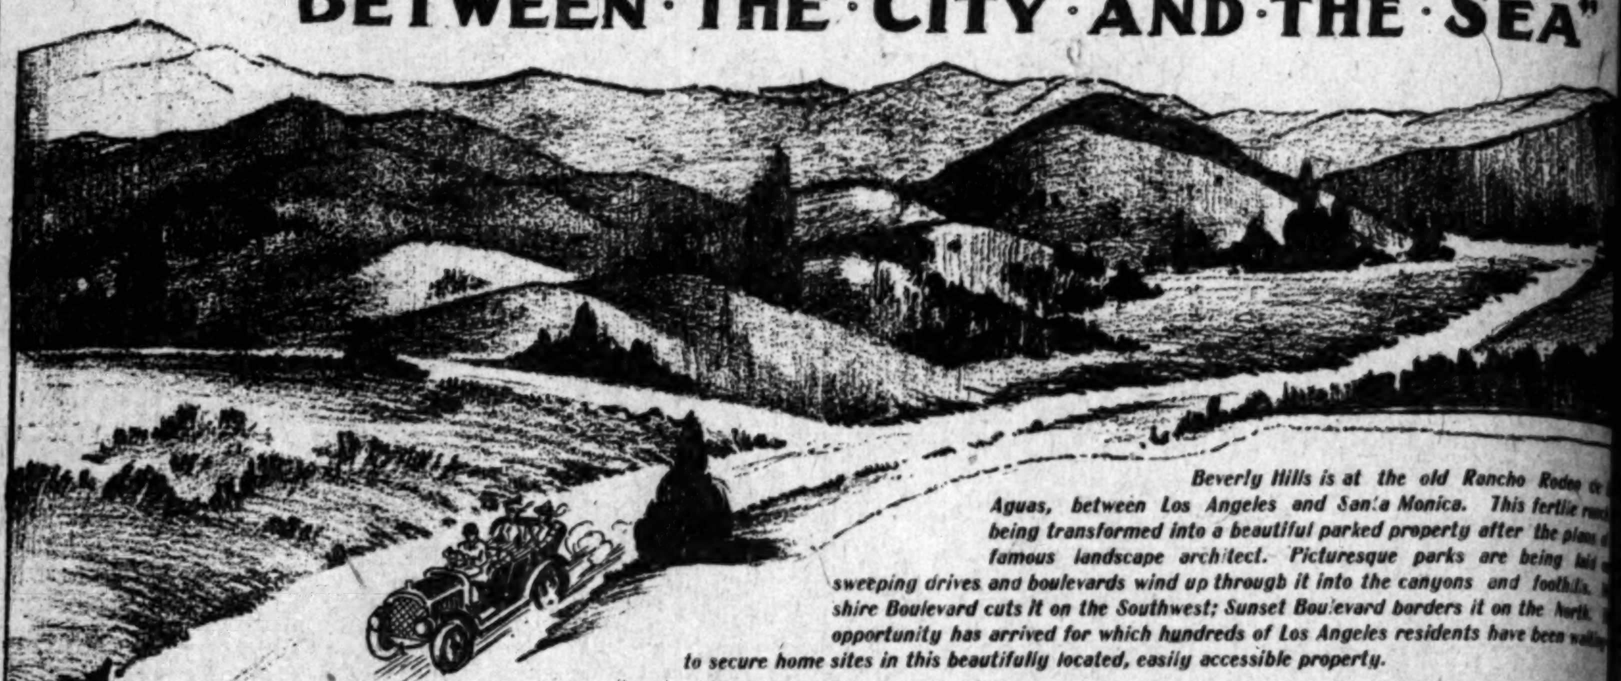
BEVERLY HILLS

"BETWEEN·THE·CITY·AND·THE·SEA"



Beverly Hills is at the old Rancho Rodeo de Aguas, between Los Angeles and Santa Monica. This fertile ranch is being transformed into a beautiful parked property after the plans of a famous landscape architect. Picturesque parks are being laid out; sweeping drives and boulevards wind up through it into the canyons and foothills. Wilshire Boulevard cuts it on the Southwest; Sunset Boulevard borders it on the North. The opportunity has arrived for which hundreds of Los Angeles residents have been waiting to secure home sites in this beautifully located, easily accessible property.

Formal Opening Tomorrow

AFTER months of preparation we are able to announce the formal opening of BEVERLY HILLS The work of development has now advanced so far that we can show you our plans—give you an intelligent idea of what the completed BEVERLY will be. No such project has ever before been brought into being in Southern California. Nor is there another such opportunity for people who wish to live away from the city to secure a site so advantageously located, in a section that will have every improvement that the finest residence sections of Los Angeles can offer. We invite you to visit BEVERLY HILLS tomorrow, or any day this week. You can get information at our city offices, or at our headquarters at BEVERLY.

Those who have been waiting for this announcement will appreciate its significance.

Transportation

Four car lines—that is the transportation situation in a nutshell. Los Angeles-Pacific lines furnish it—Santa Monica car line by way of Sawtelle, the Brentwood Park car, the Hollywood through care and the Colegrove car. Within six months the new Sunset Boulevard scenic road will be bringing people to Beverly Hills. Run out in your automobile by Pico or West 4th St. Wilshire Boulevard will soon be completed to Beverly Hills, which immediately adjoins the new Country Club grounds

Character of the Improvements

That improvements at Beverly Hills will be equal or superior to improvements in the best residence sections of Los Angeles is absolutely assured. The property is water bearing—a large reservoir will be constructed at great expense in the foothills, giving plenty of pure water under heavy pressure to all parts of Beverly Hills. The streets and boulevards range from 60 to 110 feet in widths; roadbeds are of the new oiled, tamped construction—practically asphaltum, and entirely dustless. Wide cement sidewalks and curbs, telephones, electric lights. A gas plant will be erected to supply Beverly residents, and a complete modern sewerage system will be installed, assuring perfect sanitation—an improvement unknown even in some of the finest residence sections of Los Angeles. In fact, nothing has been overlooked that will make for comfortable living here. Trees and shrubs have been planted, parks laid out—the very sloping nature of the property, with the swelling foothills and picturesque canyons, lend themselves to the art of the landscape architect. No expense has been spared. The work will be carried to completion on the elaborate scale planned. There is a single idea behind it all—to make of Beverly Hills a place where people accustomed to all the cenveniences and refinements of city life can have them all, and at the same time the healthful features and delights of the country.

Prices, Terms, Etc.

There are no small lots at Beverly Hills. There will be no crowding. There will be no undesirable buildings of any kind. Restrictions cover the p and will be strictly enf The business section Beverly proper, re the residence portion accessible. The large enough to give of level or foothill residence sites are high ing a sweeping view. Pri range from $900 up. Ter will be found satisfactory.

Reservations Should Be Made This Week

While Beverly Hills is a large proposition, the demand for this property is already keen. We have been obliged to show it. Many have already selected sites on which to erect beautiful homes. We wish to impress upon you this point: This week you will have the widest choice you will ever have—to avoid disappointment then, see Beverly Hills this week. Get a clear idea of what it is, what it will be, of the character of people who are interested there—then make your selections. We can only judge the demand from the past two weeks. Taking them into consideration, we ask you to come this week for your own protection. Whether you want to live here, or would consider the property only from an investment point of view, the opportunity is here now. Grasp it.

U. C. DEFEATS POMONA IN FIRST RUGBY GAME.

Northern Pigskin Players Too Fast for Southern Team Although Latter Make Plucky Fight—New Style Does Not Find Immediate Support.

CALIFORNIA, 6; Pomona, 0.

The University of California Rugby football team defeated the fifteen from Pomona College at Fiesta Park yesterday afternoon, 6 to 0, but the score of the real game—between Rugby and Intercollegiate styles of play—is yet undecided.

The attitude of the crowd that left the park after the game was very doubtful. If Rugby won, its victory was quiet, and did not sweep everything before it by storm. While some were disappointed and others correspondingly enthused, the general attitude seemed to be one of disappointment—of the disappointment that is felt by a child who has been given a practical demonstration of the advantages of doing what he has been told to do, in place of doing something that he liked.

It must be admitted that Rugby's victory went that far, at least, even by the most bitter opponents of the game. There were no injuries on the field whatever; no panting, sweating band of athletes dragged off the field at the conclusion of the game, no heavily-packed masses of men swaying and struggling in an intangible struggle throughout the fifty minutes of play.

In place of that there was a game made up almost entirely of passing, kicking, running, all of which could be noted to its fullest extent by the bleachers, and none of which placed the participants in danger of life and limb, or apparently even to any great physical discomfiture or bodily strain. The sprightly way in which the players walked off the field at the conclusion of the first half was a revelation to those who have witnessed the exhausted, bedraggled elevens that usually slink to their trainers with a grateful look.

But there the "victory" of Rugby, if such it was, stopped. There was something tiring and monotonous about the long, unvarying, and unbroken struggle that is waged in the game. The gradations—the starting points of interest that the old game relied upon, are wanting. Yesterday afternoon the bleachers were on their feet for the first ten minutes of the game, continuously, and although the standard of play did not change for the worse as the game progressed noticeably less interest was manifested as it went on.

LARGE POSSIBILITIES.

Even to a layman the possibilities of the game were manifested. While the work of both of the teams was excellent, considering the length of time that they have been at practice, neither Pomona nor California were equal to the task of showing up clearly more than a few of the fine points. California had mastered the passing plays wonderfully well for new men, and from the work of the backs in this line on several occasions it could be seen that this part of the game would become highly spectacular and interesting when performed by men who had a scientific knowledge of it. The drilling game was not used at all by either team, as it requires a great amount of skill. When men are in the game who can pass swiftly and accurately, who can kick on the run with greater ease, it is possible that the interest can be sustained better than it was yesterday.

The one point that seemed equally clear yesterday, however, was that all the fine points that are to be noted in the English game seem to tend to destroy partisan interest. The fact that there is more of skill and less of fight in evidence is at the very bottom of this.

Pomona made a good fight against odds yesterday. California had a faster team, one that had been coached longer, and the Claremont boys held them within their own territory a good part of the time, and threatened to score on several occasions.

Tuller and Stanton were the stars of the game. Tuller earned the bleacher name of "The Terrible Swede" by the way he plowed into the midst of every play. He seemed to have speed, strength, and a knowledge of the game that made him a power for California whatever the play. Stanton made the longest run of the day, 80 yards to a try, and was by far the fastest man on either team. Metcalf and Capt. Chisholm did fine work for Pomona, Metcalf's kicking being a factor in keeping down the score.

STORY OF THE GAME.

The teams lined up at 3 o'clock, California taking the south goal, and the kick off. Whitman kicked off 40 yards straight down the field, the ball rising high and falling with the revolving motion that the Rugby kickers seek to procure. The ball was out into play in the vicinity of the Pomona 25-yard line, and the opening scrums showed the California backs fast and shifty, and puzzling the Pomona players with their swift handling of passes. Two scrums occurred without the ball moving very far in either direction, when on the third it went to the California backs. Whitman got it and started down the field, and past the Pomona left forwards, clearing the second line of defense and landing the ball down back of the Pomona goal posts before three full minutes of play had elapsed. No goal was kicked, although the try was an easy one, and the score stood 3-0 in favor of California.

California looked to be an easy winner from the speedy start she made, but the Pomona players were game and did not seem to be affected by the fact that the score had gone against them so early in the game. On the succeeding kickout California kept the same goal. Metcalf secured the ball and kicked far down into Berkeley territory, where Ostrander returned it, sending it out of touch. Pomona then seized another opportunity to punt, and Whitman running in was tackled and threw the ball into the hands of a Pomona player. Johns got the ball on the next scrum, and was tackled hard by Stevenson, after a short gain. Walden repeated the performance, and was tackled hard by Tuller. Metcalf put the ball into play in the next scrum, but Tuller was off side, and Pomona got a free kick. Metcalf booted the pigskin out of touch and over the fence, and on Tuller's throw out Schaeffer and Stanton worked a combination play for 20 yards and it was California's ball in her own territory. The ball went to Stanton on the next play and the star Los Angeles boy started down the field like a race-horse, outdistancing all the field and eluding Capt. Chisholm, the Pomona fullback by a quick sidestep that was perfect. Stanton's 80-yard run to a try was the feature of the game, and brought the crowd to its feet. Whitman narrowly missed another easy goal and the score was 6-0.

POMONA'S GAME BRACE.

Pomona came bravely to the front at this juncture, and for the entire remainder of the half the ball remained almost incessantly in the blue-and-gold's territory, and at times in dangerously close proximity to the goal line. On the scrum following Metcalf's kick-off, Stanton came very near to repeating his performance. The ball was in identically the same portion of

STANFORD WINS FROM NEVADA.

ROLL UP SCORE OF 11 TO 0 ON THE SAGEBRUSHERS.

Owen of Los Angeles Plays Good Game—Room for Improvement in Rugby as Played on the Coast. Freshmen Rule Rescinded and They Will Play on 'Varsity.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY (Cal.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In the annual football game played this afternoon between Stanford University and the University of Nevada, the Cardinal fifteen had an easy victory over the Sagebrushers with a score of 11-0.

The match was a good one, though not much enthusiasm was shown. The Nevada team put up a hard, plucky fight, but were not well enough versed in the Rugby game to do anything but hold down the superior playing of the Stanfordites. There is still vast room for improvement in Rugby as played on the Pacific Coast. The 'varsity made a good showing in the first game of the year, though they still have many weak points to strengthen. The team showed unusual speed and accuracy in passing and the kicking for the most part was excellent. Fenton, who played full, did some admirable work. There are not many on the team who make more heady and telling plays than the captain, and Bull Chalmers played even better than usual. They are two of the most aggressive and speedy men on the Stanford team.

Owen of Los Angeles, who has the position of half, did some valuable work. He stands a good chance of making the 'varsity. Heinly and Thorpe, both from the south, were among the best of the forwards. Of the Nevada players, St. Clair and Magee were stars. Stanford men who played today will in all probability be those sent south next Saturday to play Pomona College at Pomona. The rule barring freshmen from the 'varsity made by California has, through the influence of President Jordan and Dr. Angell, been rescinded. Freshmen will be able to play in intercollegiate 'varsity matches.

Chicago Rooters Are Pleased With Innovations.

Winning Teams Cannot Score so Many Points.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MADISON (Wis.) Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After helping his team materially to defeat the South Dakota eleven this afternoon, by a score of 10 to 0, Soukup, right halfback of the Wisconsin team, was carried off the field with a broken leg. He was a victim of the open play and running tackles that the new rules bring about. In a long run near the close of the game he was tackled heavily, fell and was carried off the field in an unconscious condition.

The features of the struggle were the one touchdown by Soukup and a drop kick for a goal by Messmer right at the finish. Five minutes after the second half began, Soukup ducked through Dakota's tackles and made a run of 28 yards, resulting in a touchdown, which Messmer stretched to six points by a successful kick. Soukup was again chasing the ball to Dakota's goal when he broke his leg.

NEW RULES POPULAR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a football contest full of exciting play, Chicago this afternoon defeated Purdue by a score of 39 to 0. The new rules made the game more interesting from the spectotars' viewpoint, and also gave plenty of opportunity to the players. Spectacular movement characterized the work of the Maroons, and they gained at practically every stage. Purdue was game, but noticeably outclassed throughout.

The play in the first half was varied. The forward pass was alternated with punting and smashes at the line. Eckersall, Steffen and Finger gained almost at will. The half ended with the score: Chicago, 22; Purdue, 0.

The second half saw many substitutions, but the speed did not slacken to any appreciable extent. Scores kept coming for the Maroons, and when the game closed the tally was Chicago, 39; Purdue, 0.

SCORING IS AFFECTED.

WEAKER TEAMS GAIN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Winning teams in the East so far have scored fewer points than for the same number of games last year, but on the other hand losing teams have scored more points, and the scoring done by the winning teams has reached a very respectable total, even with the frequent nothing-to-nothing games, and it is not so far behind the number of points made in the same period of time last year.

WALCOTT TO FIGHT MELLODY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Honey Mellody and Joe Walcott have been matched to fight fifteen rounds before the Lincoln Club at Chelsea, November 1. Mellody is confident that this battle will result in a more decisive victory. Mike "Twin" Sullivan has challenged Joe Thomas for a fight at 142 pounds ringside for the welterweight championship. If Thomas refuses, the offer is open to Mellody, Jack Dougherty or Harry Lewis.

HARVARD BEATS PASADENA HIGH.

RUN UP SCORE OF 11 TO 0 ON THE VISITING TEAM.

Los Angeles Proves Too Strong for the High School Boys and Have Things Their Own Way at the U.S.C. Grounds—Crary's Catch the Feature.

Harvard School defeated the Pasadena High School by a score of 11-0, yesterday morning, on the U.S.C. football field. The Pasadena boys put up a great fight for the first forty minutes of play, and Harvard was only able to score in the last ten minutes, after wearing their opponents down, when they put the ball over the line twice and Brown succeeded in clearing the bar for one out of the two trials for goal.

The first half saw the ball almost continuously in Pasadena territory, but the Harvard boys were unable to shove it over the line for a score. Pasadena seldom had possession of the ball, and was unable to make any good gains when they did, but at times their line held like a stone wall against the Harvard offense when their goal was in danger.

Harvard again showed the fine individual work that she has manifested in her other games this season while her team work showed a slight improvement, although there is still room for further advance in this line. The interference was good, but the plays and formations did not form themselves as quickly as the work of the individual men would lead one to expect.

The feature of the game was Crary's running catch of Brown's punt in the latter part of the second half. The play gave Harvard the ball on Pasadena's 15 yard line, and was followed by three splendid bucks by Armstrong that scored the first touchdown. Brown failed to kick the goal, which was an easy one. On the succeeding kick-off Harvard began a series of end runs that Pasadena was unable to resist, and after the ball had traversed about half the distance to the Pasadena goal Cline broke away from the field on a tackle play and landed squarely between the goal posts for the second touchdown.

The line-up of the teams follows:

the field, and the speedy little runner again succeeded in breaking away from all of the Pomona forwards, and was speeding down the field with only Chisholm between him and another try. The Pomona captain was too wary to be taken in twice in the same way, and when Stanton tried his old dodge again, he had him around the knees. The run netted U.C. 20 yards, however.

The next play showed the cleverness of the California backs and the beautiful handling of the ball in passing that Coach Taylor has taught them. The ball reached the California back field on the side of the field nearest the spectators, and was passed four times from back to back, the last player to hold it being downed on the opposite line without any gain, but having furnished the bleachers a spectacular series of plays. Schaeffer dropped on the ball and gave it to U.C. on the next down, and on the succeeding play Cerf recovered it after the pass had been missed. Mahoney picked up the ball and carried it 10 yards for Pomona on the next down, but Cerf made a splendid plunge that recovered the distance for his team.

The California backs then repeated their spectacular passing across the field, making five passes in rapid succession in the one play, but Pomona headed off their advance and downed them with no gain. Collins of Pomona covered the ball on the succeeding play, and then Waldron was downed, and California took the ball 10 yards in a series of kicks and passes. Stevenson then sent the ball far into U.C. territory from the middle of a play, sending it rolling over the Berkeley line, and giving California a free kick.

Whitman punted out of bounds on the free kick, and the ball went to Pomona on U.C.'s 40-yard line. Walden heeled a kick from scrummage by Cerf, and Pomona was given a chance to score by a place kick. Chisholm held the ball, and Metcalf made the try, but it fell far short, Whitman catching the ball and punting it back. Pomona tried to kick from U.C.'s 40-yard line, but the kick was partially blocked, and Whitman's return was stopped short. The ball was now on California's 10-yard line. Tuller took advantage of a chance to punt, and on the return, Ostrander was downed back of the line, giving California a second chance to punt out of danger. Whitman's attempted drp kick on the free knick-out was again blocked, and it was U.C.'s ball deep in her own territory again. Whitman nearly broke away on the next play, but was stopped by a hard tackle by Chisholm. Ostrander kicked out of bounds, and the half ended with Pomona in possession of the ball on California's 10-yard line.

SECOND HALF.

The first part of the second half resembled the latter part of the first in that the ball remained in Berkeley territory, but the latter part found the California Rugbyites again within striking distance, and only the most stubborn kind of a defense from Pomona kept the score from being enlarged. During the half several substitutes were put in the game on either side, but these were not necessitated by injuries or fatigue on the part of the players relieved, but because of the coaches' desire to try other men. California substituted Stokes for Cerf at five-eighths, and Friedlander at half, and Pomona replaced Culver with Vaile at five-eighth.

Metcalf made the opening kick-off for Pomona. Stanton made a good kick during the first play that sent the ball over Chisholm's head and rolling deep into Pomona territory, and the Pomona captain was able only to send it a short way back before the U.C. forwards were upon him. Shaitt and Cerf each repeated the performance, but the ball went over the goal line, and gave Pomona a chance for a free kick. Metcalf punted out, and the attempted U.C. return was short. Metcalf got the ball and went straight for 20 yards, and on an attempted punt the U.C. kicker sent the ball into the bleachers for a slight gain. Walden booted the ball along the ground for 20 yards, but shortly afterward Whitman got away for a 40-yard gain. Pomona then made her longest gain of the game, covering 70 yards, 40 of which were made by Baird before he was tackled, and the latter then passed the ball to Mahoney, who covered the rest of the distance. Pomona incurred a short penalty. Dyer got the ball and punted it over Chisholm's head, the latter returning it out of bounds. On the throw-out by Metcalf the ball went to a California player, who carried it up to Pomona's 20-yard line, and from then on to the end of the game Pomona's line was in danger, several times being approached within 5 to 3 yards, but the northerners were unable to score.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE DAY.

Distinctly significant of the English game were the two "touch judges," who followed the play along the side lines and waved their little white flags when the ball went out of touch or the scrum ended.

An unsportsmanlike incident was the fact that the management of the grounds allowed an enterprising local firm to peddle its business in a cheap advertisement between halves. This firm saddled a huge sow and her litter of young with the colors of the contesting teams worked in letters on a background of cloth. The pigs were driven about the field, and the display lent a spirit of commercialism to the scene which is not acceptable in amateur sports.

The grounds were very dry and the dust from the tanbark rose in clouds and choked the players in the scrum. The grounds might have been sprinkled earlier in the day. Unless something is done to the field beofre next Saturday, the Stanford-Pomona game will fail to draw the 2000 people who turned out yesterday afternoon. In a number of other ways the ground keepers conducted the events of the afternoon in a way which did not conserve to the best interests of sport.

Either Lead or Follow.

Oscar Hammerstein was smiling at the extravagant attentions that are lavished by the rich upon pet dogs. He spoke of the canine operators for appendicitis, the canines tooth-crownings, the canine wardrobes, that have recently amazed New York; and then he said:

"How servants hate these pampered curs! At a house where I was calling one warmish day the fat and pompous butler entered the drawing-room and said:

"'Did you ring, madam?'

"'Yes, Harrison. I wish you to take Fido out walking for two hours.'

"Harrison frowned slightly.

"'But Fido won't follow me, madam,' he said.

"'Then, Harrison, you must follow Fido.'"

A Nut to Crack.

H. M. Willis, the Aluminum King, found time one hot day this week to sweat over the following: A man had 60 ducks for sale and divided them into two lots of 30 each. One lot was to be disposed of at three for $1, and the other at two for $1. In his absence his clerk sold the 60 ducks at five for $2, realizing the sum of $24. If sold according to instructions one purchaser would have got 30 ducks for $15 and the other 30 for $10, making $25 for the lot. What became of the missing dollar?—[New York Press.

MERRILL'S MEN HIT TOBOGGAN.

OCCIDENTAL FOOTBALL TEAM LOSES HEART.

Moral Support Not Lacking, but Students Will Not Don Moleskins to Give First Team Practice—Crisis Threatens if Players Will Not Respond to Appeal.

The outlook for football at Occidental is not as good as it was early in the season. A streak of hard luck seems to have fallen upon Merrill's men, and unless the wheel of fortune turns within the next week, the prospect for a successful season will be poor. At the beginning of the week the outlook was better than it has ever been this season, but the men who turned out for the second team have lost courage, and the squad has dwindled down to about sixteen men.

Beal is out of the game for the season, which leaves a big hole to be filled at each end. Hodge has not been out for practice, and it is very likely that he will not play again this season. A wrenched back received in practice early in the season has been growing worse, and Coach Merrill has refused to allow the plucky quarterback to don a suit until the trouble has entirely disappeared. Crane has been off of the field since the U.S.C. game, with a twisted ankle. He will probably be in shape for the next game, but is losing practice. Wieman has a wrenched side and has not been out for practice for two days. Several of the other players are offering various complaints.

Coach Merrill excused the men from practice yesterday afternoon, with the order to report for hard work Monday afternoon. By that time it is hoped that all the men who have minor injuries will be able to get in the game and play hard.

If Hodge is unable to play in the remaining games, Bird probably will play in the back field. He has been playing back of the line for the past two days and has shown up well. Von Schrilts will take his place at left guard and Patterson will play the other guard. Edwards and Holderman are likely candidates for the place left vacant by the retirement of Beal. Deckman will not be able to get into the game again this season on account of his injured shoulder. He would have been the best man available for the end position. If any of the other men are forced to leave the game the team will be irreparably crippled.

MORAL SUPPORT GOOD.

The moral support given to the team by the student body is splendid, but the students cannot be induced to don suits and form a permanent second team. There are many men in the college who would make good football men, but they are lying low. Unless some of them do turn out and make up a second team, the 'varsity will suffer greatly from the lack of practice. Individually the team is strong and all it needs is hard daily practice, and if this is not forthcoming the outcome of even the minor games is dubious.

The schedule as arranged so far is as follows: November 3, Los Angeles High School at Fiesta Park; November 10, St. Vincent's at St. Vincent's; November 24, Pomona at Occidental. Manager Blee tried to arrange a game with Harvard School for October 27, but was unsuccessful. This date and November 17 are open, but probably will be filled.

The "prep" team is rounding into good shape under the direction of Coach Goheen. Several games will be arranged with out-of-town high schools, among which Santa Ana is one. A game was practically arranged with Yale school for today, but was called off at the last moment. The team will be able to make a good showing against the average high school team.

The inability to form a second team to play against the 'varsity may partially be attributed to the forming of the academy team. There are at least six men on the "prep" team who could make a good showing against the college men, but team practice prohibits them from doing so. The average weight of the academy team is so much less than that of the 'varsity that they do not line up against the first team.

At the present time the football situation is very precarious, and the men will have to get over the present slump and a second team will have to be formed if games are to be won.

Now see the condition of the trade. Figures cannot be given that will accurately reflect the industry. By the time they are collected and issued, the industry has again increased so that figures just compiled do not reflect the condition accurately. In Europe there has been a peculiar change.

The early supremacy of Germany has gone—it has been lost for some years to France. Who hears of Benz now? Even the great Mercedes has suffered a decline. Every one thinks, or a year ago did think, of France when foreign car was said. More cars are made there than in any other country perhaps, although America is pressing hard in numbers.

But what is this that comes from the south of Europe, from Italy, that made her first car in 1894? Foreign practice does not mean France exclusively, as it once did. There is the Fiat and the Itala; and the Isotta-Fraschini. Italy is rushing to the front. It is noticeable that the first Fiats were imported into this country three years ago—two of them. Now the Fiat leads the list of foreign importations.

England also is bidding; there is the Napier in particular, and the Daimler and the Rolls-Royce.

From Germany to France, from France in a measure to Italy has the supremacy gone in ten years. In a few more will there be left England and America to struggle for the lead?

How has this progress in ten years affected Los Angeles? Here we did not get the fever as soon as they did in the East. It was in 1897 that the first machine was built in Los Angeles, almost the first to be seen here. Sam Sturgis constructed that. The first machines seen on the streets were electrics, one owned by Mr. Korn being the first. It was an American, a make since defunct, and the battery weighed 1000 pounds. This came along in 1900. The first gasoline wagon was one built by R. E. Olds before he started the Oldsmobile.

In 1901 Charlie Fair created great excitement by appearing in a Panhard that he had imported from France at a cost of $20,000. In the fall of that year the American makes began to appear in Los Angeles. The Winton was handled by the Western Iron Works, and the Locomobile Company of the Pacific put out the little steamers, one of which was bought by Harry Turner. Already the Waverly electric has been brought out, giving W. K. Cowan the claim to being the oldest agent in the business.

The first endurance run held here was in 1902, in which two Wintons took part. Others were invited, but they didn't show up. The run was to show that the cars could go the immense distance to Riverside and back in a day. They did it, with a few stops.

Compare that condition of the trade with the present—three or four agencies of cars, and an endurance run with two participants against the greatest endurance run ever held in America to the same place four years later, and more than half a hundred different makes of cars on the local markets.

This may surprise some people. To show that there is no guess-work about it, here is a list of the cars sold in Los Angeles. Some of the names may raise a question, as a few of them are very new—but the agents are ready to sell them.

Acme, Aerocar, American, Atlas, Autocar, Berkshire, Buick, Cadillac, Cartercar, Cleveland, Columbia, Columbia Electric, Compound, Deere, Dolson, Dorris, Elmore, Federal, Ford, Franklin, Frayer-Miller, Gale, Glide, Graut, Haynes, Jackson, Johnson, Jewel, Knox, Lambert, Locomobile, Marion, Marmon, Maxwell, Merkel, Mitchell, Moline, Monarch, National, Napier, Northern, Oldsmobile, Packard, Paragon, Peerless, Pierce, Pope-Toledo, Pope-Tribune, Pope-Waverly, Premier, Queen, Rambler, Reo, Royal, Reliance, Soules, St. Louis, Stoddard-Dayton, Stevens-Duryea, Studebaker, Thomas, E. R. Thomas, Tourist, Waltham, Wayne, White and Winton. There are 68. Can any one add to the list?

In four years we have grown from three or four cars to sixty-eight, and are clamoring for more. That shows how the industry has grown.

HOW THE CROWD INVITED DEATH.

RALPH HAMLIN TELLS ABOUT VANDERBILT RACE.

Franklin Agent Was Hundred Feet from Gruner When Elliott Shepard Killed Him—Tracy's Passing on His Record Lap Was Swish and Roar and Little More.

Ralph Hamlin, who thinks the Franklin is the only thing on wheels, has just come home from a trip to the factory and a run down to the Vanderbilt race. He mourns $10 he put up for using a bed in a country hotel from 10 p.m. to 3 a.m. the night before the race, but he says it was the finest thing he ever saw. Hamlin was at Krug's Corner when Elliott Shepard in his Hotchkiss killed Kurt L. Gruner.

"A lot of different stories have been told about that," said Hamlin yesterday, "but most of them were incorrect. I was within a hundred feet of the spot where it happened, and saw the whole thing. The corner was protected by a high fence of wire netting until it looked like a chicken coop, but as the race went on, the crowd broke down the fence and surged into the road. You've seen the finish of a bicycle race, where the crowd leaves a lane just big enough for a man to run through. It was the same way there, with those big cars rushing down and swaying from side to side.

"Tracy had just gone by on his record-breaking lap, and the crowd rushed onto the course to see him tear down the straightaway to the grandstand. The flagmen waved their flags and those in the rear of the crowd saw two cars coming down, one behind the other. They shouted 'Car coming!' and pulled those in front back from the course, and the crowd opened up just enough to let the front car through. While the officials were still shouting to the crowd to get back, this man Gruner walked into the middle of the road to watch the disappearing car, and before anybody could pull him back the following car, which was driven by Shepard, struck him and killed him.

"Something that looked like a shoe was thrown as high as the telegraph pole. This was one foot that had been cut off. The body went twenty feet, and lay there several hours, covered with a blanket, because the course was so crowded that the Coroner could not get there.

"It was the left front wheel which hit the man, and Shepard did not know he had killed him. Shepard made a big swerve to avoid him, and supposed that he got clear. When the car stopped for gasoline the mechanic, who was on the left, said to Shepard, 'Wasn't it awful?' Shepard didn't know what he meant, and the mechanic told him he had killed a man. It unnerved him so that he withdrew.

"It was a horrible sight, but at the same time you felt that in a rough kind of way it was something like justice. Those who know the automobile game and its dangers were so indignant at the way the crowd rushed over the course that they felt it was retribution. In spite of the constant warning of the officials they filled the course, after cutting with wire nippers the fence that was supposed to keep them back. It would have taken guards with rifles to keep the course clear.

"I tell you, when Tracy was making that record round, any one could tell he was going. The flags waved way up the line, there was a roar like a big wind, and something gray lurched into sight. In a flash you were staring wildly at something disappearing down the end of three miles of road. You just felt he had gone past, without really seeing it. It was an amazing thing.

"After seeing the Vanderbilt race I went to Syracuse and camped at the Franklin factory for nearly a week. I had a ride in the new six-cylinder, and by the way, the statement that its wheel base is only 120 inches is a mistake. It's 126, and it's a beautiful wagon. The last day I was there they got out the first car for regular delivery, and sent it away for the final testing. Before I left, three more cars were turned out, so you can see how they are coming. A carload for me left the factory today."

Augustine comes into the Villa les Favoris to do odd jobs, for which I pay her a dying wage. She is, by profession, a shrimpist from Etaples. Yesterday I found her examining my tooth brush with great care. She enquired what it was for. I explained the functions of a tooth brush. She looked at me in surprise, and queries: "But doesn't that injure the teeth?"—[Figaro.

AUTOS FLOUT E'EN ROYALTY.

These Untamed Carriers Respect Neither King, Queen Nor Commoner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Both King Edward and Queen Alexandra have been experiencing the trouble of automobile breakdowns in different parts of the country. Last week the King was going to Newmarket, but on reaching the station where his automobile was in waiting, the machine, much to the perturbation of the chauffeur, refused to budge.

The King, after waiting awhile, sent for an ordinary hansom and drove off with his equerry.

The Queen the other day was driving from Balmoral to get a train for Sandringham, when a tire of her automobile burst, followed by the snapping of the chain with such force as to crush through the dashboard. After waiting awhile a dogcart passed on the way to Balmoral. Into this the Queen got and sat herself beside the bewildered driver. She bade him to drive back to Ballater railway station.

INTO THE GAME AGAIN.

C. S. Anthony Will Blossom Out With a New Garage and a New Line of Cars.

C. S. Anthony, formerly president of the Elmore Automobile Company, has returned to Los Angeles after a trip among the eastern factories, and announces that he is going into the automobile game again. What is more, he is going into it hard.

O. T. Johnson is going to build for his use a large garage and machine shop at Nos. 110-114 East Ninth street, near the present Ford agency. This shop will have a frontage of sixty feet and a depth of 120, giving over 7000 square feet of floor space. At present there is a blacksmithing shop on the premises, but this will be removed and the work of constructing an up-to-date garage begun immediately. The contract has been let, and the builder guarantees completion of the building in thirty days. The place will be equipped in the most modern manner, both in the garage part and in the shop.

Mr. Anthony went the rounds of the factories, and he has secured the agency for cars that have never before been represented in Southern California. One of these is a car that is well known in the East, the Marmon. This is made by the Nordyke & Marmon Company of Indianapolis. It exhibits several unique points. One is a double three-point suspension arrangement, which allows a shaft drive without cardan joints or universal couplings.

The engine is quite unusual. It is a four-cylinder, with the cylinders set at 90 degrees angle, and the cooling is by air. The arrangement of the cylinders is said to assist the cooling a great deal. The present models are rated at 20-24 and 26-30 horse-power. The company has recently announced that for 1907 it will bring out an eight-cylinder car of much greater horse-power, along with the present lines, which will be continued.

Mr. Anthony has also secured the agency for the Monarch, which is a newcomer. This car was made in a small way by a man who was for some time head machinist in the Ford and Winton factories. It turned out so well that some Chicago capitalists have organized a plant to built it near Chicago, and it will be placed on the market in larger quantities this year. It is a light touring car and runabout, a two-cylinder opposed motor under the body. The motor is cooled by air through mechanical means, something after the fashion of the Frayer-Miller.

Mr. Anthony is also thinking of taking on two other lines, one of which is a car well known in the East, but never yet seen in this part of the State.

Tomorrow he expects a Marmon demonstrator, and is going to keep things going with that until he can get into his new place.

Walter Holst, a Los Angeles man, accompanied Mr. Anthony to the factories, and will be associated with him in the new business.

BIG SIX A BEAUTY.

Six-Cylinder Stevens-Duryea Arrives, First of Large 1907 Cars.

First of the big 1907 cars to arrive is the six-cylinder Stevens-Duryea, one of which the Western Motor Car Company has just delivered to A. B. Daniels. This car is little different in its specifications from the "Big Six" of 1906, no specimen of which reached the Coast. It has a little longer wheel base, and a little more power, but it follows very closely the regular Stevens-Duryea lines—flywheel in front, three point suspension, light weight in construction, etc.

Mechanically, the car is fitted thus: Six cylinders with 4 3-4-inch bore and 5 1-4 stroke, jump-spark ignition, special diaphragm carburettor, three-speed progressive type transmission, and shaft drive. As all six-cylinder cars do, it picks up very rapidly, and is said to have a range of from 4 to 75 miles an hour on the high.

The finish of the car is remarkable and striking. Mr. Daniels selected the colors, and picked out a gray which the company thought it couldn't manage at first, but they have turned out a very fine piece of body work. The main color is a warm French gray, with the lines of the body picked out in a blue gray. The running gear is a peculiar red, very sumptuous indeed, which an artist says is Chinese vermillion with a dash of crimson lake. The upholstery and fittings are in red, and the car is one of the handsomest that has appeared on the Coast.

Mr. Daniels will take the car to San Diego today, as he has abandoned Santa Barbara for Coronado this year.

SHOW GOES TO COMMITTEE.

Automobile Dealers Vote to Investigate Several Offers Made—Riverside Hill-Climb Discussed.

At the Automobile Dealers' Association of Southern California meeting held last evening, the Standard Motor Car Company was elected to membership, making twenty-seven members.

The matter of an automobile show this winter was thoroughly discussed and the association is going to take the matter up. They have several different propositions offered them and a special executive committee of four has been appointed to close arrangements for the show. This committee is comprised of A. J. Smith, Mr. Brown of the Tourist, Mr. Gouty of the Middleton Motor Car Company and Mr. Ryus of the White Garage.

The matter of the Riverside hill climb on Thanksgiving was discussed and it was decided to try to secure the sanction of the proper authorities at Riverside to make this an annual event held under the auspices of the Automobile Dealers' Association of Southern California. Action will be taken on this matter, October 22, at a special meeting called for that purpose.

STATION WAGON FOR HOTEL.

Lankershim Will Have a White Steamer, Capable of Carrying Fourteen.

The Lankershim Hotel has just placed an order for a White station wagon, which will soon be delivered to them. The car will be among the first of the 1907 Whites seen in Los Angeles, and it will be of the new 30 horsepower variety. The power plant and transmission system of the car will be just the same as in the present models as far as principle goes, the only changes being in the increased size and the inclusion of a feed water heater, which will be a feature of all the 1907 models.

The chassis for this station wagon is not, however, the regular 1907 chassis. It is the chassis used in the ambulance wagons recently supplied to the United States government, and is slightly longer than the ordinary one, having also a larger overhang over the rear axle.

The wagon has a seating capacity of fourteen. The rear portion is inclosed, and is fitted with full coupé doors at the sides. These are of exceptionally large dimensions, so that ingress and egress are easy.

The interior is fitted with electric lights, fed from a storage battery, and all the other paraphernalia necessary to comfort.

BABIES FROM MANY NATIONS.

TINY TOTS HOLD THE BOARDS AT BEST SHOW EVER.

Every Youngster Wins a Prize and Fond Mothers' Hearts Are Glad. Plain and Pretty Darlings All Alike and Each Gets a Badge and Ribbon.

Cooing, crwing, crowing babies held the boards in the East Los Angeles Congregational Church yesterday afternoon. It was a show of little ones. Scores of bright-eyed toddlers, and others who could not toddle, captivated the hearts of the throng which enjoyed the novel sight.

Delighted mamas brought their little darlings, decked in snowy white dresses and adorned with monstrous bows of baby ribbon. There was no competition. They were all so sweet that the directors decided to have "just a baby show." Each won a badge and ribbon.

The church was fairly alive with tots from two weeks to three years old. Babies of many nationalities were brought, and the Woman's Work Society, under whose auspices the show was given, provided for the comfort of all.

Palm branches, smilax, scarlet geraniums and heavy folds of scarlet crepe paper made a bower of the auditorium, where booths were arranged. Pretty girls sold candy and ice cream.

About 3 o'clock the curtains were swung aside and before the audience sat nearly two hundred babies with their mothers all dressed in native costume. The pretty little ones were daintily gowned in white, with the exception of the foreign babies. All the embroideries, laces and ribbons that could be found were used by the proud mothers to adorn the pride of their hearts. Each baby wore a pink ribbon badge, significant of its attendance at the baby show. Of course it was impossible to keep them from talking.

There was a short programme. Miss Rubsch pleased her hearers with a piano selection; Mrs. Godsmark sang several cradle songs; Miss Delta Katt gave a violin solo.

When it was impossible to hold order any longer, the mothers, with their babies, stepped from the platform and mingled with the audience. Everybody then had a chance to gaze into the little blue and brown eyes as much as they pleased. The little Indian baby only 4 months old, all bound up in a cradle, which was carried in the mother's arms, was more popular than her American sisters. So anxious was everybody to see this little child that a crowd encircled the Indian mother all the afternoon, and the only possible way to obtain a glimpse was to climb up a ladder and look down between the many bonnets which were bending over the cradle.

The babies behaved well and seemed to enjoy the treat. For two hours the exhibition claimed the attention of the large audience. Then, in a wild scramble, the babies were allowed to go, and the prettiest baby show ever held here came to a close.

"CRAP" GAMES RAIDED.

Constable De la Monte and Deputies Arrest Seven Men at Ascot Park.

In a raid on "crap" games at Ascot Park, late yesterday afternoon, Constable De la Monte, assisted by Deputies C. R. Thomas, E. F. Simpson, B. L. Hutchins and W. P. Holman, arrested seven men. The officers came upon the players without warning. There were many present, but the representatives of the law were recognized and the crowd melted away like magic.

Voll Roth, who was dealing a "banking game," was captured in the first raid. In the second, Fred Wilson, L. E. Morgan, Charles Johnson, M. Hall, Walter Hensel, and Charles Moore fell into the dragnet. When the constables appeared, Wilson tried to escape, but was unsuccessful.

While the prisoners were being brought into the city, Thomas, at Fortieth street, suddenly jumped from the car and ran, but he was overtaken by Constable Thomas.

In addition to the prisoners, the officers secured a quantity of dice and gambling paraphernalia.

After the raid citizens living in the vicinity of Ascot Park were loud in their praise of Constable De la Monte. "God bless you!" said one man; "you have done a great work today."

Milk as Pumpkin Food.

A milk fed pumpkin is the latest development in agricultural circles. Two pumpkins, grown on the same vine, were on exhibition at the Tazewell county, Illinois, fair. They stood side by side, but one was ten times larger than the other. The giant absorbed a pint of milk a day through a hole cut in the vine which was attached to the stem. The milk was completely absorbed over night. The small brother attained natural growth, but the milk-fed one weighed 100 pounds.

BOYS TRAIN FOR BATTLE.

Abe Attell and Harry Baker in Good Condition.

O'Brien Strikes Big Snag in Tremble's Jaw.

Green Helps Keep Order in San Bernardino.

Fight fans have centered their attention on the coming battle between Abe Attell and Harry Baker for the featherweight championship of the world, which is to take place before the Pacific Athletic Club on the night of October 31. The boys will fight for the usual 50 per cent. and a 60-40 split for the fighters' end.

Of all the featherweights in the country, Harry Baker is the man most likely to defeat Attell, the title holder, and the sports are watching the training of the young boxer with a great deal of interest. Harry began active training last Monday and is hammering away at a regular routine, in which he will increase his work until a few days before the fight, when he will ease up. He looks to be in fine condition at this stage of the game and should round out nicely.

Attell is also pegging away. He is a veteran of many training camps and knows the ropes throughout the long, and sometimes tedious, training period. He is doing his work at Arcadia at the same place Tommy Burns trained for his fight with Flynn. There is no better place in the country for pure air charged with abundance of ozone, than which there is nothing better to build up physical abilities.

Baker has the Flynn camp at the East Side Athletic Club, and is rapidly taking off superfluous flesh. He began in fair condition and will have no trouble either in getting to weight or in hardening for a fast contest. Eddie Webster, who trained Flynn, is looking after Baker's work, and the latter's two brothers are assisting. Eddie Menny serves as sparring partner.

SOLOMON'S CHALLENGE.

If Harry Baker cannot turn the trick of whipping Attell there is no one in this neck of the woods who has a chance, with the possible exception of Benny Solomon, whose friends stand ready to back him for a match with the featherweight champion. Solomon is going to challenge the winner of the fight and it looks as though he ought to be given some consideration.

Benny attained some ill-repute last winter in his go with George Green, when it was charged that he had fixed the fight to lose to the Chicago scrapper, but Benny swears solemnly that he is innocent as a babe and says he has circumstantial evidence to prove it. As the months have slipped by, fight followers are inclined to overlook the incident, with the possible exception of a few who attained notoriety in exploiting the alleged crookedness. Whether or not Solomon was guilty of misdemeanor, it is believed that in future he will be good, and surely he is entitled to a chance to prove so, if Joe Gans was forgiven.

Solomon's friends say that Attell would not be able to damage Solomon and the latter would have a good opportunity to get to the little champion. Solomon has the punch, and if he could land a few of them on Abe he would have a chance to lift the title.

TREMBLE'S "PAPER JAW."

Jack O'Brien was filled with so much dope on the "paper jaw" said to be possessed by Jim Tremble that naturally he went in to punch that physical feature from Jim's anatomy, from the start. It took Jack nine rounds to do it by consistent hammering. The next day O'Brien cut a swath to McCarey's office and attempted to hold the manager responsible for the story that got out.

"I thought every one told me that man has a paper jaw," snapped Jack. "Well, if he has, it must be made of roofing paper."

McCarey gave Jack the laugh and assured him he was as much surprised as any one. In fact, Tremble surprised every one by his staying powers, and those who looked for him to drop off into slumber when that jaw was touched were disappointed.

Jack O'Brien expects to go into training November 1. He probably will retain his quarters at Chutes Park. He may secure the Turk to train with him. Abdul expects to get a good preliminary match in one of the next two fights. Bill Gaines is willing to go on with the Turk, provided his foot recovers. Gaines was driving a milk wagon before his go with Godfrey, and caught his foot in the reins and fell, causing a sprain.

FIGHTERS BLOW IN.

Several eastern fighters blew into town during the past week and are waiting for the drop of the hat to get busy. Los Angeles' fame has gone throughout the United States, and this city is becoming the center of attraction for a good class of mit artists. So far the men who drift in here mean business, and no rowdies have shown up. None other will be taken into McCarey's camp.

The latest arrivals are Mike Haney, Al Green and Kid Smith. Few persons about here have ever heard of this trio, but back East they are well known as good third raters. Haney and Smith have been fighting in and about Philadelphia, and have a good local reputation. Green comes from Detroit.

Smith is slated for Montana Kid's next opponent, and the bout will be pulled off as a preliminary before one of the big battles. Haney is being saved for some big game. He is the class of the bunch and fights at 135 pounds. Smith can make 128 and Green is a lightweight at 122. Green is a hard nut, they say, but says he is not looking for a match at the present time. He wants to get in good condition and will train with Haney when the latter gets on with some one. He says that none of these quick matches suit him.

"No man can get in shape for a bout in less than three weeks," says Green. "I will not step into the ring with any one on a few days' notice. You cannot do yourself, the club or the public justice. I will work out gradually, and then if there is a match in sight I will be glad to take it on, but I don't want to force myself either on Mr. McCarey or the Los Angeles public. So I will lay low until the time comes. When I fight I want to do the best I can and be in the best possible shape. I don't want to get in the ring and let a fight run to the limit. I expect to put my man away as quickly as possible or he will put me away."

GREEN'S ADVENTURE.

Green is a modest boy and talks little of himself. From another in the party the story of an encounter in San Bernardino came out. The boys reached there several weeks ago, and the first thing they did was to visit Urbita Springs. As luck would have it, they found a big machinist playing the bully in the pool. He would thrash every one about in the water and pushed women and children off the edge into the pool, and none too gently.

Green no more than came in sight before the fellow ordered him to hold out his hand, purposing, no doubt, to jerk him into the water. Green refused and the fellow started something. Green feinted with his left and smashed a right hander to the solar plexus. The burly machinist fell forward, and as he did so Green ripped two uppercuts to the face and opened two big cluts over the eyes. Another blow in the jaw laid the fellow out.

Green was put under arrest, but the women made a demonstration and demanded his release. When the facts became known the manager called it all off and took Green on as an employé of the place. The machinist's friends tried to start a row a few days later, but Green offered to take them back of the building and whip them one at a time, but they backed out. Green and his friends preserved order about the place for days without any one finding out that they were prize fighters.

An effort was made to pull off a bout in San Bernardino, but it is alleged that the Mayor demanded a license fee of $100, and it was thought that this was too big a handicap to overcome in a small town on a new venture with no backers.

O'BRIEN WILL BOX JEFFRIES.

TWO HEAVIES TO SPAR IN AID OF POLICE FUND.

Exhibition Comes Off Next Week on Friday and Saturday and Little Abe Attell Is Also on the Card. Billy Arlington to Furnish Good Minstrel Company.

James J. Jeffries and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien will box for the entertainment of those who see the Police Relief Association's Minstrels at Simpson Auditorium, October 26 and 27. This card, an attraction which would draw men hundreds of miles, if put on under the auspices of a sporting club, will be possible because of the desire of both boxers to help the men of the department. Abe Attell, famous for his cleverness, will spar. This appearance of three champions is incidental to the main entertainment—Billy Arlington's minstrels.

Arlington has drawn together from the best theaters in Los Angeles a lot of talent, which will amuse the audience with a lively and up-to-date minstrel show. A number of novel things will be on this end of the programme.

As to Jeffries and O'Brien—they were seen the other day by officers, who have the affair in charge. Both expressed their eagerness to do anything possible to aid the entertainment. Jeffries is postponing a northern business trip, and O'Brien has materially changed his plans that he may help the fund.

The Los Angeles Police Relief Association for whom all this is being done, is an organization composed of the rank and file of the police department of this city. Its purpose is to help the sick and disabled officers. Each member pays small monthly dues. In return for this he gets a stated sum per month when ill or disabled by hurts. The proposition is separate and apart from the police pension fund.

Sale of tickets has been heavy. Out of a desire to help the association many business and professional men have bought, and at the same time hundreds have purchased tickets, knowing that they will see an entertainment of unusual merit. When it became known yesterday that big Jeffries and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien are to come together on the two evenings the sales began to jump. Indications now point to a crowded house. Saturday afternoon a matinée will be given, and at this in the place of the boxers will be a series of moving pictures, illustrating O'Brien's trip through England. This will be the first time the pictures have been shown in America.

WEBB SPEAKS AT SAN PEDRO.

TELLS VOTERS OF THE NEED OF GUARDING HARBOR.

Pays Tribute to Nominee Gillett and Assures Citizens That Republican Standard Bearer Would Safeguard Their Interests If Elected Chief Executive of Golden State.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN PEDRO, Oct. 20.—Attorney-General U. S. Webb addressed a Republican meeting at the Wetherby last night. He took as his text San Pedro harbor and its franchises, and was given close attention by those present. He said in part:

"The importance of San Pedro and her harbor has not heretofore been fully considered. The completion of the Panama Canal, the largest engineering feat ever attempted in the world's history, will play an important part in the world's commerce. We have on the Pacific Coast 800 miles of coast line and only four important ports: one at the extreme north, one at the extreme south, San Francisco and San Pedro.

"The United States government is standing fairly and squarely behind San Pedro and spending millions for the development of the port. The government controls the navigable waters of your harbor, but not the tide lands. The State of California controls the water front between the uplands and the line of navigable water. The city of San Pedro controls the water front within its incorporate limits. The same is true of Wilmington and Long Beach. Outside of these incorporations the land is controlled by the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county.

"The feasibility and advisability of granting franchises and privileges within your corporate limits rests with your Board of Trustees. The policy of the government is to turn local government over to local boards. You have not an unlicensed or unlimited right in these matters, but they are controlled by law. A franchise right does not carry title to property, but is merely a privilege to use or occupy.

"I am not opposed to corporations or capital simply because it is a corporation. Neither would it be fair American or honest to criticize a corporation because it is a rich one. But the tendency of large corporations to infringe or crowd upon others' rights is responsible for much of the special legislation regulating them.

"Your city and your county have granted privileges from time to time on San Pedro harbor. My opponents on the other tickets have waxed brave since the beginning of this campaign, and have told you they would restore this property to you by having these franchises declared void. I do not know whether any of the franchises in or around San Pedro harbor are illegally held. Neither can others say. It would not surprise me if some were illegal. But boards of trustees and county supervisors are usually careful.

"Every City Council in the State of California is vested by law to grant franchise. No record other than local records are kept of these grants. No State officer can know the character of these grants unless he goes through the books of every county and city in the State.

"It is the official duty of San Pedro city to complain to the Governor or to the Attorney-General if the city feels that privileges are illegally held. It is also the privilege and duty of any citizen to make a similar complaint if, after investigation, he believes privileges to be illegally granted or held. You have been told that the present Attorney-General was owned and controlled by corporations. I have never heard that your water front was encroached upon or wrongfully held until these other gentlemen told you so for purely political reasons. No city or citizen has ever made complaint to me. Should such a complaint have been made all I would want to know would be whether the maintainance of the action would be for the benefit of the general public.

"If there is any portion of your water front claimed to be held illegally and of which the grant is invalid I have always been ready to help you, and I am not promising anything not given you under the law. The same thing would have been done by any other Attorney-General for the past fifty years."

When the Tortoise Awoke.

The tortoise is a great sleeper. One was a domestic pet in in English house, and when his time for hibernating came he selected a corner of the dim coal cellar for his winter quarters. A new cook was engaged soon after, who knew nothing of tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awestruck wonder, and exclaiming as with unsteady hand she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

We are dead against policemen in politics. We are, indeed! But we feel sad, faint in the mid-ribs, to read of the scrape which that Atlanta policeman got into for hugging Hoke Smith when Hoke was nominated to be Governor of good old Georgia. He hugged Hoke and may lose his star. He was overjoyed and in his ecstacy hugged Hoke. Many a man hugs a delusion or hugs his wife and nothing is done about it, but this poor devil down in Atlanta hugged Hoke, hugged Hoke hard, and now he is to suffer for it as though he had furtively hugged an unwilling widow on the back porch. It's too bad.—[Philadelphia Record.

BAYONETS STOP CHAUFFEURS.

Reckless Auto Drivers Halt When Guards of Uncle Sam Beckon.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOLDIERS' HOME, Oct. 20.—Guards, armed with rifle and bayonet fixed, are, for the first time in the history of this branch of the Soldiers' Home, on duty on the home grounds.

A section of the San Vicente boulevard, intended to traverse a point in the home from Westgate on the northwest to Sunset boulevard on the southeast, has been under construction for some time, and at each end a fence has been placed (in removable sections) to secure the work until finished.

There is a side road which parallels the home's boundary on the west, affording the necessary continuation of travel for vehicles, with but a few moments' difference in time to make connection of boulevards, without trespassing on the proscribed unfinished road.

But selfishly thoughtless chauffeurs, impatient of the obstruction, have removed the fencing, thus cutting up the grading, until it was found necessary to resort to the armed guards with loaded guns.

Autoists and reckless chauffeurs will be compelled to observe the "no thoroughfare" rule, until the road is completed, or take the consequences.

Unclaimed British Prize Money.

The days when prize money was looked upon in the navy as an ordinary source of income are recalled by a notification from the admiralty of money waiting to be claimed—the proceeds of bounties for the destruction of pirates and of the sale of slave ships, says the British Court Journal. There is a sum of £5000 from the sale of slaving vessels captured in the '60s awaiting claimants, also a goodly amount of naval prize money and £2800 bounty for the destruction of pirates which nobody applies for. Some of those to whom the money is due are, no doubt, still alive, but if they are dead they probably left descendants who if the names were advertised would be forthcoming to substantiate their claims. As it is, there is little demand for the money in hand. During twelve months dealt with in the statement issued from Whitehall under £8 has been paid out.

Copper Kills Germs.

"Copper is a marvelous preventive of disease. If we returned to the old copper drinking vessels of our forefathers, typhoid epidemics would disappear."

The speaker, a filtration expert, took a copper cent from his pocket.

"Examine this cent under the microscope," he said, "and you will find it altogether free from disease germs. WOOD SHOES IS A PITCHER.

hamps Slug a Victory in the First Four Innings.

ooloos Present Very Badly Patched Team.

Portland 10; Los Angeles 3.

Right Fielder Cravath might have en a pitcher if some other kind or kind fate had not put him in to tch, at first, and then thrown him to the field. He came in yesterday m right field to the box after Burns d been touched up for six runs and hits in the first four innings and le he did not save the game he anked the Champs for three innings d then was found for four swats d four runs that the other fellows n't need.

It was another case of the Champs gging the ball hard and when this done there is little chance to keep runs from rolling in. After the amps had won the game in the th off Burns, Cravath came in and fans spent the balance of the game cheering Cravath when he held the hamps down and wondering how any runs he could keep them from aking.

The game was played under the andicap of a sandstorm. that swept ross the diamond the greater part f the afternoon and it is a wonder ere were not seventeen errors instead f seven. At times the fielders in right d center could not be seen for dust louds and no on can play ball under hese conditions. The infield was just bad and the eyes of every player ere filled with flying sand half the me.

This didn't keep Sweeney of the hamps from playing his usual great ame at short and he took all kinds f chances without a blunder, having ve cuts and seven assists. Brashear d Smith, at third, also ate everyhing that went to that corner, but ene of the errors really made any ifference in the runs, for the Champs lugged enough in to win the game.

The Looloos presented a badly atched up team, for Pitcher Ranolph was in center, and in the fourth ning Burns was taken out of the ox and traded places with Cravath n right field. In the last of the fifth Carlisle traded places with Burns in ight field and the team ended the me in a very muddled condition.

Califf pitched steady ball, the only al damage being done to him in the cond, when with two out he passed Carlisle and the next three men hit him for singles, and two runs scored. In the sixth, with one out, he passed Dillon and he scored on Carlisle's single, McHale's juggle of it and Toman's out.

The Champs got their first two on doubles by Sweeney and McHale and McCreedie's swat to left. The next four came from three singles; a sacrifice; a fielder's choice that resulted in nothing; Burns's wild throw and Sweeney's fly to right. The next two came from a pass and two singles and the final bunch from a double; a single; an error and a fruitless fielder's choice.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive patch.] For three successive years American League has drawn more ple to the games than the National gue. The National League was orized in 1876, and the American gue came to life in 1900. During season just closed 5,719,239 persons e attracted to the games of the two or baseball organizations. Of this the American League drew 2,938,- and the National League, 2,781,213, g the American the advantage by 81. The total number of persons attended the games decreased the total of 1905 by 85,000, the erican League showing a falling of 32,654, while the National exhib a gain of 36,902.

significant feature of the figures, ch are, of course, unofficial, is that Yankees outdrew the Giants by the first time they have done so.

"BUCK" EWING STRIKES OUT.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CINCINNATI (O.) Oct. 20.—William Buckingham Ewing, known all over the United States as "Buck" Ewing, the famous baseball catcher, died this afternoon at his home in this city. His death was due to diabetes and paralysis. Ewing was a native of this city but was connected with the New York National League team longer than was any other single baseball player. He leaves a widow, a son and a daughter.

Randolph May Remain.

There is no news in the story that Randolph may leave the local team for the big league next year. It is said that he has been dickering for some time with several big teams, and yet may remain in Los Angeles, as he likes the town and the way he has been received here. He does not belong in Los Angeles, but to the Oakland club, but declares he will not go back there to pitch next year, because it is a bum place.

PECULIARITIES OF BALL GAMES.

BEST BATTING TEAMS DO NOT ALWAYS WIN.

Chicago White Sox Were Poorest Hitters in Big League With Exception of Boston Americans, Yet They Are World's Champions and Earned the Title.

Statistics of big league baseball indicate very queer conditions. The Chicago White Sox, world's champions, are absolutely last so far as team batting and long-distance hitting goes, and are only second in fielding. On the other hand, Cleveland leads in club batting, long distance hitting, and fielding, yet had no real show at the end to win the pennant.

These conditions indicate that inside work and good pitching are the real factors in winning games and pennants, and the lessons taught will serve to introduce a change of tactics in many teams next season. Spectacular playing and long hitting do not always win contests. No doubt Cleveland puts up a fine exhibition for spectators to see, but if she does not win games the patrons leave the grounds with a dissatisfied feeling.

Unofficial figures show the following:

CLUB BATTING.

Nationals—Chicago leads with a percentage of .267, Pittsburgh is second with .266, and New York third with .254. Others follow: Philadelphia .246, Cincinnati .244, Brooklyn .238, St. Louis .238, Boston .229.

Americans—Clevelands leads with .280, New York is second with .270, and St. Louis third with .254. Others follow: Athletics .250, Boston .244, Detroit .243, Washington .242, Chicago .236.

CLUB FIELDING.

Nationals—Chicago is ahead in club fielding, having made but 195 errors in a total of 6211 chances, for an average of .969. Pittsburgh is second, with an average of .965. New York, .964; Cincinnati, .960; Brooklyn, .957; St. Louis, .959; Philadelphia, .957; and Boston, .919 come in the order name.

Americans—Cleveland leads in fielding, as she does in everything else but club standing, with a percentage of .969, the same as the leaders in the National League. Chicago is second, with .965, the same as Pittsburgh. Detroit is third, with .963, and others follow: Philadelphia, .961; St. Louis, .958; Washington, .958; New York, .957, and Boston, .953.

LONG HITTING.

Nationals—Chicago holds the record for long hits, with a total of 649 extra bases, including 26 home runs, 71 three-baggers, and 174 doubles. Brooklyn is second, with 591 extra bases, 26 home runs, 71 triples and 137 doubles. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, New York, St. Louis and Boston come in the order named.

Of the individual sluggers, Lumley of Brooklyn is far ahead with 139 extra bases, including 10 home runs, 19 triples, and 21 doubles. Jordan of Brooklyn is second with 114 extra bases, including 12 home runs, 8 triples, and 21 doubles. Magee, Wagner, Schulte, Nealon and Steinfeldt come in the order named. Nealon has 92 extra bases, including 3 homers, 12 triples, and 22 doubles. The great Wagner, who leads in batting, has only 2 home runs to his credit, but he hit out 9 triples and 38 home runs. His extra bases total 111.

American League—The Cleveland team easily leads the league in extra bases, having a total of 782. It only has 13 home runs, but makes up for the lack of them with 82 triples and 242 doubles. The failure of Lajoie to hit out a single home run is the reason of the scarcity of the baseball commodity. The Athletics are second with a total of 724. There are 32 home runs to their credit, 54 triples and 217 doubles. New York, Boston, Washington, St. Louis, Detroit, and Chicago finish in the order named. Chicago has but 498 extra bases to its credit, with but seven home runs, 50 triples, and 100 doubles.

Davis of the Athletics leads the individual sluggers with 158 extra bases, including 12 home runs, eight triples, and 43 doubles. Flick is second with one home run, 24 triples, and 34 doubles. Stone is third with six homers, 20 triples, and 28 doubles. Lajoie, who comes next, has but nine triples, but leads with 50 doubles. Hickman is fifth, and has nine home runs. Ferris, Crawford, Turner, Conroy, Hemphill, Chase, and Williams follow in the order named. Chase has no home runs to his credit, but has 12 triples and 28 doubles, for a total of 92 extra bases.

BASE RUNNERS.

Nationals—Chance is the boss base runner, stealing 59 bases in 136 games, for an average of .428 per game. Wagner is second with 56 in 140 games, for an average of .400. Magee is third with 53 in 153 games, for .346.

Americans—Hoffman did the best work, stealing 36 bases in 103 games, for an average of .350. Altizer is second with 35 in 115 games, for an average of .303. Isbell is third with 40 in 143, for .280

LEADING PITCHERS.

Reulbach and Plank Have the Best Averages in the Big Leagues for Season.

According to the averages, Reulback of the Chicago Nationals and Plank of the Philadelphia Athletics are the two best pitchers in this country. Each won 19 games and lost but 4, giving a winning average of .926. A peculiar incident is the fact that Reulbach received a poor start and lost most of his games early in the season, while Plank began to lose near the end of the season because of a sore arm.

Reulbach is a sensational twirler with limited big league experience, but he will prove one of the greatest for years to come if he goes at this season's pace. Plank is as good a southpaw as can be found anywhere, and never pitched better ball than this season up to the time he was injured. He has had several years' big league experience. Following are the averages of the twirlers who won half or more of their games:

Directors May Meet.

There will be a meeting of the directors of the Los Angeles ball club sometime to decide upon the location of a new ball park for next season, but no one knows when this meeting will be held. In all probability Prager Park will be chosen, but it is rather small for a first-class ball grounds.

AVERTED WAR BY SIMPLE TACT.

TIMES WHEN HASTY ACTION WOULD MAKE TROUBLE.

The Delicate Situation at Manila When Sir Edward Chichester Prevented the German Admiral from Precipitating War With the United States.

[Baltimore American.] Could the secret archives of the chancelleries of the world's capitals be searched by historians mankind would be astonished by the number of conflicts between nations which have been averted by the tactful conduct of a single man.

Sometimes the individual in whose discretion was committed by Providence the fate of thousands of his fellow-men has been a citizen of one of the countries which might have been involved in hostilities. Sometimes the averting act has been performed by a man who owed allegiance to a sovereign altogether unconcerned with the controversy which brought about the delicate situation.

Such a man was Sir Edward Chichester, Rear-Admiral of the British navy, stationed in Eastern waters at the time of the late unpleasantness between the United States and Spain. His death occurred last week at Gibraltar, and makes timely a review of one of the most interesting episodes of the Spanish-American War—an episode overshadowed by the accounts of the remarkable victory that preceded it, and one to which comparatively little publicity was given for reasons of state.

In the summer of 1898 the United States was on the verge of war with Germany, and Chichester was the man who held in leash one of the war lord's officers, eager to precipitate a quarrel with Admiral Dewey. This German officer was Admiral von Diedrichs. He was in the neighborhood of Manila with a squadron of German vessels, and not at all inclined to observe the blockade that Dewey had established against the Oriental port. Even before Dewey left Hongkong he suspected that von Diedrichs would give him trouble, and hence he wished to augment the squadron under his command before attacking the Spaniards. A battleship, thought Admiral Dewey, would have been an excellent addition to his squadron; but the fact that he could not obtain it did not alter his determination to make the German commander toe the mark if his suspicions were verified. Dewey's suspicions were verified. Von Diedrichs chafed under the restraint of the blockade and showed a disposition to ignore it and place himself in a position where he would either hamper the maneuvers of the American ships or be in line of fire.

VON DIEDRICHS WARNED.

Dewey himself has partially related the story. "I do not know why Admiral von Diedrichs should have felt aggrieved," he said. "I wrote to him defining my attitude toward the warships in the harbor, and he wrote that he would lay a letter of protest before the commanding officers of the other squadrons. He got small comfort from any of them. Capt. Chichester, the senior officer present of the British navy, told him that I was not only acting within my right, but that I was entitled to a great deal more than I had required from the foreign cruisers."

After the failure of Admiral von Diedrichs to enlist the sympathy of the other foreign commanders, he sent a flag lieutenant to Dewey with a list of complaints as to the way in which his ship had been treated.

Dewey's reply was sharp and unevasive: "What is it you want? Do you want war? You know what that means. If you do you can have it in five minutes. You may tell Admiral von Diedrichs that I am blockading this bay and that I shall take such steps as are in the right and the duty of the blockading officer."

It is said that the order given by Admiral von Diedrichs after receiving this message was: "Clear for action and quietly steam through the American lines into the harbor." The German squadron did take a position in dangerous proximity to the guns that had sunk the Spanish ships, and it may be surmised that the American ships were also cleared for action and that the range-finding apparatus was in working order. But before Dewey's righteous anger at the insult and defiance of the bumptious German bore fruit that would have been most deplorable, another squadron was observed by Uncle Sam's bluejackets to be under steam. It was that of Capt. Chichester.

THE BRITISH LINED UP.

What did the activity of the British sailors mean? It was known that they did not intend to defy the blockade order. It was known that Great Britain observed the most strict neutrality toward the combatants. Germans and Americans both watched the movements of the British with curiosity and anxiety—probably both were restrained from touching of a spark that would have led to one of the largest conflagrations the world has ever witnessed. The suspense did not last long. Chichester slowly moved his ships to a place directly in front of the American vessels and there each weighed anchor. It was a most significant warning that a single shot from the Germans would have subjected them to an answer in kind from the British, as well as the American eight-inch guns. No shot was fired. Von Diedrichs recovered from his fit of temporary insanity and desisted from his folly.

Later, all three of the naval officers concerned in this episode were promoted. It is unnecessary to dwell on the cause of Dewey's promotion. It is highly probable that his conduct at Manila had much to do with the fact that Chichester died a rear-admiral. Whether von Diedrichs won approbation by reason of his conduct is not vouchsafed, but when the German was elevated to the post of chief of the naval general staff Dewey wrote him a letter of congratulation. Nothing was said of the former exchange of courtesies between the two men.

SIMILAR INCIDENTS FREQUENT.

American history is filled with incidents in which peace and war hung in the balance and in which the issue was with peace by the proverbial hair's breadth.

A notable incident of this kind occurred during the Civil War. The government at Washington came perilously near being involved in hostilities with England as well as with the forces of the South. England's sympathies were with the Confederacy, but England observed an attitude of neutrality. In 1861 Jefferson Davis sent James M. Mason and John Slidell to Europe to endeavor to obtain aid for the Southern cause. They ran the blockade established by the Union navy and succeeded in embarking on the British mail steamship Trent at Havana. Capt. Wilkes, in command of the United States sloop-of-war San Jacinto, lay in wait for the Trent and forced her to stop. He seized the Southern commissioners and carried them to a fort near Boston. The Secretary of the Navy officially congratulated Capt. Wilkes, and the House of Representatives requested the President to present him with a gold medal. The President, however, did not share in the view that congratulations were in order.

With his characteristic common sense and adeptness at epigrammatic utterances, Abraham Lincoln remarked that he feared that this country had caught simply a couple of "white elephants." He added, "We fought Great Britain in 1812 for insisting on the right to do precisely what Capt. Wilkes has done."

ENGLAND'S PROTEST VIGOROUS.

England did send a vigorous protest. The government demanded the surrender of the commissioners and a proper apology for the affront to the British flag. It hurried troops to Canada with regimental bands playing "Dixie."

In the correspondence that ensued Secretary Seward said that he was happy to find that England now condemned the right of search hitherto so stoutly maintained by her. He congratulated England for having become a convert to American principle. He closed by saying that, since the British nation now asked us to do just what we had insisted that all nations ought to do, we could not consistently refuse to give up Mason and Slidell. The incident was closed, but the outlook was not very propitious while it remained in controversy.

An officer of the navy who afterward became a rear admiral was lieutenant on the San Jacinto at the time of the Mason and Slidell incident, and personally arrested the two commissioners. He was Donald McNamara Fairfax, who died several years ago at his home in Hagerstown, this State. It is said that he conducted himself with remarkable suavity on the occasion, and that his politeness did much to allay the bitter feeling.

A Perfect Flying Machine.

Gulls are masters in the air. I have watched by the hour birds similar to these following along in the wake of a steamer, but had never before had such chances with a camera. Often they poise, resting apparently motionless on outstretched wing. It is a difficult feat. A small bird can't do it. A sparrow hawk can only poise by the rapid beating of his wings. The gulls seem to hang perfectly still, yet there is never an instant when the wings and tail are not constantly adjusted to meet the different air currents. Just as in shooting the rapids in a canoe, the paddle must be adjusted every moment to meet the different eddies, currents and whirlpools, and it is never the same in two different instants. A gull by the perfect adjustment of its body, without a single flap of the wings, makes headway straight in the teeth of the wind. I saw one retain a perfect equilibrium in a stiff breeze, and at the same time reach forward and scratch his ear.—[American Magazine.

Heads East and West.

Senator Warner of Missouri is wondering if the size of men's heads averages larger in the West than in the East. Senator Warner, who wears a 7¾ size hat, tried to buy a new headpiece in Washington just before he started home. He says: "In Washington I made a tour of every hat store there of any size and within reach, and in Philadelphia, where they make the things. I tried to get a lid to fit me. Going afterward to New York, if I tried one shop I tried twenty, not a place had a 7¾ hat. My itinerary took me to Cleveland. I was thoroughly ashamed of my old hat by the time I struck that place, made famous by Cassie, and once more I started out to find a 7¾ hat. Nary one. I did not make much effort in St. Louis, because by the time I got there I was almost without hope. However, I managed to screw up courage enough to go into four places. They all had up to 7½, but nothing bigger. Now for the odd part of the experience. The very first shop I went into in Kansas City resulted in this hat. I guess there are more 7¾ heads in this neck of the woods than further East."—[The Commoner.

The One-Cent Stamp.

Now that every country town has its local souvenir postal card, the demand on the government for 1-cent stamps is enormous. Some of the local postmasters had prepared themselves for the summer visitors, but an instance is recorded where the purchase of 1400 souvenir postal cards by visitors at a summer resort in New Hampshire cleaned the local office out of 1-cent stamps and some of the postals had to wait until a new supply could be secured. Never before in the history of the department has the demand for the smallest denomination of stamp been so great.—[Boston Transcript.

Locomobile

Breaks Record for Course in Vanderbilt Race

Despite almost incessant tire trouble, the Locomobile again upheld American Honor in Long Distance Road Racing.

Tracy, in the 5th lap, circled the difficult and dangerous course in the remarkable time of 29.71 miles in 26 minutes 20 4-5 seconds.

ALSO on the tenth lap of the race Tracy passed Wagner, Lancia and Jenatzy. These two laps were the only one in which the Locomobile did not suffer delay from tire trouble, and proved conclusively that the winner of the Elimination Trials was the fast est car in the race, foreign or American, and with best crew on board. No mechanical troubles were experienced.

The slippery condition of the greater portion of the Course necessitated the use of non-skid tires, which proved absolutely disastrous to speed.

AMERICANS ORDER BOATS.

Six Boston Sailors Prepare for Next Race.

Old Defender Volunteer Is Offered for Sale.

Jamestown's Show May Secure Next Regatta.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Six orders for boats in the Sonderklasse have been given by the Boston yachtsmen, showing that next year's class will be a big one. The conditions to govern the contest of 1907 have already been sent to Germany for approval. It is expected that the trial races next season will take place early in July. The Boston Yacht Club has invited Sir Thomas Lipton to a club dinner to be given in his honor on November 2.

The old club defender, Volunteer, which defeated the Thistle in 1887, is offered for sale by the estate of J. Malcolm Forbes.

JAMESTOWN MAY GET IT.

It is believed by those who are in touch with rowing affairs that the next national regatta will be rowed on the Jamestown Exposition course, off Hampton Roads. A number of oarsmen, including members of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, have visited this course recently and are enthusiastic over it. The Jamestown Exposition management have made an application for the regatta, which will be acted upon at the next meeting of the national committee, and it is very likely to be favorable.

Frank Vessely, the well-known sculler, is to remove to New Mexico in a few weeks.

VISITING GOLFERS.

Preparations Being Made to Entertain Sportsmen in Local Clubs Throughout West.

If the majority of the clubs in the Western Golf Association have their way, the traveling golfer who is a member of a western club will have little difficulty hereafter in playing the game in whatever western city he may be sojourning. A system of card credentials, interchangeable at clubs of the association, has been passed upon by over sixty clubs in the organization, only four being adverse to the idea. Following are the details:

1. A card bearing date within, say, three calendar months of its use, coming from the club of which the holder is a member.

2. Such card to be countersigned by the secretary of the Western Golf Association.

3. That the privileges of the visitor be restricted to the use of the lockers, golf course and restaurant of the club visited, and that the regular playing charge for the use of the course for the day be paid by such visitor.

4. That the privilege at any one club be limited to one week in any one year.

5. That all charges for playing, food, etc., to be paid for in cash, the visitor having no privilege to sign checks at any club visited.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING.

Great Interest Has Been Aroused in Far East in This Neglected Branch of Sport.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Cross-country running is gradually becoming the leading fall sport at Morningside Heights this year. Never before in the history of Columbia athletics has so marked an interest attached to this branch of sport. A squad of fifty men report daily to Crooks, the trainer, who sends them at a fast clip around the grove and even on Riverside Drive for a run of three or four miles. This autumn weather has served to attract large numbers of novices, among whom much promising material has appeared.

BILLIARD TOURNEY.

Local Three-Cushion Experts to Meet This Week to Decide Championship Honors.

Those billiard enthusiasts that run to three cushions will have an opportunity this week to see something good in the tournament that will be pulled off at Berry's rooms on South Spring street for it will bring together the best men in this end of the State in the three-cushion game. The entries are Frank Keniston, Alfred Clark, Wm. Maguire, Arthur Seymour, Bob Lacey, George Kennedy and Guy Lyon and each man is to play a game with each other contestant, the total to be twenty-one games.

The entrance fee is $10 and Henry Berry will add $50 to the total and the money will be divided 40, 30, 20 and 10 per cent. The games will be forty points and so far four games are scheduled for this week. The first one will be played tomorrow night between Kennedy and Lyon. Seymour and Lacey will meet Tuesday night; Maguire and Keniston on Wednesday and Thursday night Clark will play the loser of Monday's game. Play will begin at 7:30 o'clock each evening. It is the intention next week to play afternoon as well as evening games.

MOTOR BOATS FLUNKED.

Three Flyers Fail to Show Up for the Larchmont Races, Which Are Postponed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The disappointment of the Larchmont Yacht Club officials in the matter of the non-appearance of several of the boats entered for the motor boat gold challenge cup race, last week, was so keen that action will likely be taken to prevent a re-occurrence of such an unfortunate condition of affairs.

Four of the six boats, and among them the craft challenging for the trophy, did not report at Larchmont, and the owners of three of them failed to send explanations of their absence. The club was compelled to hire a tug for two days and incurred other expenses, and only two boats were on hand.

That this lax method of keeping engagements in the future motor boat races held by the club may possibly be done away with, it is proposed to demand a forfeit with each entry. The owners of the boats that start will have these forfeits returned to them, while the others will revert to the club.

WANTS HIS OWN CUP.

Sir Thomas Lipton Will Build Yacht to Race at Chicago for Trophy Given by Himself.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Sir Thomas Lipton will build a twenty-one-foot racing yacht and enter the annual races of the Columbia Yacht Club next year for the trophy given by himself.

For some time pressure has been brought to bear on Sir Thomas to have him build a boat for the races in the Chicago harbor, but not until yesterday did the donor of the Lipton cup give his final answer. The English baronet made known his decision after a conference with a committee from the Columbia Yacht Club.

After the meeting Sir Thomas discussed his plans for building the challenger. The boat will be made from a design of either Hoppe or Payne, two of the greatest designers in Great Britain. In all probability after the design has been selected the boat will be constructed in Canada. It is possible the challenger will sail under the colors of some Canadian club.

Sir Thomas will in all probability come to Chicago to see the races sailed next year.

"In fact," he said, "I don't know but I may sail on my own boat in the race. I should like to try this fresh-water sailing."

GREAT CONTEST OF BALLONS.

SEVENTEEN AIRSHIPS START IN GERMAN RACE.

Thousands of Spectators Flock from Berlin to See the Ascensions and Great Force of Officers Are Unable to Control the Crowd—Small Ship Wins Emperor's Prize.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tempted by the novelty of the unwonted sporting event, hundreds of thousands of the inhabitants of Berlin witnessed the balloon competition at Tegel on Sunday. The weather conditions were ideal. Police, gendarmes, a fire brigade and special constables were powerless to deal with the great stream of humanity that flowed steadily to the little suburb.

A remarkable feature of the day was the fact that, owing to the admirable organization of Capt. Hildebrandt, who has charge of the race, it was possible to start seventeen balloons within six minutes. Three of the seventeen descended in Bohemia.

The committee having charge of the awards has announced the followinng decisions: The Ernst (680 cubic meters,) piloted by Dr. Broeckelmann, received the Emperor's prize; the Sohnke, piloted by Dr. Emden, receives the prize offered by the Aero Club of Berlin; the Helios, piloted by Dr. Schlein, receives the Berliner Lokal Anzeiger prize.

WINDY GOLF PLAY.

Sandstorm Prevents All by a Few Men from Contesting and Scores Are Very Low.

It is more than probable that all local records for pulling and slicing were smashed yesterday in the attempts of a few local golfers to play in the regular Saturday sweepstakes at the Country Club. All day a fierce sandstorm howled over the course from the north, and into the teeth of this half-gale the golfers drove the ball. As a natural consequence there were but few who ventured out into the dust, and the scores made were bad.

The results follow:

	Gross.	H'd'c.	Net.
F. N. Coffin	98	16	82
D. K. Dickinson	109	24	85
S. G. Wilson	94	6	88
J. E. Cook	96	6	90
S. P. Hunt	97	6	91
M. P. Gilbert	115	24	91
H. Jevne	104	14	91

J. W. Long, W. A. Barker, J. M. Gwinn and F. W. Maule did not turn in their scores.

Ocean Park Tennis.

In a special ladies' tournament arranged at the Ocean Park Country Club yesterday afternoon Miss May Sutton and Mrs. Seymour won first honors. The tournament was a round-robin handicap doubles affair, and the winners succeeded in annexing forty-five games out of all that they played. Mrs. Bruce and Mrs. Hendricks came second with thirty-five games.

Aged Nimrod Active.

Four score years of active life have not dampened the sportsman's enthusiasm of "Uncle George" Watson of Bismarch, N. D., who was recently elected president of the North Dakota Sportsman's Association. For the last twenty-five years Mr. Watson has ranked as one of the most indefatigable hunters of the State. Previous to that time he chased game, little and big, through Illinois, Ohio, Iowa, Minnesota and Pennsylvania, his career as a nimrod beginning in the early '50s. He boasts that he is good for many more years of the sport.

Vanishing Forests.

In the Pacific Northwest nearly 200,000 men are employed in cutting down the last primeval forests of this country and slicing these stately armies of spruce and fir and cedar into 5,000,000,000 feet of lumber and 6,000,000,000 shingles every year.

This timbered area is the richest natural treasure of the American continent, compared with which the gold mines of Alaska and Nevada are of picayune value for this and coming generations.

It is so wonderfully rich a treasure that, according to Ralph D. Paine in Outing, its owners are squandering it like drunken spendthrifts. A billion feet of lumber is wasted every year; enough to build 100,000 comfortable American homes.

It is characteristic of Western men and methods that the ways of logging in the East should have been flung aside as crude and slow. The giant timber of the Washington forests on the slopes of the Cascades is not hauled by teams or rafted down rivers. Steam has made of logging a business which devastates the woods with incredible speed, system and ardor.

The logging camps of the Cascades differ as strikingly from the lumbering centers of Northern New England as the electric gold dredgers of the Sacramento Valley contrast with the placer diggings of the Forty-niners. In other words, the greater the need of preserving the forests, the greater is the American ingenuity for turning them into cash as fast as possible.

Wealth in Stolen Ties.

J. C. Betancue, the Southern Pacific detective, has been tie hunting for the company for several weeks and has located some 5000 Southern Pacific ties on ranches and at mines, some of them forty miles from the Southern Pacific right of way. He also found many Santa Fé ties west of Deming, where they had been carried by floods. An untreated tie costs the Southern Pacific, on its New Mexico division, when put off the car, $1, and a treated tie costs $1.25.—[Albuquerque Citizen.

HON. C. S. ROLLS, English motorist

ENGLISH MOTORIST TO VISIT AMERICA

ROLLS WILL TRY SOME RACING DURING HIS STAY.

Is the Third Son of Lord Llangattock and Preferred Engineering to Diplomacy—He Has Had Several Close Shaves for His Life in Automobiles.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Oct. 6.—England's premier motorist is undoubtedly Hon. Charles Stewart Rolls; as an aeronaut, he is hardly less distinguished. Having toured in all parts of Europe, he is now turning his attention to America, and leaves England on October 10 for a three weeks' visit to the United States. It will be Mr. Rolls's first trip across the Atlantic, though on several occasions, when ballooning, he has nearly been in it.

Mr. Rolls is the third son of Lord Llangattock—hence his title of honorable. Like many of the younger sons of the nobility, he was intended for the diplomatic service, but he showed such a strong bent for mechanics and science, and such an aversion to other studies, that it soon became evident the result of insistence on parental wishes would be to sacrifice a good engineer to make a poor diplomat. So he was allowed to have his own way.

After going through Eton, he went up to Cambridge, where he specialized in practical electricity, and was graduated in engineering in 1898.

Rather tall and thin, he walks with a slight slouch; and no one judging from appearances, would take him for one of the keenest and most intrepid motorists of the day. It is only when you get him talking on his favorite subject that his eyes light up and you see the spirit of the enthusiast shining in them.

He began his "wheelings" early, for when quite a little boy, he used to come down a hill near his home in Monmouthshire on an improvised sleigh on wheels. It is his proud boast that in one of these spins, he "bagged" a curate, a butcher's boy, and a dogcart in quick succession. His first motor experience was with a steam roller, which he drove on Sunday mornings, while his father was at church.

At 15 years of age, he was notorious at Eton for getting into scrapes through his passion for electricity; and after going up to Cambridge, he soon became known as "Petrolls" and was seldom called anything else.

His motoring experience has been probably unique. He drove a car when the English regulations permitted a speed no greater than four miles in the country and two in towns, and even at that a man with a red flag was required to walk in front of the car to warn pedestrians of their danger. He bought his first car—a 3 3-4 horse-power Peugeot—in France in 1896; and made his first trip from London to Cambridge in it in 11 3-4 hours—4½ miles an hour.

This car caused such a sensation in country lanes that men used to climb trees and telegraph poles and scramble over or through hedges to get out of its way; and one poor woman in Scotland went to the length of falling on her knees by the roadside and praying aloud to heaven for mercy and protection as he passed. Still it wasn't all honey; for he occasionally had unpleasant experiences.

Once, while going home on his car and taking a friend with him, the clutch pedal stuck down and he stooped in front of the car to release it. He had left the gear lever in the first speed so the moment the pedal flew up the car started and actually ran over him as he lay on the ground. He thus summarizes a few of the other things that have happened to him as a motorist:

"I have burnt my boiler out three times on a steam car, which I once had to push three miles in dress clothes.

"I was once stuck in a deep flood, the water coming up to the floor board, and I had to hail a punt.

"Once had to be practically dug out of a bog.

"Was once stuck for want of a match for over three hours with the burners out.

"The longest distance I have had to walk for petrol was in France—twelve miles.

"Have three times had a passenger fall off a racing car, moving at a fair speed, without being killed.

"Once had a horse and cart on top of me.

"In the Paris-Vienna race ran into a tree at seventy miles an hour.

"Twice was overturned.

"Once had my head bashed in by a starting handle.

"Have twice run away completely down hill forward, and two or three times backward.

"Once upset an apple cart in the Strand and twice had my car burnt up."

Many prizes have fallen to his share. In 1899 he gained first in the Bordeaux-Biarritz race and second in the Paris-Ostend; while he also won the valuable gold cup, together with medals and various other prizes for the 1000 miles trial in England.

He was nineteenth in the famous Paris-Berlin race, after his car had been seriously damaged; and in the Paris-Vienna contest he ran into a tree while traveling about seventy miles an hour. Fortunately the tree collapsed and Mr. Rolls was not seriously hurt, though he was almost buried in the wayside bank.

During the intervening years, he has taken part in many races and tours in France, Germany, Austria and Spain; and his most recent win was in the Tourist Trophy competition in the Isle of Man last month. In this race Mr. Rolls drove a twenty-horse-power car and he is taking a similar one with him to do his touring in the United States.

In order not to be too restricted in his movements, Mr. Rolls intends taking up his quarters in one of New York's leading hotels, but he will make numerous pleasure trips to various parts of the country—and even compete in races should any be promoted—during his three weeks' say.

Mr. Rolls is also an ardent balloonist, and gained fourth prize, as well as Mrs. Howard Gould's cup, which this lady offered for the Englishman who traveled the greatest distance in the recent James Gordon Bennett International race.

"Flying machines," he says, "are now practically a reality; but I doubt if they will ever be of very great commercial value."

DR. HUDDLESTON DEFENDS RUGBY.

BELIEVES GAME HAS COME TO STAY IN CALIFORNIA.

President Jordan of Stanford Says the Old-Style Is Mere "Battle" in Comparison With New—Prejudices Must Be Removed for Honest Criticisms.

Dr. Dan Huddleston of Pasadena, an expert English player who has taken a leading part in the movement for the adoption of Rugby football in Southern California, believes that the future of Rugby in this State is assured. Dr. Huddleston made every effort in his power to secure the adoption of the English game by the high schools of Southern California, and at the conference at which the game was discarded for the revised intercollegiate game he prophesied that in a very few months, as soon as the game was given a fair test, it would make rapid strides towards public favor.

Dr. Huddleston believes, on the strength of the showing the game has made in its preliminary tests up north, that his prophesies are well on the road to fulfillment. The game between California and Pomona at Fiesta Park, yesterday, has removed some of the prejudice that has been manifested in this part of the State against Rugby. Speaking of the strides that the game has made in the first two months of its trial in America, and of its immediate and ultimate prospects, Huddleston said:

"President Jordan of Stanford hit the nail on the head when he remarked at the Stanford-California freshman contest, last Saturday: 'This is a game; the other was only a battle.' That is exactly the way that the matter appeals to one who looks on the two games from an entirely impartial standpoint, and who is not blinded by the glamour that surrounds the one or the other in the minds of their respective supporters. To a fair-minded individual like President Jordan, who is big enough to look beyond this, Rugby cannot fail to prove its superiority on these very grounds—it is a game, essentially a game, while the other is a battle. It is an extremely difficult matter to get teams that can learn a game requiring so much skill as Rugby, in one season, and therein lies great misfortune, as the people who are to form their opinion of the new game are for the most part doing so from a hostile or supercritical standpoint, and the fact that the teams do not put up the best scientific possibilities of the game hardly leaves a chance for it to get a thoroughly fair test.

"The only misgivings that I had as to the ultimate success of the game lay in the fact that the game might not survive its first season. The early work and preliminary games seem to have taken so well with the institutions that have attempted Rugby that I have absolutely no doubt whatever that if the game is given a two-season test it will come to stay.

"In my mind Rugby is merely a stepping stone in America to another and still better game—Association football. This game is gradually winning out after a struggle of more than twenty years' continuance in England, and now is by far the more popular game, judged either by the attendances at the big match games, or by the number of teams of players throughout the United Kingdom.

It has taken England a century or more to evolve a game of football that is in all respects the best adapted to the demands that are made upon it. Association is that game, and it has been developed for years and through the Rugby game to what it is today. Any one who is not blinded by the so-called patriotism of standing up for the 'American game' cannot fail to see the advantages that it affords. At the last big match game in London, 108,000 persons attended, whereas the crowd of 30,000 that attends the Yale-Harvard game is looked upon as enormous in this country. Crowds of that size attend games every Saturday in the season in England, and the number of teams and players in the field in England is proportionately greater.

"In the larger cities on one Saturday this season, 222,000 persons attended ten games in one league, 75,000 in nine smaller cities of another, and 47,000 in a new league in ten other cities. In three games at Newcastle, 136,000 persons attended."

MAN'S WEAK-WILL YEARS.

Said to Be a Period Between 56 and 62 When Men Lose Their Will Power.

[London Mail:] At some time between the age of 55 and 62 men lose their will-power, their judgment in a moment of crisis. The loss is only temporary, marking a psychological change between the meridian and the commencement of age.

Dr. Dabbs in this week's Argus contributes the above explanation of the Grantham disaster, citing the parallel case at Stroud some years ago. He says he has collected data to substantiate his point, and asks the ages of the Salisbury and Grantham drivers to see whether they fit in with his theory. He is inclined to rule that no man between 55 and 62 shold be allowed to drive an express engine, as not "master of that unclouded will which makes the greatest emergency his obedient slave."

Grave errors of commanders in the field and of captains at sea, he explains in the same way, hinting at a recent national experience—aparently the South African War. Business men show similar signs of weakness, irresolution, suspicion, and irritability at a certain time of middle life. A little older, and they again become reliable, tractable, and wiser in counsel. With rest and patience all comes right again.

Gen. Nogi's Popularity.

Gen. Nogi of Port Arthur fame is paying the penalty of popularity at the hands of autograph seekers. But the form which this has taken in Japan has about it a touch of sentiment, inasmuch as the relatives of soldiers who fell before Port Arthur are seeking the general's autograph inscription to place on the tombstones of the dead

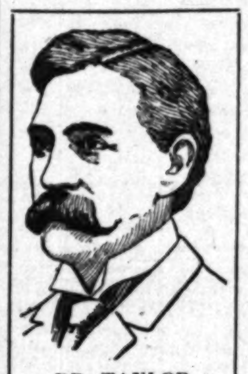
Plain Talks to Me

By Doctor Taylor the Leading Specialist



DR. TAYLOR
The Leading Specialist

My title to the term of "leading specialist" is now so well established that it is no longer seriously questioned. This fact is due to the enviable reputation I have made for perfect and permanent cures, and to nothing else.

All necessary X-ray examinations are absolutely free to patients. My equipment for X-ray work is the finest and most complete ever produced, and equally perfect results are not possible with an inferior apparatus.

Any man, diseased or weakened from vate disorders, seeks earnestly and de most, a permanent cure of his trouble is but natural that many men become couraged when they have tried di medical courses of treatment, patent rations, electric and other appliances ceiving, if anything, but temporary of the trouble, in every case FIRST there is an injury from abuse or pas cesses, if there is a chronic inflamm or derangement, if there is an inactivi any part, if there is a lack nourishment caused by blood nation, if there is some remaining of past disease which has never been oughly eradicated, I SEARCH OUT CAUSE, and remove that first. I never tempt to hide symptoms, nor do I tonics or stimulants for temporary be That is why my cured cases CURED. That is why my treatment is ferent. And that is the real reason CURE WHEN OTHERS FAIL. I do profess to perform miracles, and I times find cases beyond help, but cases I will not treat for any considera But there are few incurable cases. Fail of others do not reflect upon my skill. You owe it to yourself to tigate my system of certainly, completely and permanently curing diseases of men.

Weakness "Permanently" Cured

No other ailment yields more readily under my treatment than func "weakness." No other disorder peculiar to men so completly baffles nary medical effort. When a treatment cures there is a reason why cures, and when a remedy fails there is also a reason why. My ment cures because all effort is directed toward the restoration of conditions throughout the organic system, removing all inflam or over-sensitiveness of the prostate gland, which is the sole cau the functional derangement. Other forms of treatment fail becaus are calculated to excite activity by stimulating the nerve centers. I more cases of "weakness" than any other physician, and I obtain p results in all instances.

Contracted Disorders Quickly Cured

Any one of the ordinary forms of treatment may cure, or it may appear to cure, or it may show no results whatever. These dis treacherous and demand the most careful and thorough treatment a case that appears practically cured is all the while developing complications that may cause a lifetime of suffering. The only lies in the quickest cure possible, and that means a cure by my tem of treatment. In half the usual time required, I effect a radical cleansing the membranes of every vestige of disease and removing possibility of chronic developments.

Varicocele Cured Without Cutting

Varicocele can be cured without surgery. I am curing cases by mild and painless treatment, thus demonstrating the folly of to harsh and dangerous methods. But one week at most is required seldom is it necessary to even detain the patient a single day business or occupation. My cures are permanent. There are no or unpleasant after effects. The treatment I employ is original myself. There is no other doctor who treats varicocele as I treat who duplicates my cures.

less than a year's experience, E. L. Hedderly killing forty-three before 8 o'clock.

The Bolsa Chica sported eleven guns and eleven limits of thirty-five birds each. Most of the gunners could as well have had fifty as what they took.

The Lomita Land and Water Company had a full squad out, and hardly a vacant blind, yet all had a big shoot and bags ran up into the forties early in the morning. The little Golden West, upon which E. A. Curtis has put in some well-directed, effective work during the summer, responded nobly for its acreage, nearly every man beating forty and a full turnout in the blinds.

Lack of water did not prevent the Westminster brigade from bombarding the big ducks, although the shortage kept most bags below the limit. The better shots killed enough for anybody, however, and were well pleased at the finish.

The Blue Wing Club has limited itself to thirty-five and bagged that number easily without shooting until noon, some of the members going in before 9 o'clock in the morning with all they could stagger under. Thirty-five of the big ducks that were prevalent Monday tax the strength of any but a Hercules.

The Sunset and Center Clubs are both shy of water, but they shot just the same and killed quite a few ducks, mostly of the larger varieties. The Center brigade got busy with the paint brush and further improved their opportunities by house painting.

The Olympic Gun Club had plenty of water, a lot more than its neighbor, the Green Wing, across the road. These latter brethren could use more flow and are developing water in a ten-inch hole as fast as a driller can go down. Bags on the Green Wing were light; Gen. Last and several other members bagged about forty, with a number of dowitchers and other big snipe in addition. Harry Baum was high gun on the Olympic Club with forty birds; there was a large turnout bombarding the ducks and keeping the mudhens moving. The squad average was somewhere around seventeen, which is good for a new club composed in considerable part of inexperienced shooters.

The San Pedro Club's big well helped it materially and provided some water upon which nearly the entire membership was holding forth. A hayrack was necessary to transport the shooters to the clubhouse, and some humorist remarked that business was inordinately dull in San Pedro Monday, owing to the percentage of the population that had moved down into Orange county. The squad managed to kill a few birds and had a great celebration in formally opening its clubhouse.

CANVASBACKS BUSY.

Five of the Canvasbacks were holding forth on that club's preserve north of the Christopher, August Morro being second high gun with twenty-six and a number of big dowitcher snipe which proved delicious eating. Several took their wives into the blinds with them, and the experience made a great impression upon the ladies who enjoyed it greatly. The squad averaged 23 2-3 ducks to the man, which, although the skidoo number, proved far from a hoodoo. After the ducks had been thinned out, a general attack upon the snipe resulted in some nice strings being killed. W. F. Chandler killed a mallard, Hedderly a pair of gadwell, but the rest of the birds were springs. Two spoonbills and half a dozen teal were the only exceptions.

Realizing that the birds had been given about all the beating they could be expected to take, the clubs by common consent, cut out the Wednesday shoot, and went at it again in the Chico country yesterday. Many mallards were seen during the week, some canvasbacks and other big ducks also being in evidence.

In the Ballona the best bag reported was thirty-five by Jacob Adloff on the Recreation. John Hauerwaas with twenty-three was next, and the shoot was one of the poorest openings the Recreationites have ever had. Their annual dinner to the Del Rey club occurred the night before and was a most enjoyable affair, at which about twenty-five plates were laid. Harry Payne, president of the State Game and Fish Protective Association, was a guest, and persuaded both clubs to send delegates North to the meeting November 9 and 10, which is to draft a game law for the legislators to act upon this winter.

There was a full turnout of Recreationites, and bags ran all the way from Hauerwaas's down.

Too much grass in the Del Rey ponds interfered somewhat with that club's shooting and no limits were killed there in consequence. The shooting was fair, however, and plenty of birds were in sight.

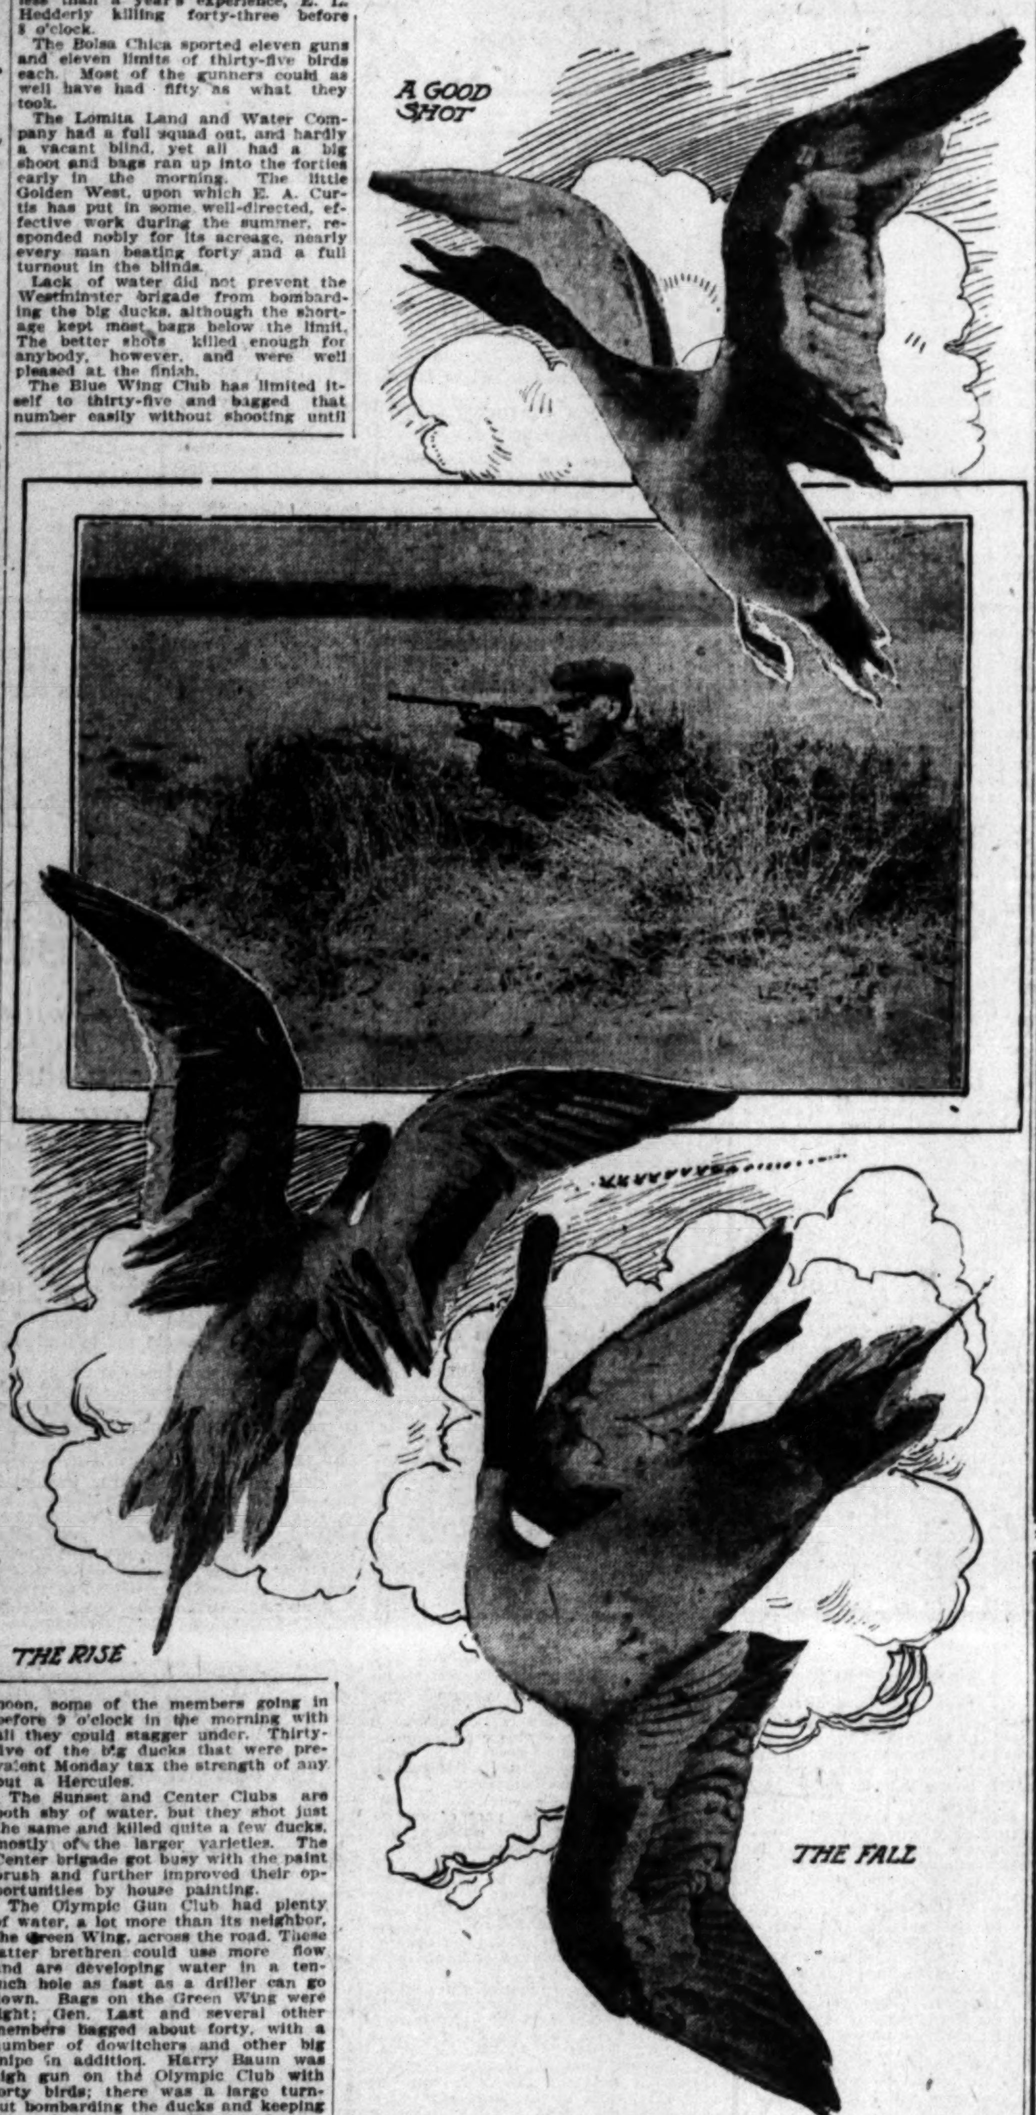
One big bag was reported on the Centinela, and the El Patron had good shooting also. The Santa Monica club is dry and therefore was out of the fun.

High gun on the Cerritos club was Frank Hicks with forty-eight big ducks. Every blind was in demand, and the shooting, while below last year's standard, was very good indeed. The Pasadena and adjoining clubs on the northwest did quite well, although the Green Wing and its little neighbors had no such sport as last year's by any means.

Below Huntington Beach, water scarcity is becoming a serious problem with the duck clubs. Most of them are decidedly shy of the necessary fluid, and some are wondering how they are going to get it. The bags were not up to standard on most of the preserves, and some of the shooters in this part of the country were sadly disappointed as a result.

On all the clubs the veteran shots raised the customary uproar about long shooting—and then killed birds out of range themselves. A poor shot has no chance with a good one in an argument of this kind, for a good shot can often make surprisingly long kills. The fact that he shoots at high birds only after they have been fired at, or after they have decided to leave the place for good is a mystery to the tyro hunter; such knowledge seems to him supernaturally inferential. How a man can tell what a duck is going to do, he cannot comprehend. So he shoots at 'em all, and wonders why he is "cussed" while some other chap is shooting just as far as he is.

Habitually long shooting is a serious mistake, means wounded ducks, poor sport for everybody and does no good whatever. The poorest shot will learn the game if he confines his operations to one rule—shooting only at such birds as he can see the eyes or individual tail feathers of, and letting those farther go to somebody who can kill them, chancing that they will lower.



Thirty seconds in the career of a duck yesterday morning on one of the near-by marshes.

W. J. Lewis Shows Fine Form in His Races Though Late in Getting Started.

W. J. Lewis, the gelding which has negotiated the best three heats in a race by his kind, in 2:06 1-4 each, is a horse with a high class pedigree, and he looks his breeding, being a finished nag at all points, and especially blood-like around the head and neck. He is by Norval, son of Electioneer, first dam by King Rene, son of Belmont, second dam by Almont. As both Belmont and Almont were by Alexander's Abdallah (probably the best son of Hambletonian,) the Lewis horse gets a strong infusion of extra good blood in that line of his pedigree, and another one direct to the head of the Hambletonian family through Electioneer, his grandsire.

It has taken Lewis a matter of four years to demonstrate his real worth as a trotter, although he beat 2:10 a fraction of a second in 1905, and the important event came about unexpectedly, through his regular driver being unable to look after the horse in his Columbus engagement a month ago. Lester Murphy, a local reinsman who never had pulled a line over the horse, was asked to take him in hand, and the first thing he did was to throw away a lot of rigging the gelding wore, with the result that when race day came Lewis was a wild horse for speed and a model for manners.

The fast gelding made his three heats at Columbus. Last year, in thirteen starts, he won eleven times. Once he headed a summary at Old Saugus.

Coach Yost's Opinion.

In speaking of the new rules, Coach Yost says: "About new rules—well, one has not had much chance to get a line on them. The old game was plenty good enough, but the attempt to open up the game a little so as to make beef count for less is commendable. The changes, however, have proven too radical, and the game is more or less dependable on chance. The little teams have a much better show than before because of the forward pass, which practically is useless play for big game. Michigan will not use it, and I cannot imagine two teams like Pennsylvania or Michigan ever thinking about it in a big game. It is entirely too risky."

Sure :: Safe :: Successful

I have but one kind of treatment to offer you, and that is the right treatment, applied in the proper way. My way is thorough, searching and scientific, and is given only in my offices.
I aim to reach the vital spot in the shortest possible time. I have never treated a single case where the benefits were not at once apparent, I have never encountered a case that did not respond to my direct personal treatment.

Weakness
Decline of functional activity, strength and vitality is nearly always traceable to a disturbance in the functions of the reproductive system. Under my treatment functional equilibrium is restored, the nerve irritation reduced, the circulation is increased and strength renewed. My cures are absolute and permanent.

Contracted Diseases
become chronic through improper treatment; painful caustic remedies are the direct cause of stricture, ulceration and deep-seated inflammation of the urinary tract. I am confident I cure these ailments more quickly than any one, and with less pain or inconvenience to patients.

Varicocele
My treatment affects a cure in 4 to 6 days, and the cure will be PERMANENT. Normal circulation is quickly restored, the pains cease, swelling subsides, the patient's strength and vitality improve immediately.

Blood Diseases
Kidney and bladder troubles, rupture, piles, fistula and nervous conditions brought on by dissipation, excesses and wrong living. My treatment is rational, scientific and effective and produces permanent cures.
My offices are the best equipped and my facilities are unsurpassed.

TURFMEN COMING TO LOS ANGELES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It was said at Belmont Park yesterday that Sam Hildreth, a man who has hitherto been consistent in his support of the winter meetings at the fair grounds, New Orleans, would take a string to California this winter for service at Oakland. Mr. Hildreth will, according to report, ship to the Coast on Sunday by Wells-Fargo Express.

Green B. Morris will transfer four horses on the same train that bears the Hildreth horses, and William O'Brien MacDonaugh will ship one. Barney Schreiber, who has decided he has had enough of the eastern racing for one season, will, on Monday start his stable for his Missouri farm. Schreiber has had one man's share of luck this fall. He has won several good races with Notlan and Dr. Gardner, and he sold Dr. Gardner to Congressman Sullivan for a good round sum.

BRENDA YORKE'S RECORD.

High-Class Pacing Fillie Establishes Mark for Three-Year-Olds on Grand Circuit.

One of the records made this season on the Grand Circuit was for three-year-old pacing fillies. The honor goes to Brenda Yorke, a daughter of Moko, a stallion which has established himself preëminently as a sire of Futurity winners at both ways of going.

The present mark of 2:08¾, however, is nothing like what the record ought to be by a pacing filly of that age. It is nowhere near the mark for three-year-old pacing colts, the 2:05¼ of Slatawah, made years ago, heading that division of the championship list.

She is an exceedingly well made filly, her gait is everything that could be wished, and in the matter of blood lines no pacer has any the best of her. In fact, it is a matter of wonderment to observing horsemen that her sire, Moko, has not given the turf a record-breaking pacer before this. That the pacing streak is strong in his own pedigree is shown by the fact that Bumps, full brother to Moko, took a pacing mark of 2:03¼ to wagon a good many years ago, unfortunately dying before the full measure of his speed could be ascertained, and that another brother, a stallion, owned in Texas, had a lot of speed at the pace, not all of which is shown by his record of about 2:15.

Going back in the male line of his pedigree to George Wilkes, Moko gets a pacing strain that has given the turf some of its best performers at the gait, Dan Patch being a notable example. The dam of Moko was by Strathmore, a wonderful sire of pacing speed, and in certain lines of her pedigree she runs back to Black Bess, which produced Gloster, 2:17 unquestionably the greatest young trotter of his day. He could easily have been made into a pacer, always going into an amble when started from a walk. Taking the female side of Brenda Yorke's pedigree her first dam is by Simmons, son of George Wilkes, so that the double cross of Wilkes blood combined with that of Strathmore, sire of great pacing speed, is sufficient to account for all the speed she has shown, and to make it seem certain that with good fortune in a training way she eventually will get close to the two-minute mark, which is in these days the coveted goal of all really high-class pacers.

WINNING HARNESS DRIVERS.

Ed Geers, the Veteran, Leads All Reinsmen on Grand Circuit, Myron McHenry Second.

More than $200,000 has been divided among the harness horse drivers by the various associations in the circuit this season. Ed Geers, the noted driver who has steered so many trotters to victory, heads the list of winners. He has captured purses which amount to $27,785.

Myron E. McHenry, with his Crabtree string, is second, having won $20,680. A. L. Thomas, whose career on the turf was cut short at Syracuse, when he was ruled off, also won a large amount. He comes third on the list, having won $13,105 up to the time of his expulsion.

T. W. Murphy is next in line. His share of the association's money amounted to $16,537. By the help of Brilliant Girl, Jack Curry was awarded nearly $13,000. "Knap" McCarthy, who trains for John E. Madden, the well-known Kentucky turfman, is also well up with the leaders. He has captured $10,957. The other drivers who have won more than $1000 are:

Ben Walker, $10,350; Walter Cox, $9965; Vance Nichols, $8599; Ben Kenney $8575; Alta McDonald, $8419; Chandler, $7420; E. E. McCargo, $6933; Titer, $6625; William Snow, $6594; Ed Benyon, $5494; Helman, $5298; Eldridge, $5070; Oscar Ames, $4824; Spencer, $4435; Nolan, $3948; W. Foote, $3841; Brown, $3750; Sunderlein, $3545; Shank, $3117; White, $3175; Laselle, $2750; Hogan, $2529; Allen, $2500; R. T. Wilson, $2375; M. Demarest, $2024; Joe Rea, $1954; Hall, $2202; Childs, $1600; McMahon, $1590; Valentine, $1547; Rosemire, $1800; Dean, $1500; Lang, $1463; Brady, $1462; De Ryder, $1461; Nichols and Curran, $1000; Keating, $1500; Carpenter, $1545; Gahagan, $1500; Gerrity, $1200; Pender, $1000.

RACE HORSES COMING.

Large Number of Nags Being Put Into Condition for Winter Meet at Ascot.

Notwithstanding the rumors of a rival track at Arcadia and that Ascot may be annexed to the city, the management is going ahead the same as heretofore for a winter meeting and horses are coming in almost every day from different tracks.

It is said there are 300 or more horses at the track now and the stall reservations from the East will easily account for 300 more racers. J. A. Bennett, Tom Fullam, Billy Olliver, Dr. Ogle, W. A. McKinney and J. L. McGinnis of New York have each engaged stalls for ten horses. Blute and Barney Schreiber each say they will bring twenty, and H. T. Griffin will have about the same number. J. J. Walsh wants room for twenty-two; W. A. Porter and Davis & Weber for sixteen each, and Jim Curl for fifteen, all these owners having the largest stables. About the same bunch of horses will return as appeared last year and Manager Brooks has received word from Diamond Jim Brady that he will bring out a string. Accountant is one of his cracks but it is not believed this one will be brought across the country.

Among the well-known nags now here are Woodthorpe, W. H. Cary, McGrathiana Prince, Bologna, Komombo, Neatness, May L. N., Lottie Gladstone, Dixelle and a hundred more whose names are well remembered by local racetrack sports.

PRIVATE RACE COURSE.

Agent of Automobile Club of America Said to Be Securing Land for Twenty-Mile Track.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A representative of the Automobile Club of America has been in conference with several real estate dealers in Washington, D. C., with a view of acquiring a tract of land available for the establishment of an auto race course, not only for cup racing purposes, but for exhibitions of cars of various makes.

It is understood that William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and A. R. Pardington, president of the club, are interested in the scheme.

The plan is to build a track with an area of twenty miles, arranged to include the formations which will call for a thorough test of skill of the drivers and the endurance of the cars.

ANOTHER PROPOSITION.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Subscriptions amounting to $400,000 for the building of a private automobile race course on Long Island were made in this city, according to a report published today.

It is said that the proposed course will cost $2,000,000.

KEENE QUITS RADTKE.

Millionaire Owner Has no Further Use for Jockey Whose Recent Rides Are Peculiar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James R. Keene, having no further use for the services of Radtke, has given up his call on that jockey. While Mr. Keene has made no comment on it, the fact that his colt Ballot opened at 2 to 1 for the Champagne stakes on Wednesday and went back to 3½ to 1 and cut no figure in the race, attracted the scrutiny of close observers. Other races ridden by Radtke this season have been severely denounced. Yet, apparently no official action has been taken on this or other unsatisfactory rides by various jockeys.

POOR BOXES AND SHRINES.

POVERTY MUCH IN EVIDENCE IN ST. PETERSBURG.

The Russian Is an Oriental and a Fanatic—Contrasts Between the Military and Official Classes and the Common People—Good-looking Horses, Poverty-looking Drivers.

The city of St. Petersburg in autumn is gloomy and gray. By day a drizzle of rain. By night a veil of fog. The sun is expected only fitfully until February, and for most of the people life is as somber within as without, writes John Ellis in the London Daily News. It is palpably sad. I do not speak of the fortunates at the clubs, but of the people in general. The city itself lacks luster. Its commercial architecture is below the commercial average of either Europe or America.

The unvarying style, even of government buildings is of brick covered with plaster. The streets, paved as a rule with rough stones, and exceptionally with wood, are always muddy. The trams are horse power, like the cross-town cars of New York. The public carriages, of which there are many thousands, rush by incessantly, and their drivers reign supreme upon the crossings, startling with their yells the ceaseless procession of pedestrians.

That which first strikes the observer is the prevalent and chronic appearance of poverty among the people as one meets them in the street. In general, there are three styles of dress. First, that of the handsomely uniformed class, astonishingly numerous, but not invariably of a military character, the civil retainers of the noble and wealthy families resembling the army officers in this respect. Second, that of ordinary folks like the English or American middle class, who here are invariably shabby genteel, with clothes old, worn and faded, Micawber fashion, even their Sunday best but poor. The garb of the nuns is also of this character, though one may see prosperous-looking priests. Third, the dress of the mass of low-wage earners, the unskilled workers, and the beggars. These all look alike, and their appearance proclaims extreme and painful poverty. The types of Russian immigrants which are regarded as exceptional in the great cities of the United States are the rule here. They constitute the bulk of the population of St. Petersburg, and they are Russians, not Jews.

In London, Paris, New York and Chicago there are ulcers of poverty. Here there is an eruption of poverty over almost the entire body politic.

Beggars of the most pitiful sort, maimed, ill, infants, aged, beseech you everywhere. Thousands are half-fed in a nipping and an eager air that whets the appetite. At the doors of all the churches authorized women of beggarly appearance stand with boxes awaiting alms for specific purposes such as orphanages, insane asylums, etc. There are literally thousands of these boxes throughout the city. One might almost suspect that the entire Russian nation had, from necessity and pride, adopted a system of impersonal begging. Is it a wonder that the great men of the people are saying: "Our lives for justice, but not a kopeck for charity?"

The two chief institutions are the church and the barracks, equally numerous. The one dominates the mind, the other the body. Altars burn everywhere. The city is reeking with superstition, and it is plain that the system of popular education is inadequate. One is always looking into blank, unillumined, turbid faces—men and women alike. At every altar, chapel, church—that is to say, at nearly every corner—carriage drivers, truckmen, workmen, and people generally, doff their hats and make the sign of the cross, and in most of their faces I read credulity, stupor, the consciousness of the ox. I went to church with the crowd on a Friday morning. I heard the bee-like droning of the priests. I felt the severe, solid, frigid magnificence of the edifice and of the service. I felt the earnestness of the people. The Russian is Oriental and a fanatic when he prays. He kneels on the bare floor, bends, kisses the stones, strikes them with his forehead, then kisses them again. I saw the pitiful condition of the very numerous poor, their extreme fervor, in direct ratio with their want, their sickness, their infirmity, their lack of knowledge, their long suffering, their misery. Nothing is so earnest as their piety, except the quick, furtive, even instinctive glance that as you pass they dart at you hoping for alms.

Equally significant is the demonstrative recognition everywhere of military superiority and supremacy. Generals are thicker than telegraph poles. Soldiers and officers are constantly saluting in the thoroughfares, in the most rigorous military etiquette.

In St. Petersburg two emphatic contrasts everywhere assail the eye—that between the military and official classes on the one hand, and the people on the other; and that between the horses and their drivers. The best-looking men are the Cossacks, gorgeously uniformed, galloping or walking arsenals. The worst-looking men are the drivers of the public carriages. They are uniformed with a squatty stove-pipe hat and a coat, quilted inside, which reaches to the ankles. Beneath this they resemble a ragbag. Without exception they are reduced to a state of animality. They are uninstructed, dirty, and all but insensible, their faces stolid, dull, expressionless. At this season they sit all day or all night on their boxes, without support for the back, in the spray-like rain. They sleep often in this position, holding their seats by sheer gravity. As a rule they receive eight roubles a month (sixteen shillings) and "keep." If they were well organized they could surely enforce a demand for better conditions, for St. Petersburg is more dependent upon its public vehicles than any other city in Europe. Yet they still have hearts like ours, these men. This morning, on the Nevsky, one of them held up the traffic to stop and pick up a legless beggar boy and carry him to a more favorable spot.

Of the horses of these Jehus there is another story. Without exception they are beautiful, sleek, glossy, plump, and spirited, prancing in their string-like harness. In a city where workmen carry bedsteads, wardrobes, bathtubs on their heads, horses trot light.

FREE ALCOHOL IS NOW THE LAW.

HOW THE FARM DISTILLERIES WORK IN GERMANY.

Government Representatives Go About and Measure the Tanks and Contents, and Look After Denaturizing the Alcohol.

The new law putting denaturized alcohol on the free list went into operation October 1. Of the effect of the industry in Germany Congressman Hill of Connecticut, who went abroad with the Commission of Internal Revenue, says many small farm distilleries were found in Germany, some of which, according to government reports, do not make more than a dozen or fifteen gallons of alcohol in a year.

"Isn't it exceedingly expensive for the German government to keep track of 70,000 farm distilleries, many of them being so small that it cannot pay to send an inspector to them?" he was asked.

"Not at all," said Mr. Hill. "The German government has that matter down to a fine point and has no more trouble collecting the revenue from those small plants than our government has in collecting it from the big distilleries of Kentucky. You see, the stills have to be made in a certain way which includes a tank that can be locked with a government lock and sealed with a government seal. The small farm distilleries do not operate all the year round. The distilling is kept for the winter months when there is nothing else to do, just as the American farmer chops his wood or shells his corn in the winter after the crops are all in and he has the leisure to do something other than straight farm work.

"When the German farmer has sorted out his refuse stuff, such as the small and decayed potatoes, or rejected fruits, he drops a line to the government that on a certain date, thirty days hence, he wants to begin operating his still. They have to give thirty days' notice, according to the German law, in order that the government officials may have all the time needed to do their part. Sometime during the thirty days an inspector comes along and looks the still over to see that it is clean and in good running order, and especially that the tank is empty. Then he locks and seals the tank, after which the still is ready for the farmer. He is at liberty to go ahead and distil until the tank is full.

"When the farmer has finally completed his distillation and wants to get the money for his alcohol he notifies the person who is to buy it from him, and as soon as he knows the date it is to be removed, he notifies the government and an inspector comes and removes the seal and measures the contents of the tank and collects the revenue. If the farmer wants to denaturize it on the spot he can do so in the presence of an inspector, when the amount of the tax will be returned to him. But generally the farmers sell through the great central selling agency of Germany, which denaturizes at a central point and in large quantities and collects the rebate from the government in considerable sums. Thus, you will observe, the government agents do not spend any appreciable time at any one farm and one inspector can cover a large territory. Meanwhile the central selling agency pays the farmer on the basis of beverage alcohol and rebates to him for all which is denaturized. It is a perfect acting system and is not exorbitantly expensive for the government.

"There are, of course, many farmers who do not feel that they have enough of an alcohol crop to pay them to maintain a still. These join with others in a coöperative distillery and that I imagine will be what many farmers in this country will do. It will work much as does the old cider mill in the country here now. The farmers will haul their alcohol producing crops to the still, and will get their return on what is produced, either in alcohol or money, as may seem best to meet their desires and necessities.

"But of one thing I am more and more convinced the more I look into it, and that is that with the waste which has been going on on the American farm ever since there has been an American farm, and with the abundance of our farm resources, we can make alcohol cheaper than any German farmer can. In fact, I am willing to predict that within a few years we will be leading the world in this industry, not only in the production of alcohol but in the invention of appliances for its use. The German housewife has her flatiron kept constantly hot by means of alcohol and does not lose any steps traveling to and from the stove; but you look out for the American inventor when he once gets his hands on alcohol and see if he does not turn out something that will do away with the flatiron entirely. If the German can run waterworks and engines and can light railway stations with alcohol, I shall not be surprised to see Americans run roadroad trains and light cities with the same material. Its possibilities are certainly without limit, and I believe we are equal to their development."

He Knew Only One.

A teacher had been telling her class of boys, that recently worms had become so numerous that they destroyed crops, and it was necessary to import the English sparrow to exterminate them. The sparrows multiplied very fast and were gradually driving out the native birds.

Johnny was apparently very inattentive and the teacher thinking to catch him napping said:

"Johnny, which is worse, to have worms or sparrows?"

Johnny hesitated a moment and then replied:

"Please, I never had the sparrows."—[Exchange.

Phlogopite.

YUMA (Ariz.) Oct. 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please give me a mineralogical description of the sample in this (dental-cement) box. Yours truly,

J. F. T.

ANSWER: It is phlogopite, mixed with lepidolite. Luster sub-metallic, in part pearly. Color dark-green. Hardness 2.5. Brittle and sectile. Tabular, foliaceous, and scaly in habit. Structure interspersed. In the open tube, before the blow-pipe, yields water which often tests for fluorine. On charcoal with b. b. flame fuses on edges. One other impurity is calcite. The specimen is not a true and distinct mineralogical specimen.

Ozone, and Ozone Gold Process.

PASADENA, Oct. 2.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please reply to subjoined questions: (1) Give a definition of ozone and the name of its discoverer. (2) Could pyritiferous ores be oxidized with ozone and be successfully worked on a commercial scale? (3) What method would you advise for a trial (by ozone) on such ores.

Thanking you in advance for any information you will give me in The Times columns. Yours truly, D. B. T.

ANSWER: Condensed oxygen is a good definition of ozone. Ozone is formed from pure oxygen and the molecules consist of three atoms of oxygen. Three volumes of oxygen yield two volumes of ozone.

Ozone was discovered by Schonbein in 1840; it is characterized by a peculiar odor (phosphorous odor) and great reactive ability. It is obtained from oxygen in many ways; "it is always produced when the gas is liberated, or when it takes part in a reaction; thus, in the decomposition of peroxides by concentrated sulphuric acid, in the electrolysis of water (at the positive pole,) in the slow oxidation of moist phosphorous, in the combustion of hydrocarbons, and in the action of the so-called silent discharge in an atmosphere of oxygen or air. In none of these instances is all the oxygen ever converted into ozone; only a small portion—in most favorable conditions 5-6 per cent.—suffers this change." (2) No. (3) Provide yourself with an air-pump. Place several pieces of phosphorous (after cutting it with the scissors) into a large flask, in which you first place a solution of one ounce of potassium bichromate to ten fluid ounces of water. Into this solution drop about one ounce of phosphorous.

Attach a piece of rubber tubing, one end to the air pump, the other to the flask (a Wouffe bottle is just the thing;) force the air through the bichromate solution containing the phosphorus. From the Wouffe bottle convey the ozone through rubber tubing into a second flask containing the pyritiferous ore, powdered, and slightly moistened with water. Thus force the air from the pump for seven or eight hours. Practically, there is no method by which pyritiferous ores could be oxidized with ozone; i. e., by assay before treatment, and assay after ozone treatment the results would show only 2 or 3 per cent. of the ore oxidized. In a line, such a process is a laboratory curiosity, and of no value commercially or otherwise.

Topaz and Aragonite.

PIOCHE (Nev.) Oct. 1, 1906.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please name and describe the crystals in small tobacco sack, and also the white substance in small yellow envelope. Yours truly,

W. Y.

ANSWER.—The crystals in the small tobacco sack are topaz. Topaz is adamantine and vitreous in luster. White, pale red, light green, light brown, pale blue and yellow, in color. Topaz is known as "number 8" in Mohs's scale of hardness. A circular or columnar in habit. Structure massive and interspersed. Orthrorhombic in crystallization. Perfect in cleavage, and of stalky fracture. Sp. gr., 3 to 3.5. Many varieties become pink or yellow when heated. Topaz is infusible before the blowpipe; it scratches quartz, and is partly attacked by sulphuric acid. Topaz is composed of alumina, silica and fluorine. If the smooth surfaces are rubbed on cloth they become electric. The yellow varieties are used as gems.

The white substance in the yellow envelope is aragonite (calcium carbonate.) Aragonite is 4 in hardness, while calcite (calcium carbonate also) is 3 in the scale of hardness; particularly note this difference in hardness, and also, the further distinctions: Calcite possesses a dull, vitreous luster; aragonite silk and resinous luster. Both minerals are brittle and like Jacob's coat, appear in many colors.

"Aragonite differs from calcite in its greater hardness and specific gravity and in containing from ½ to 4 per cent. of strontium carbonate, and more rarely from 2 to 4 per cent. of lead carbonate."

The question arises: How can we tell one mineral from the other? Aragonite, before the blow-pipe, is easily distinguished from calcite by the fact that it flies into powder, at once, when exposed to heat, while a sample of calcite placed by its side on charcoal and the flame applied remains unchanged. "The cleavage planes of calcite are, moreover, always inclined, while those of aragonite are in a longitudinal direction."

Odor of Minerals.

STNTA BARBARA, Oct. 2, 1906—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please name and describe what is known as the "odor" of minerals, and also, kindly recommend a work on mineralogy suitable for a beginner. Yours respectfully,

G. T. B.

Answer: The odor of minerals may be tested by friction or by strongly breathing on them. Six of such odors follow:

(1.) Alliaceous, garlic-like. Minerals and other substances carrying arsenic give off a garlic odor if heated by the blow-pipe flame. This odor is a sure indication of arsenic in the substance from which such fumes are produced.

(2) Horseradish odor. Ores of selenium yield the smell of decaying horseradish by heating.

(3) Sulphurous odors. This odor is given off in heating pyrite, sulphur and sulphides. Pyrite gives the odor when struck with a hammer or by other friction.

(4) Bituminous odor is that of bitumen.

(5) Feted odor. This is given off when anthraconite (stinkstone) is rubbed against another stone or mineral. The odor is that of rotten eggs (hydrogen sulphide.)

(6) Argillaceous odor. If pyrargillite be heated the smell of wet clay is given off. This (argillaceous odor) is detected, also, if such minerals as clay-slate, serpentine, some aluminum silicates and clays, generally, by strongly breathing upon them.

"Dana's Mineralogy" is the book desired.

Points of Law.

SOME RECENT DECISIONS OF THE COURTS.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

Recovery for frightening a man ill in bed, by the explosion of dynamite in front of his house, so that he died within two weeks thereafter from the shock and the attending exertion in aiding his wife, who was also ill, is denied in Huston vs. Freemansburg (Pa.,) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.,) 49. With this case is a note reviewing all the authorities on right to recover for physical injuries resulting from fright caused by a wrongful act.

A count in a declaration charging injury through the frightening of a horse by an object near a highway is held, in Norfolk & W. R. Co. vs. Gee (Va.) 3, L.R.A. (N.S.,) 111, to be demurrable, unless it charges that the object was in its nature calculated to freighten horses of ordinary gentleness.

For the purposes of garnishment, a debt is held, in Baltimore & O. R. Co. vs. Allen (W. Va.,) 3 L.A.R. (N.S.,) 608, to be annexed to the person of the debtor, and subject to garnishment wherever he is found unless expressly made payable elsewhere.

A city charter provision making it the duty of the owners or occupants of premises in front of which sidewalks are located to keep such walks in repair, or pay the expenses incurred by the city in doing so, is held, in Hay vs. Baraboo (Wis.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 84, not impliedly to make such owners or occupants liable to travelers for injuries occasioned by the walks being out of repair.

Poles and wires strung along a city street to facilitate communication between inhabitants of the city by telephone are held, in Frazier vs. East Tennessee Teleр. Co. (Tenn.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 323, not to constitute an additional burden on the fee, for which compensation must be made to the owners.

A homestead occupied by the husband and children while the wife is insane and confined in an asylum is held, in Withers vs. Love (Kan.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 514, not to be abandoned by the husband's sentence and confinement for a term of years in the penitentiary, and the removal of the minor children from the homestead.

Knowledge on the part of one on trial for homicide, that decedent was a quarrelsome and dangerous man, is held, in State vs. Feeley (Mo.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 351, not to be necessary to admit evidence of that fact in support of his claim that he shot in self-defense. The other cases on character and reputation of the deceased as affecting homicide are collated in a note to this case.

In a homicide case, testimony of antecedent threats or acts of violence by the deceased against the defendants is held, in State vs. Tolla (N. J. Err. & App.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 523, not to be admissible when it appears that at the time of the homicide there was no threat or act by the deceased which, even in the light of any previous threats or acts, could justify the homicidal act.

That one accused of murder believed that it was necessary to take the life of his adversary to protect himself is held, in State vs. Beckner (Mo.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 535, not to absolve him from liability, unless he had reasonable cause to apprehend danger, which fact must appear from the evidence. The standpoint of determination as to danger and necessity to kill in self-defense is the subject of a note to this case.

The giving of a note by a husband in settlement of an account for family expenses is held, in McCartney & Sons Co. vs. Carter (Iowa) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 145, not to be conclusive on the wife, under a statute making husband and wife jointly liable for such expenses, either as to the existence of the debt or as to the amount thereof.

The right of a woman suing to annul her marriage on the ground of the incapacity of the man because of insanity at the time of the marriage, to an allowance of alimony and counsel fees, is denied in Jones vs. Brinsmade (N. Y.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 192.

When a man and woman intend to marry and live together as husband and wife, but their intent is frustrated by the existence of some unknown impediment, it is held, in Chamberlain vs. Chamberlain (N. J. Err. & App.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 244, that when the impediment is removed, and it is shown that the same intent continues, their relations are lawful.

Under a statute expressly extending the mechanics' lien law to the property of married women, it is held, in Ball vs. Paquin (N. C.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 307, that the lien will attach to property for the improvement of which such woman has contracted in a manner sufficient to charge her real estate.

A note given by a woman to a creditor of her husband, whose claim has been discharged in bankruptcy proceedings, not in payment of the debt, but rather as collateral security, is held, in Widger vs. Baxter (Mass.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 436, to be without consideration and unenforceable.

That one whose mind and memory are sufficiently sound to enable him to know and understand the business in which he is engaged has sufficient capacity to make a will is held, in Mason vs. Havens (Conn.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 172.

One who has ability to understand the nature of the act in which he is engaged, and its scope and effect, or its nature and consequences, is held, in Sprinkle vs. Wellborn (N. C.) 3 L.R.A. (N.S.) 174, to be able to make a contract.

Forty years a practicing psychic, known from ocean to ocean as the marvel of two hemispheres, press and public recognize Prof. Milburn as the foremost and most able clairvoyant and spirit medium now before the public. Where others fail he succeeds with ease and he positively will NOT accept fee for his readings unless you are perfectly satisfied and receive the information you desire. Marvelous demonstrations of second sight, that must be seen to be believed, so be sure and consult him at once. Elevate thyself! Know thy future. Positively no equal on earth in his profession. By his wonderful powers he will tell your full name, tells what you called for, tells what you want to know. If not correct, free, free. So positive am I of my power to tell the pats, present and future that I will make NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, NO CHARGE, unless you obtain the information you desire and find me superior to all clairvoyants, palmists and mediums in this city.

SPECIAL OFFER FOR ONE WEEK ONLY.

Realizing there are many skeptical people in Los Angeles, and that this city has been overrun with pretenders under the guise of clairvoyance, palmistry, etc., and that many of its best citizens would be only too anxious to visit a TRUE clairvoyant medium were they assured of satisfaction, therefore Prof. Milburn will (to convince the public of Los angeles of his superiority over all clairvoyants) give his full readings to all, for seven days only, at

50C

WHEN CONSULTING A CLAIRVOYANT ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. AS A TEST IN THE READING HE WILL TELL YOUR NAME, AGE, OCCUPATION, WHOM AND WHEN YOU WILL MARRY.

ASSISTANCE FOR TROUBLED OR UNFORTUNATE—If you are in trouble of any kind, discontented, unhappy, or not satisfied in life, or have domestic, love or business troubles, you will be told how to overcome all trouble. WHEN OTHERS FAIL HE SUCCEEDS WITH EASE.

HE GIVES ADVICE ON BUSINESS, speculation, investments, insurance, changes, travels, health, sickness, love, divorce, marriage, lawsuits, separations, wills, deeds, mortgages, patents, claims, collections, mining, etc. He will tell you what trade, speculation, or profession you are adapted for.

LAWSUITS, WILLS, DIVORCES—He can render you assistance and give you advice in a way that will bring success in business transactions, property speculation, investments, mining, etc.

Tells how to WIN the man or woman you love, and how to make your husband or wife be true to you, and how to overcome all your enemies.

MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 222 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17,)
by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS, AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that what pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 9 to 3.)

FOR FOUR DAYS ONLY.
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.

REGULAR FEE, $2, $3 AND $5.
ALL READINGS REDUCED THIS WEEK.

If you contemplate consulting a life-reader, several things should be taken into consideration, ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON-SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

These things, taken under consideration, will place a thinking public in a position to judge for themselves and not be misled, imposed upon or their time thrown away.

WONDERFUL—ASTONISHING—CONVINCING.
ST. ELMO WILL tell you your full name, age, occupation, your mother's maiden name and whom and when you will marry and what you called for, without asking you a question; will tell you the name of your sweetheart, or anything you want to know. He sends you away much wiser and happier than when you called.

IT IS NOT ONLY WHAT CAN BE SAID BY AN ABLE LIFE-READER, BUT WHAT CAN BE DONE, for besides the wonderful gift of second sight, Mr. St. Elmo possesses the secret knowledge of reconstructing unhappy domestic affairs, of making the home happy, of gaining the one you wish in marriage, of making the one you love admire and love you, of overcoming rivals and enemies, gives you the secret power of influencing others (without their knowledge,) into doing your every wish. MY MAGAZINE, "INVESTING FOR PROFIT," (which I'll send free) is worth $10 a copy to any man who intends to invest any money, however small; who has money invested unprofitably, or who can save $5 or more per month, but who hasn't learned the art of investing for profit.
It demonstrates the REAL earning power of money—the knowledge financiers and bankers hide from the masses.
It shows how to invest small sums and how to make them grow into fortunes—the actual possibilities of intelligent investments.
It reveals the enormous profits bankers make and shows how one can make the same profits safely.
It explains HOW stupendous fortunes are made and WHY they are made—how $1000 grows to $22,000.
To introduce my magazine write me NOW, mention this paper and I'll send it SIX MONTHS FREE.

Offer the Ocean Park Bath House stock for one dollar per share.

My list has grown so large that I am compelled to omit the Coeur D'Alene list, but I wish to state that MacDermott has made arrangements and has a representative on the Spokane Stock Exchange, so can buy and sell and give you the best results on any Coeur D'Alene or Idaho stocks. Bring your Coeur D'Alene stocks to MacDermott at the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, Broadway near First, the only mining exchange with a public call of stocks in Los Angeles. Come to the exchange, where practically all the stock business of Los Angeles is done.

Realizing that the average investor does not know how to purchase mining stocks, MacDermott has concluded to secure from time to time blocks of the best stocks, which he will offer to customers and the general public. MacDermott, as president of the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, occupies a position which guarantees any stock which he may approve. Also his judgment has been tested before the public this last two years in Los Angeles. Take my advertisements and see for yourselves.

Now MacDermott places before the public a splendid purchase in the shares of the MOHAWK FLORENCE LEASING COMPANY. I have secured ten thousand shares of this stock and no other broker in Los Angeles has any of this stock to offer. Now here is a company having four leases. You have been and are offered stocks in companies with one lease—this has four, three of which are already in ore. The leases are long, running from eight to ten months yet. The management is of the best—practical and successful. The president is G. H. Hayes of Hayes & Monnette, owners of the great Hayes & Monnette lease on the Mohawk, which is producing $20,000 to $30,000 per day.
Vice-President—J. L. Lindsey, cashier State Bank and Trust Co., Goldfield. A successful mine owner.
Treasurer—James E. Degan, cashier Nye and Ormsby County Bank, Goldfield.
Superintendent—George Vickers, late of Denver; mining man of large experience and success.

What do you think of this management? These men are on the ground. They are among the most successful producers in Goldfield. Get in the band wagon with them. MacDermott urges customers and friends to purchase this fine stock. Come and get a large map, showing the leases and giving full information. They are FREE.

Now, MacDermott has placed in front of you this splendid stock at the starting price of TWENTY CENTS PER SHARE. This stock will be listed on the Goldfield Stock Exchange and the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange, Los Angeles, where the stock can be traded in at any time. If you do not purchase, you will have your self to blame. The opportunity is now offered to you, backed by MacDermott's indorsement. Buy and show the miners and business men of Goldfield and Nevada that you will buy good stock if it is offered to you.

MacDermott has fought for the interests of the public and against the fake promoters of this town. I honestly believe the public will buy good stocks if they are offered to them. I tried the public by offering them the Round Mountain Antelope pooled stock. They bought readily. It was, and is, a splendid buy. Now I am offering another. Recollect that I have only ten thousand shares to sell at 20 cents per share.

Investigate all you want and telegraph to the best men in Goldfield. ASK THEM. MacDermott has made a reputation for square dealing and would not lose that reputation for all the gold in Goldfield. Money is not all. I value the good will of my fellow-man more. Nothing hurts me more than to be compelled to speak against any man or company or fake promoter, and when I do, I do so as a disagreeable duty I owe the public, but I thank God I can speak good words of good men and good companies, for there are many such. I only wish that the fake promoters would realize that money obtained that way will surely bring its own deserts, whether for good or ill.

A representative of the Southwest Miners' Stock Exchange will visit Bullfrog and examine the mines there, so I may have something good to offer from the Bullfrog district before long.

There are many good mines in the Bullfrog district and Los Angeles should be the natural center for that district, and the mining men of Bullfrog should have transfer offices in Los Angeles and should work in harmony with this exchange to put before the investing public the best stocks.

THE SOUTHWEST MINERS' STOCK EXCHANGE extends an invitation to every mining man in the Bullfrog district to visit our exchange and see for themselves the members of this exchange are miners. They know what it is to pound a drill and to fuse a shot as well as the best of them. So when you come to Los Angeles come and see us.

When you want to buy or sell any stocks, see MacDermott. He will give you a square deal. MacDermott does the largest stock brokerage business in Los Angeles. Come to the

FOR SALE—

COEUR D'ALENE MINING STOCK.

I handle all the stocks quoted on this market of the Coeur D'Alene Mining district. I have visited a number of the properties owned by the different companies, therefore am familiar with the majority of the best known and most active stocks of the Coeur d'Alene, and know from personal investigation the real merit and value which these stocks represent.

Through my efforts in placing the treasury stock of numerous prospects, they have been developed into paying mines, among these being Snowstorm, Big Creek, and Tamarack and Chesapeak.

SNOWSTORM I originally sold at 15c. It is now worth $3. This stock paid a dividend of $90,000, or 6c a share, in this month.

BIG CREEK, another property the treasury stock of which I sold at 10c, is now soaring toward the dollar mark.

I am in the market for:
Reindeer,
Idaho Los Angeles,
Tarbox,
O. K.,
Big Creek,
Tamarack Chesapeake,
Stewart Benton,
Moonlight,
Rex.
I have for sale:
Idaho Los Angeles,
Benton,
Tarbox,
O. K.,
Reindeer,
Mayflower,
Moonlight,
Oom Paul,
Rex,
Stewart,
Stanley,
Silver Cliff,
Little Chief,
Iron Crown,
West Bell,
Great Northern (near Burke, Idaho).

The Idaho-Los Angeles has just made a remarkable strike of rich carbonate ore of shipping quality, the stock is now 15 cents a share, and I believe this stock will be worth 50 cents before the first of the year. The property of the Idaho-Los Angeles is on the same vein as the Tamarack and Chesapeak, the stock of which is now $1.50 and the company is making steady shipments of ore to the smelter.

SNOWSTORM EXTENSION MINING CO.

This property is appropriately named, it being the adjoining claims to the now famous big copper producer, THE SNOWSTORM COMPANY of Mullan, in the Coeur d'Alene district. The Snowstorm Extension Copper Mining Company owns 3000 feet of the Snowstorm vein adjoining the latter property to the east. No long cross cuts will be necessary as in the case of all the other properties to the west, but driving toward the Snowstorm, from the North Fork, the vein can be picked up from the start. Contract has been given for 200 feet of tunnel on the Snowstorm Extension. Two shifts of miners are to drive the tunnel, and the work will be pushed to the limit under excellent management.

This property bids fair to being a second Snowstorm, which is now paying 6c a share dividend on 1,500,000 shares.

A limited block of the treasury stock of the Snowstorm Extension is now being placed.

THE D. & W. MINING COMPANY owns a copper property located 40 miles from the Needles, Cal., which has a most excellent showing, and will bear the strictest investigation. We are offering the first block of treasury stock (limited to 50,000 shares) at 15 cents a share. This is a new property, but has the highest recommendation of the best mining experts, and has exceptional values on the surface which have been proven to increase with depth. We have personally inspected the property, and what we say to you is from personal observation, and not hearsay, and we are willing to back up our statements by offering to pay your way to and from the mine, if our statements are not facts. From assays we have had of the ore, we expect to be shipping before a great while, therefore the opportunity to buy at this price, 15c, will not last long.

Bond selling.

We advise the selling of all bonds where the rate of interest is only five per cent. or under. Bonds will continue to decline in price for some time to come. New issues of quasi-public corporations and industrials must pay at least 5½ or 6 per cent. on par, or they will not find buyers. Just as long as banks can invest their surplus money in real estate mortgages, bonds paying a low rate of interest cannot find a market. "The Bond-buyer" of October 2nd, mentions Seattle, Syracuse, Schenectady, Hoboken and Atlantic City, as being unable to sell bonds on a four per cent. basis. We predict lower prices for all issues now on the market, until they reach a basis of at least five and one-half or six per cent. on the amount of capital invested.

SEARCHLIGHT.

Take a look at the last map issued by the U. S. Surveyor of this district, and you will find that the Searchlight-Parallel properties lie in the very center of the whole. Some forty mines are now operating throughout the camp, most of them surrounding the Parallel properties. This company is actively at work bringing ore to the surface of various grades; some of the assays giving returns as high as $200 per ton. Better buy these shares now while the stock is low. A big advance will take place shortly, on all of the better Searchlight stocks.

IF YOU HAVE MONEY TO INVEST JOIN our syndicate now being organized to operate what is considered to be the most promising "Gem Mine" in San Diego county, and which produces exquisitely tinted beryls, beautiful vari-colored tourmalines, blood-red rubies, a wine-colored gem not yet identified, also a stone said by experts to be a diamond; no mine in the world produces so great a variety of gems; an expert selected by members of the syndicate will be sent to examine the mine, and on his favorable report subscriptions to the syndicate will be due and payable; "not before." Full share one thousand dollars; half share five hundred dollars. A few of the gems may be seen at office of syndicate's attorney. Subscription list closes October 24th.

MINING—

IF YOU HAVE MONEY TO INVEST JOIN our syndicate now being organized to operate what is considered to be the most promising "gem mine" in San Diego county; and which produces exquisitely tinted beryls, beautiful vari-colored tourmalines, blood-red rubies, a wine-colored gem not yet identified; also a stone said by experts to be a diamond; no mine in the world produces so great a variety of gems; an expert selected by members of the syndicate will be sent to examine the mine, and on his favorable report subscriptions to the syndicate will be due and payable, "not before." Full share one thousand dollars; half share five hundred dollars. A few of the gems may be seen at office of syndicate's attorney; subscription list closes October 24th.

J. IRVINE McKENNA,
Attorney,
21 316-317 Lankershim Bldg., City.

WE WANT A LARGE LOW GRADE GOLD proposition. We are in position to examine immediately, as the syndicate with which we are operating has their representative on the ground, and we will examine and recommend property running from $5 to $10, providing conditions warrant. We can also place a No. 1 copper property. We prefer a going proposition, and one that is worth from a half million to two million dollars. With the right party and the right property we can do business quickly, and the owner will not have to wait for his money. We must know about these propositions not later than Wednesday. ONION CULTURE ON THE DESERT.

NEW INDUSTRY THAT PROMISES GOOD RESULTS.

Yield Will Net Farmers About $400 Per Acre and the Odorous Vegetable Can Be Put on the Market Earlier Than the Texas Product. Seed from Canary Islands.

BY ELTHIA EMBODY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

The horticultural industries of this fertile section, formerly known as the "desert," have been gradually increasing until the present time, they are more numerous and show greater progress than in any previous season. Since attaining the distinction of being the greatest melon district in our country, the valley has won success in various minor industries, such as the growing of grapes, alfalfa, barley, broom corn, etc. Sweet potatoes yield there enormously. One grower has shipped such quantities of this vegetable that he is known as "Sweet Potato Bill." Asparagus makes a phenomenal growth, is rendered free from rust by the dryness of the atmosphere and has become one of the paying crops. "Grass" they call it there.

Onion growing on a large scale is the latest venture in which many of the valley ranchmen are now engaged. The cultivation of this "tearful" vegetable was tried with such marvelous success last year that over 300 acres will be planted this season. The one great inducement to its cultivation in the Coachella Valley is its early maturity—from four to six weeks earlier than any other region, Texas not excepted. With the additional inducement of water in abundance, and soil that seems naturally adapted to it, a brighter outlook could not be desired. Another excellent feature of this crop is, that when mature and ready for the market, it is not perishable. If the market is low, one may hold his crop for better prices.

The White Bermuda is the variety chosen. In appearance it is not as white as the Silverskin, but is of a pale straw color. The bulbs are broad and flat in form, and have the finest keeping qualities. The flesh is crisp and solid. It is said that no onion in existence has such a delicate flavor as the Bermuda; even those who abhor the strong, rank odor of the common varieties, consider the Bermuda a choice delicacy.

The seed used by the Coachella Valley ranchers is procured from a firm in the South who make a specialty of raising seed of the Bermuda varieties and control the entire output. This firm has its own fields, not on the Bermuda Islands, as is generally supposed, but on Teneriffe Island, one of the Canary group, off the coast of Africa. The genuine imported seed cannot be obtained in this country before September. The reason the home-produced seed is not used is because it cannot be produced as early as on the Canary Islands.

Some interesting details have recently been reported concerning the expense, manner of cultivation and the returns for onions grown in the Coachella Valley during the experimental years. A. W. McGill was one of the first to try. It was in the winter of 1904-05 that Mr. McGill planted Bermuda onions on his ranch near Thermal. In April he shipped a sample crate to the American Produce Company of San Francisco, for which he received $2.03 net, and a letter from D. Campbell, the manager of the company, stating that "the onions were simply perfection, and it occurs to me that this would be a good proposition to encourage. I think Bermuda onions can be produced earlier in the Coachella Valley than at Texas points, in which case they would find a ready market throughout all eastern points and thereby create a traffic which is not now enjoyed. I mention this from the fact that I know you are interested in the welfare of the Coachella Valley, and being interested myself, am anxious to bring such matters to the notice of those who will give them a helping hand. I fully believe that if the White Bermuda onion can be produced a few weeks earlier than is done in Texas, the traffic can be made as large, if not larger than the present cantaloupe business."

Gordon Brothers, also onion growers of the valley, stated last season that it costs about $100 per acre to raise onions and the crop will return about $400 per acre. Ten tons to the acre is the average crop when properly cared for.

J. H. Walden of Thermal last year planted seven acres to Bermudas, from which, on April 30, 1906, he shipped the first carload ever sent out of the valley. He sold them for 2 cents a pound f.o.b. Thermal, to the Keystone Produce Company of Los Angeles, demonstrating to the residents what could be done in the new industry. Mr. Walden soon after shipped three more carloads from the same fields. Eleven carloads was the entire output of last season's crop. The onions were no more than out of the way before the shipments of cantaloupes started up. The successful experience of last year has proved to the onion growers that carefulness and watchfulness all around will establish another paying industry in their midst.

Early this fall, acres and acres of new ground were cleared and carefully prepared for extensive onion fields. Even the Indians of Martinez have recognized the possible profits and have put out many acres.

The seed is procured at a cost of $1.75 per pound; in 10-pound lots, $1.65; in 50-pound lots and up, $1.50 per pound. It is sold in Los Angeles at retail at $2.50 per pound, or 15 cents per ounce.

Z. D. Baker, a prosperous rancher from the San Joaquin Valley, is a recent arrival at Thermal, who has gone into onion cultivation. Mr. Baker was induced to try the desert climate for throat trouble and has leased the Mann ranch for the purpose of planting nine acres to Bermudas, thus getting open-air work and profiting both physically and financially.

Best authorities on onion culture say that the seed should be sown in seed beds or cold frames, in which the soil has been frequently worked over to get the fertilizer thoroughly incorporated. The best time to sow the seed is from September 1 to January, though October is the favorite month. One ounce of seed will produce about 5000 plants, when given proper care. But, of course, it is quite impossible to be exact as to numbers. The young plants should be transplanted to the field before the stems are as large as a lead pencil. This growth is generally attained in six weeks. The soil of the field cannot be too fine or too rich. The saying of our grandfathers, "as rich as an onion bed," exemplifies the requirement of this noisy vegetable.

Experience has shown that more seed is required when sown in the field than when sown in beds and transplanted; and that it costs more to thin out onions grown from seeds sown in the field than for transplanting. When the seedlings are removed from the bed, the adhering soil should be carefully removed and the leaves and roots trimmed off—the roots hinder the work of setting out, and the long leaves interfere with cultivation. In transplanting, the strong, hardy young onions should be selected, in order to insure uniformity of size when mature. The remaining weaker plants are not wasted; they should be utilized for sets and may be planted out much closer together than the others. To obtain sets, the little bulbs are gathered as soon as the tops die. They are then ready for use. In small gardens much time is saved by using these instead of seed. When planted out, they make delicious green onions, or large ones, if permitted to grow.

In the field, about 160,000 plants are set to the acre and a most tedious job it is. The rows should be about two feet apart when a horse is to do the cultivating. For hand cultivation, one foot apart is sufficient.

The industrious rancher who gives his land careful preparation, obtains the best seed, handles his young plants carefully and promptly and keeps them thoroughly weeded and cultivated, cannot fail to produce a crop of onions that will bring him handsome returns.

From the acreage just planted to White Bermudas in the Coachella Valley, the ranchmen expect $50,000 net, for their crop some time in March or April of next year. This figure is a conservative one, as only a fair crop at a medium price was used in the estimate.

GOMPERS AN ANARCHIST.

How San Francisco Was "Unionized" at Suggestion of Labor Czar.

Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, in the address before the Chautauqua society, advocated the passing of laws inflicting the death penalty on anarchists who take life, and whipping and imprisonment for less serious offenses. Whether Mr. Bonaparte had Mr. Samuel Gompers and his followers in mind when making this speech, we are not able to state, but that it should have been directed to Mr. Gompers there can be no doubt. Mr. Gomper is an anarchist, and so are many of his followers. He is a self-confessed anarchist, for he said in a speech to his affiliated unions in the Mechanics' Pavilion in San Francisco three years ago: "I want to say to you gentlemen present here tonight that every non-union man in this city must get out of it." A campaign was immediately inaugurated, and how well his followers carried out his command and how completely they forced the non-union men out of San Francisco is shown by the pitiable condition that city now finds herself in, and by the revolting record of crime perpetrated by the outlaws under the domination of the labor trust bully.

Coercion and thugging were the means employed, the latter often resulting in murder. If an employer could not be forced or intimidated into discharging his non-union employé, personal violence was resorted to and the offender was waylaid by a band of five or six thuggers, regularly organized and known as the "entertainment" or "bat" committee, and in more than one case his wrist was broken so that he could not work; or if he put up a stiff fight and tried to defend himself, he was beaten into insensibility and sometimes killed outright. Another would be followed on the street cars until a lonely place was reached, and then he would be thrown off and told to run for his life, while the crowd would amuse themselves by shooting at him until he was out of sight or dead.

Alibis were prepared in advance, and if by mistake one or more of these thugs were arrested, they were never convicted, because the peace officers were all elected by the unions and belonged to them, or "sympathized" with them, and many of the judges, especially in the police branch of the judiciary had such "sympathy" with unionism that an offender had but to show his "union" card to be discharged with the simple admonition, "not to do it again." Or if a trial was had, the culprit invariably demanded a jury, and a willing police drew the panel from among the saloon-keepers who were known to run the "union saloons," and conviction was thus made impossible.

This continued until the town was thoroughly "unionized" in all of the trades and pursuits, and a non-union man had no more chance of getting a job and holding it than a snowball has of long life on the Arizona desert.

This condition became finally so unbearable and disgusting to liberty-loving citizens, that when investors came to the city, some one was sure to explain matters to them, with the result that they gave San Francisco a wide berth and went to Los Angeles and invested their money, as is conclusively shown in a comparison of the building permits of the two cities.

If Mr. Gompers's words were not the utterance of a true anarchist, then there are no anarchists. They are more. They are treasonable.—[The Square Deal.

EQUAL RIGHTS AND SPECIAL PRIVILEGES

It would be both interesting and valuable, observes the New York Sun, to know exactly what each particular statesman who discourses on the subject means when he eulogizes the noble workingman and bares a proud and swelling bosom to the blast in his defense. Nearly every volcano in the country is now abandoned to violent eruption, and boiling language scalds once happy surfaces beyond the help of ointment or cold cream. Nevertheless it is a fact surcharged with pain that the average citizen in nine cases out of ten doesn't know for certain what special brand of noble workingman the statesman of the moment means to canonize.

Of course, there can be no doubt in the case of the laborious and reverberating Gompers. We all know that in his complacent and serene philosophy there is only one honest laborer on the surface of the earth, and that is the laborer who contributes to his treasury and lends an humble nudge to his political aspirations. No mystery about the frugal and far-seeing Samuel. His vassals are the chosen few. All others wear the brand of "scab" and are anathema. But we should like to know, even approximately, what the Peerless, the Boy Orator of the Platte, regards as a workingman. That is really important. Mr. Bryan has adopted as his chief shriek: "Equal rights for all; special privileges for none."

It sounds like a message from the skies, borne upon the blast of some supernal trumpet. We do not seem to follow Mr. Bryan, however; that is, not altogether. What does he mean by "equal rights" and what by "special privileges?" In the next breath we have him clamoring for the eight-hour law, which is a flagrant [illegible] upon the liberty of the individual, [illegible] denouncing "government by [illegible] tion," which is the only chal[illegible] those "special privileges" [illegible] Gompers, Mitchell and Company [illegible] striving to establish. Here is [illegible] portunity for Mr. Bryan to [illegible] fountain of conversation to the [illegible] advantage. Is the dispen[illegible] "equal rights" really secure if [illegible] can sell his labor where he pleases [illegible] work as long and as hard as he [illegible] proper, while Jones must [illegible] schedule provided for him by G[illegible] and curtail his earnings at the [illegible] of the walking delegate? And [illegible] are the "special privileges" w[illegible] congest the gorge in Mr. Bryan's [illegible] ple midriff and lash him to [illegible] vehemence? Are they the pr[illegible] claimed by certain wicked per[illegible] managing their own affairs [illegible] themselves, or are they the [illegible] claimed by Gompers, Mitchell [illegible] Company of exterminating every [illegible] ingman who undertakes to earn [illegible] lihood without their sanction [illegible] tificate?

Mr. Bryan could most advan[illegible] ly unbosom himself in respect to [illegible] popular conundrums. He is [illegible] gaged in exploiting the country [illegible] a view to 1908. We know already [illegible] he is bent on national owner[illegible] trunk railways and State [illegible] for local lines. To that [illegible] pect we are giving the prayerful [illegible] work it deserves. BIG FACTORIES CLOSE.

Even Rabbinical Aid Fails to Settle the Strike of the Shirt-Makers.

Failing even by the aid of rabbinical aid, which they invoked to settle the acute labor dispute with their 3000 employés, Tuttleman Brothers & Faggen, shirt manufacturers, have shut down two of their big factories and offered them for sale, and it seems but a question of time when their third plant at Eighth street and Snyder avenue, will share the same fate. The firm has advertised its desire to move to some city where labor disputes are easier of settlement. As it is, 25 mills, located in different sections of New York and Pennsylvania, are doing the work that was formerly done in Philadelphia.

The strike at the Tutelman Brothers & Faggen factories involves 3200 people, whose salaries aggregated from $18,000 to $21,000 a week. It has been on for five months, and every phase of a strike, from intimidation to riot, has been experienced. The financial loss to the firm has been heavy.

In two previous strikes the firm conceded the points at issue, but the present strike they looked upon as an effort to impose upon them, and they declined to yield, expressing a desire to go out of business rather than do so. At no time has there been any real approach to a settlement. The employes refused to return to work as individuals unless the company recognized the union.

For the first time in the history of Philadelphia's South Side has rabbinical aid been called in to settle a labor problem where both Jew and Gentile were employed by a Hebrew, and the failure of this effort has set the final seal upon the breach.—[Philadelphia Record.

The Men Who Pay.

The citizens who make up the real sinew and backbone of the country begin to see how they are being ground by the various trusts that feed upon them. There is the labor trust on one side to stop the supply of coal, stop the factories and cut off wages when they order strikes and throw whole communities into distress and want, and the capital trusts on the other side.

The common citizens number about seventy-eight million and the labor trust about two million. The rights and interests of the citizens represent therefore seventy-eight points as compared with two points for the labor trust. This means a very heavy majority of the readers of newspapers and the buyers of merchandise are not members of labor unions or any other form of trust and their power is and should be supreme, both in elections and government. A prominent democrat in Washington is reported as saying:

"There is a great middle class in this country which belongs on the side of neither labor or capital; the professional classes, the farmers, the salaried people, the small owners of property. It is, after all, the greatest class in the country. It has never, however, been brought fairly face to face with the injury where its interests lie in this controversy, which has been broadly denominat[illegible] of capital with labor.

"The coal strike suggests [illegible] of affairs in a timely way. The [illegible] half a million miners, a few [illegible] perhaps, of coal and [illegible] owners and operators, and [illegible] our 80,000,000 people [illegible] great middle class. Every[illegible] come to understand that [illegible] pays for the strikes, and [illegible] that he shivers while [illegible] on.

"So I think it is fair [illegible] great neutral class, or [illegible] or whatever you call it, [illegible] concerned in a particular [illegible] lem, is the one which [illegible] views felt. It is unorga[illegible] never made an effort to [illegible] zation. It is divided [illegible] parties, and it has all [illegible] cal and economic views.

"This class is [illegible] the merits of these [illegible] which labor and capital [illegible] must to say for years. [illegible] inquire 'Where do we get [illegible] be discovering, very [illegible] labor and capital arrayed [illegible] box and at the political [illegible] that it pays the bills; and [illegible] gets ready to take a [illegible] will be doings. It will [illegible] solution of questions that [illegible] ticians have been dodging [illegible] come nearer to the [illegible] either of the more [illegible] parties.—[The Square Deal.

An Unvarnished Statement

For Those Who Think

If you are a pessimist and don't believe there are any honest business men and that the country is going to the bow-wows and everything else, you might as well stop where you are. If on the other hand, you take an optimistic view of things and look on the brightest side of life and believe there are some honest men left, then it will pay you to read this to the end.

If some one were to inform you that you could purchase shares in a company controlling a monopoly, and which during the next twelve months would show big dividends and keep on increasing year by year, and that within a period of four years would be paying almost one hundred per cent. you would hardly credit it. But that is just what I am going to offer you. Before you invest a dollar, however, in the enterprise, I want you to make a thorough investigation of the same. IN FACT, THE MORE YOU INVESTIGATE, THE BETTER SATISFIED I WILL BE, for the larger will be the amount which you will invest in the corporation.

I am the publisher of Modern Women and have one of the finest publishing plants in this country, paid for in cash at lowest cash prices, occupying a seven-story granite and brick building containing over 25,000 feet of floor space, on the corner of Broad and Franklin Streets, devoted solely to my own product. I have built this up in seven years, for seven years ago I did not have a dollar to my name, in fact, it is well known among the publishing fraternity, that I was without food in this city where this magnificent publishing plant is now established. As a publisher I realized what labor-saving machinery meant. In all branches of the publishing business, from the linotype which is an automatic type setter to the fast Web Printing Presses which turned out the matter at a high rate of speed, there was one department for which machinery had never been invented to do away with hand labor, and that was the mailing department. Hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of dollars, have been spent trying to invent machines which would do the mailing, and which in a way is the most important department of a publication, for after the product is once finished it must be sent rapidly on its way and to a publication having a large circulation, it meant employing hundreds of hands, large amount of floor space, etc. In my own plant, we employed ninety-three girls to address wrappers for the magazine and they then wrapped them ready for the mails. About four years ago there was brought to my attention a mailing machine. The inventor had a crude model and I acquired his invention for a fortune. Not being a mechanic, I was under the impression that all I would have to do would be to put in a fine machine plant, make a few alterations in the model that publishers would demand, and then turn out the machines in quantities. Little did I realise that an inventor's model is one thing and a perfected machine another. For four years, I have devoted most of my time and risked over $1,000,000 to perfect this machine. After perfecting the same, I did not go about it the way most inventors do, that is, manufacture them in large quantities and ship them broadcast throughout the country. On the contrary I placed the first machine in my own publishing plant and ran it there under my personal supervision, day in and day out, for ever one year. It stood every test.

Some time ago, I formed the corporation which bears my full name, The George Livingston Richards Company, with a paid up capital stock of $1,000,000, divided into 100,000 shares of the par value of $10 each. This Company owns the publication known as Modern Women, circulation over 400,000 monthly, and they also acquired my controlling interest in the Agnew Auto-Mailing Machine Company, namely, 50,000 shares of the par value of $25 each. There has never been a share of stock sold in the machine company by me for less than $25, and it has commanded as high as $35, and even $40 per share.

The machine company owns one of the finest machine plants in this country, although not the largest by any means.

Of course, every one knows what a successful publication Modern Women is, and those who are interested can readily figure out what the machines save in labor. In my own publishing plant it has permitted us to dispense with the services of ninety-three girls, and we have two vacant floors which speak more eloquently than words as to what the machine has accomplished in the saving of floor space. The machines are an absolute monopoly, and so thoroughly protected are its patents that infringements are impossible, and so strong are the vested rights that the Company instead of selling the machines outright, have chosen the more brilliant policy of leasing them for terms of not less than five years, the average rental amounting to about $800 per year on each machine, a rental of twenty cents per thousand copies being charged with a minimum rental of $500 per annum, which minimum rental covers more than the cost of production. The enormous significance of this statement will be better understood when the cost of manufacture and erection is taken into consideration, showing the almost unprecedented profit of 100 per cent. the first year of their use in the establishments to which they are leased. Each succeeding year is a clear gain, and as may be seen at once, so perfect is the construction that the Company agrees to keep each and every machine in repair. The machine feeds, folds, wraps, pastes, seals, addresses and distributes into mail bags any publication, newspaper, magazine, pamphlet, catalogue or circular, all operations being automatically performed in consecutive order at the rate of eighty-six per minute. So simple is the construction of this remarkable machine, and so certain are its results, that two intelligent boys can safely operate it.

The other machine which the Company owns is a Sealing and Stamping machine, which performs the work of twenty-four girls, its duties being to seal and stamp envelopes, advertising cards, etc., at the rate of eight thousand per hour. This machine, by a simple movement of the lever, instantly seals envelopes without stamping, or if the operator sees fit, stamps without sealing. The sealing and stamping machine is sold outright at a profit which nets the Company over one hundred per cent. of the cost of manufacturing and selling.

Besides this, the Company owns an addressing machine which addresses envelopes, etc., and a stencil cutting machine to cut the stencils used by both the mailing and the addressing machines.

The Agnew Auto-Mailing Machine Company owns the patent rights for United States and Canada for all these machines.

For the Auto-Mailing Machine it is estimated there is a demand in this country for four thousand, and for the sealing and stamping machine a demand for at least twenty-five thousand, for the addressing machine ten thousand, for the stencil cutting machine ten thousand, and besides that the Company will be selling to the users of these machines an average of five hundred million blank stencils annually.

The following tables give you an idea of what the Company is capable of earning and proves most conclusively that no matter how the subject is discussed, no matter how unfavorably the prospective investor chooses to view it, the fact remains that a satisfactory profit cannot fail to accrue.

The Agnew Auto-Mailing Machine Company is capitalized for $2,000,000, all divided into Common Stock of which $2,268,500 has been issued. Now if four thousand auto-mailing machines were rented annually at an average of $800 each, that would be $3,200,000. Twenty-five thousand sealing and stamping machines at an average net profit of $100, would $2,500,000. Ten thousand addressing machines at an average net profit of $25 each, would be $250,000. Ten thousand stencil-cutting machines at an average net profit of $100 each, would be $1,000,000, and five hundred million blank stencils at an average net profit of forty-five cents per thousand, would be $225,000, making a total of $7,175,000. Charge off ten per cent., wear and tear on the mailing machines, namely $320,000, leaving a profit of $6,855,000 or over two hundred and twenty-eight per cent. on the gross capitalization of the mailing machine company.

The average man will call these figures those of a fanciful inventor and to guard against just such as these, I will cut those figures into four parts and we will say that only one thousand auto-mailing machines can be placed at an average rental of $800 per year, which would be $800,000. Six thousand two hundred and fifty sealing and stamping machines at an average net profit of $100 each, which would be $625,000. Twenty-five hundred addressing machines at an average net profit of $25 each, would be $62,500. Twenty-five hundred stencil cutting machines at an average net profit of $100 on each machine would be $250,000 and one hundred and twenty-five million stencils at an average net profit of forty-five cents per thousand, would be $56,250, making a total of $1,793,750. Charge off ten per cent., wear and tear on the mailing machines, namely $80,000, leaving a profit of $1,713,750, or fifty-seven per cent. on the gross capital of the Company.

No doubt the pessimist who does not believe anything is possible, and who prefers to have his money draw three per cent. interest in the savings bank, will again question these figures and say they are those of a dreamer, and to guard against such as these, I have again cut the figures into four parts and that is, if only two hundred and fifty auto-mailing machines can be placed at an average rental of $800 each, which would be $200,000. One thousand five hundred and sixty-two sealing and stamping machines at an average net profit of $100 on each machine, would be $156,200. Six hundred and twenty-five addressing machines at an average net profit of $25 each, making $15.625. Six hundred and twenty-five stencil cutting machines at an average net profit of $100 each, making $62,500 and that thirty-one million two hundred and fifty thousand blank stencils at an average net profit of forty-five cents per thousand, which would be $14,062, making a total of $448,387, from which deduct $20,000 wear and tear on the mailing machines, leaving a net profit of $428,387 or fourteen per cent. on the gross capitalization of the Company.

You can again cut these figures in two and still get more profits than the saving banks or bonds pay, but these figures in themselves would prove ridiculous the same as the statement figuring only two hundred and fifty auto-mailing machines on rental.

Now we will take it for granted that the latter statement which I made is the only one which could be carried out, that is the statement which shows fourteen per cent. on the gross capitalization of the mailing machine company and over twenty per cent., on the capital which is outstanding.

If it only paid 10 per cent., The George Livingston Richards Company alone would receive in dividends $125,000 every year on their own stock holdings in the machine company, not counting the dividends which will be received from the publication, and which this year I believe will show a profit of at least $125,000, and which, like old wine, increases in value as the years go on, and this not only holds good as regards the good-will of the property, but also the earning power.

This, in brief, shows all possible aspects of the situation. Remember, the publication is not an experiment, neither is the machine company; both are going concerns. The machine company is shipping machines as fast as they can manufacture them under present conditions, but what we need is a very large plant outside of the city where we can have our own foundry; in other words a plant capable of taking care of 1000 workmen, hence this stock offering; if it was not for this you could not buy a single share. The newspapers call them the "machine with the brain," and rightly so, for they do everything in their line but talk.

In conclusion all I can say is, that the above is an unvarnished statement, and I would be pleased to have any one INVESTIGATE THOROUGHLY EVERY STATEMENT which I have made for I am quite sure that if they did so, their investment would be limited only by their means.

If this investment is good enough for Bankers, Bank Presidents, Bank Cashiers, Millionaire Merchants, and Manufacturers, Army Officers, Postmasters, Lawyers, Physicians, Clerks, etc., it ought to be good enough for anyone and we number this class of people right now among our shareholders, who only invested after a thorough investigation both as to the Company's standing and my own personal integrity.

Bradstreets one, one of the leading and largest Commercial Credit Agencies, in their rating book gives these companies the highest commercial credit rating. References if requested will be furnished from bankers and well-known business firms.

You can acquire these shares at the present time for $10 each as long as they last. After they are gone, you will find it very difficult to obtain shares at any reasonable figure, for they all closely held and bought by people who realise their worth and who are looking for an income in after years.

If it were not for the fact that I had promised the publishers who are now using the mailing machines outside of Modern Women that I would not divulge their names on account of their being subjected to annoyance by people who contemplate investing, I would gladly publish them here, but as I stated above, every statement which I have made can be verified.

Make all checks, drafts, etc., payable to the order of The George Livingston Richards Co., and I will sent you a fully-paid and non-assessable stock certificate.

FACT AND COMMENT.

THE interest in building material grows more acute from day to day. There must be an ever increasing demand in this community for other building material than lumber. The fire limits must be extended pretty rapidly from time to time, and with every extension comes another area in which lumber cannot enter into building as the principal material. The increasing cost of all kinds of lumber will have the effect of driving people to build in brick or cement more and more, even outside of the fire limits. William Mulholland, the superintendent of the Los Angeles water system, has recently brought to light in a new way the fact that material for making cement exists in great abundance throughout Southern California. He claims to have discovered along the line of the conduit which is to bring the Owens River water to the city an abundance of material for making cement. Mr. Mulholland shows his patriotism by securing these beds of cement material directly for the city. Any one less patriotic than he, which means about 999 out of every 1000 persons in this community, would have given a quiet tip to some friends to locate these beds, organize a company, put up a plant and manufacture the material for the big aqueduct, charging the city $2.50 to $3 a barrel for the cement. Mulholland says he can make it for the city at a cost of $1 a barrel. Now, if cement can be made for the city at a cost of $1 a barrel, it ought to be very possible to sell it for other building purposes in the city of Los Angeles at about $1.50. If good cement can be had here at $1.50 a barrel, there is no doubt a great many more plaster houses will be built than now. The line of the conduit from Owens River does not monopolize all the cement material in Southern California. It exists everywhere, and the near future will see an immense development in the production of this building material at home. It will make, in a way, a new industry of very great importance and give employment to a large number of people right here at home, and money for those who put their money into this kind of industry and keep the money at home here which is going to Puget Sound and other points far up the coast to pay for lumber, which is rising very rapidly month by month in value. The lumber lands of the great Northwest are largely held by a great monopoly, which increases the cost of lumber, not owing to its natural scarceness or the cost of obtaining it, but in an arbitrary way. Of course, the cost of producing lumber increases steadily. The forests near the water have been all cut down, and the logs must be sought at a distance from tidewater and the mill and the ship at increasing cost. But the monopoly, for every dollar added to the cost of production adds another dollar of extra profit for the monopoly. The more attractive investment could be had in Southern California than that of turning out at a fairly low cost an abundant supply of cement.

[illegible] Bricks.

Quite as important to us is the increasing use of brick in our building operations. This is a home product and the industry is in so flourishing a condition at the present time that it furnishes employment for an army of industrious men, who earn excellent wages and support numerous families in comfort. The industry is capable of indefinite expansion. All over this southern country there are beds of fine clay for making as fine brick as are produced in the world. The old-fashioned brick is a thing of the past in building excepting for use in the inside of walls. The pressed brick is the recognized material now for facing. It is exceedingly durable and its cream color is exceedingly restful to the eye. The brickmakers of Los Angeles have extended their operations away beyond the mere production of the regular brick and are making all sorts of hollow tiles and other fireproof materials which are going into our finest buildings. No doubt, as time passes, the skill and ingenuity of our architects and builders will still further extend this use of building material made of our clays. There is at the present time some little friendly discussion going on between the cement men and the brickmakers, the architects and contractors, as to the relative merits of the two materials. Scientific knowledge and practical experience of those engaged in putting up our great buildings will soon result in a solution of whatever dispute there is on this head. The cement and brick men may well possess their souls in patience. There is room enough for both industries to live and flourish, and the men engaged in both industries will find ample employment for their talents and capital, with plenty of returns for the men who conduct their business successfully and honestly.

Special Privileges.

A convention of real estate men of the State held at Fresno last week took up the long-standing matter of legislation as to commissions paid to real estate agents for selling property. An attempt has been made more than once or twice in the State Legislature to put through a bill which might be called a bill to encourage dishonesty and to cinch the real estate owner. The purport of it is to devise some legal means by which real estate agents can collect their commissions on the sale of property where they hold only an oral authorization from the owner of the property to sell. The present condition is undoubtedly hard on the real estate agent. He, no doubt, very often loses his commission through the dishonesty of a property holder. But should a bill be passed for the special advantage of the real estate agents, in fact, if such a bill were passed, the Supreme Court of the State would promptly declare it unconstitutional. No special law can be made for one class, and if any such act were put on the statute books, if any act were passed to enable real estate agents to collect, it would have to be extended to include all factors or brokers who sell any kind of property whatsoever. It would open the door wide to all kinds of litigation and to actual fraud on the part of dishonest real estate agents. Why should they have any special legislation passed in this respect? If the real estate agents are losing commissions in this way through the dishonesty of real estate owners, it is their own fault. Other factors or brokers have to have and show in case of dispute absolutely written authority to conduct the sale and the commission to be collected is stipulated in the written document. Real estate agents contend that they cannot obtain this privilege from those who have real estate for sale. They can if they will. There is an organization of real estate agents covering the whole State, and if they will get together and agree not to receive instructions to sell real estate in any way excepting by a written document, they can solve this difficulty for themselves. That is the way other brokers are obliged to conduct their business, and it is really the best way for the real estate men to do. Anyhow, a special law covering only real estate agents would certainly be declared unconstitutional in the State of California.

September Building Record.

The Chicago Construction News, which issues about the end of the first week of every month a report of building operations in over thirty of the principal cities of the United States, shows that for September there was a loss of 13 per cent. In the cost of the buildings erected as compared with that month a year ago. In some instances a gain was shown of very large percentages. For instance, in St. Paul the gain was 83 per cent, this year over last, but in that city the building operations for a month fell considerably short of $900,000. The previous year it was short of $500,000. Salt Lake City shows a gain of 80 per cent., but there the building operations count only seventy-four buildings at a cost of less than $200,000. A year ago there were only forty-nine buildings put up, at a cost of just less than $116,000. Los Angeles makes rather a sensational record in falling behind September, 1905, by 11 per cent. This is probably the first instance of decrease in a year. In Portland, Or., the increase was 22 per cent., but the total operations fell to below $500,000, the number of buildings being 233. Seattle, like ourselves, shows a falling off, but larger, being as much as 15 per cent. The number of buildings put up in that city in a month was 676, and the cost a little over $400,000.

Los Angeles Leads.

Every fact coming to light establishes the lead of Los Angeles in everything in the building line, and in the sale of real estate among the cities which may fairly be compared with this. In Portland, Or., the real estate men are real jubilant in view of the activity prevailing in that city, both in building and in real estate. The Oregonian informs us that the transfers of real estate in 1905 amounted to a little more than $15,000,000 in value, and that for the nine months of the present year the business done runs to more than $16,000,000. It is impossible to tell here in Los Angeles just what business is done in real estate as to values. The records go on with merely nominal values given in the transfer of the property. But real estate men estimate that we sell as much as $75,000,000 worth of property a year. The Porland paper shows the number of transfers will run at about thirty to fifty a day. Ours run from 150 to 350 a day. In building, the Oregonian shows that in 1900, for the whole year the building permits issued in the city called for an expenditure of a little less than $950,000, and for nine months of 1906 the figures were $4,334,537. There has been a steady gain in building in the Webfoot City for the seven years, but compared with ours the operations are small. The Superintendent of Buildings in this city shows a full average of a thousand permits a month, and there has not been a month in the year when the cost has not run to over $1,000,000, running over $2,000,000 in two of these months. The present month of October promises to surpass the $2,000,000 mark. Only one month of the current year, the month of May, have the building permits in Portland run to above $1,000,000. There is one peculiar feature about this Portland record. The Oregonian points out that there has been a dropping off in real estate and building activity since the destruction of San Francisco. Our experience has been the very opposite.

BIG SALES BY A. E. HALSEY.

In Last Ninety Days He Sells Business Property Aggregating Over Half Million.

The prevailing activity in the real estate market is indicated by the following list of sales made by one agent in a few weeks. These sales are eleven in number and the money paid aggregates the huge sum of $621,850:

The southwest corner of Main and Pico streets for H. B. Smith of Colton to a prominent local investor for $131,250, or $1250 per foot. This property is unimproved and has a frontage of 105 feet on Main street by 150 feet to alley on Pico street. The seller was represented by Colson, Bryon and Donnel who held an option on the property.

For Percy Wilson to Wm. M. Riley and W. D. Wilson a vacant lot on the east side of Hill street, forty-five feet north of Eleventh street, for $45,000.

To Drs. M. L. Moore and W. W. Hitchcock for James M. Hammel, represented by Wright & Callender Company, 1149 South Hill street, with nominal improvements, for $48,600.

The northwest corner of Twenty-ninth and Vermont avenue, 67x110 feet, for R. Ashley to E. G. Shryack, for $5000.

BEVERLY HILLS.

Formal announcement is made by the Percy H. Clark Co., managers of the tract, of the opening tomorrow of Beverly Hills, a beautiful suburban residence section between this city and Santa Monica.

It was only a year ago that this property was known as the Hammel and Denker ranch, one of the most fertile of Southern California. Only a few months ago the last crop of lima beans that will ever be raised there was harvested and the ground cleared for the graders. This property was purchased about a year ago by a syndicate composed of H. E. Huntington, C. A. Canfield, W. G. Kerckhoff, W. S. Porter and others. It lies at the old Morocco Junction of the Los Angeles Pacific road, where the Hollywood and Colgrove branches connect with it.

The property was laid out by a famous landscape architect, and the work of development has been carried forward by skilled engineers to a point where an intelligent conception can now be given prospective buyers of what the complete plan is.

The property is water bearing and a large reservoir will be constructed in the hills, giving an ample supply to all parts of the tract. A gas plant will be erected, and a complete sewerage system installed. Roads will be of the oiled tamped construction, cement curb and sidewalks of the finest quality are now going in.

QUARTETTE OF SALES.

Third, the northeast corner of Orange street and Westlake avenue, 100x150 feet, vacant, sold by C. W. Brown to local investors at $10,000. The quartette is completed in a lot 50x150 feet on Maple avenue near Fourteenth street, improved with a small cottage of little value, sold by R. Goldhaver to W. H. Preston for $7000.

VALUABLE WALNUT GROVE.

At Anaheim announcement is made of the sale of the E. D. Stoddard place, formerly owned by E. P. Fowler, to G. W. Phelps of Los Angeles; consideration reported to be $120,000. This ranch is set to walnuts, and is one of the most valuable groves in this part of the county, there being over 100 acres in the tract. It lies a little southwest of the old Southern Pacific depot at Anaheim. E. P. Fowler bought the land raw about twenty years ago for about $50 an acre.

HILL STREET SALE MADE.

M. W. Eberhardy has bought sixty feet south of Hotel Lillie on Hill street, between Fifth and Sixth for $120,000. This is $2000 a foot. The lot is 155 feet deep.

BEAUTIFUL BUNGALOW.

Artistic 6-room bungalow at 1919 W. 22nd street; lot 50x135; driveway on side, with a storeroom in rear.

BEDROOMS finished in white enamel, with walls hung in the very latest papers; one in green and white, the other blue and white; casement windows have leaded art glass.

PARLOR AND HALL have beautiful wall hangings, with panels done in free hand, hardwood floors in parlor.

LIVING-ROOM has long panels, with art shelves and lockers, a delightful place to spend the evenings.

BREAKFAST-ROOM shows careful planning, and the walls are finished in imitation marble, a very cosy and attractive room.

The best of plumbing, gas and electric fixtures throughout the house. The very latest heating devices have been installed; electric heating radiators.

Home life is here characterized by simple elegance. Utility has not been sacrificed for beauty. For finishing the different rooms two things have been kept in mind, simplicity and color scheme. The places serves, to a certain extent, as a model for young folks about to set up housekeeping.

You are invited to inspect the most artistic-built house in the city for the money.

HARVARD BOULEVARD.
No. 1718.

There are few more desirable locations in the southwest than that one known as Harvard boulevard; especially that portion of the street between 16th and Washington; this being high ground and but half block from street car service the Santa Monica car, 15 minutes from Fourth st.; on one of these lots, fronting 50 feet (No. 1710) I have built by day labor a house containing 8 rooms, halls and cement cellar; in the cellar we have a furnace conveying heat to every room, the ground floors are hardwood, a most handsome rock mantel (andirons with asbestos logs) set to burn gas or coal if so desired; reception room and den contain 2 bookcases with leaded glass doors, fixtures through the house for gas and electricity of the most expensive order. Plate glass in front of house; there are two staircases, the front one has pedestal and fancy light leading to a group of large colored art-glass windows, flanked on either side by paneled closets and above are a row of colored drop lights; the upstairs bedrooms, 4 in number, are daintily finished, 3 of these rooms being larger than the ordinary run, and very deep closets, with windows.

There is a large bathroom upstairs, with 2 windows and the best of plumbing; and on the screen porch there is further plumbing and wash tubs. The front door colonial with heavy brass fittings, beveled art glass on each side, shades to windows, cement walks, and a fine lawn; lots here are worth $1900.

There is no misrepresentation and the price from owner should surely interest; you cannot build this pretty home and buy the lot at the price the owner offers.

Why not buy one of these remarkable properties? If you are looking for a home today you could not do better than select from this list. Let me show them to you.

THE PRETTIEST BUNGALOW.

It is located on W. 28th st., in an all new neighborhood, and near good car service; the lot is nicely terraced, 50x135 feet; this bungalow is certainly a beauty, with wide veranda, hall, with seat and hall tree built in, large living-room with fireplace, and outside chimney, large paneled dining-room, three big sleeping-rooms, big closets, oak floors, Flemish oak finish, etc., etc.; a really perfect little home; price $4200; terms $1000 cash.

A CORNER BUNGALOW.

This is close to Adams street, very fine car service, and in splendid location. The corner lot is 50x135 feet, terraced above street, with cement retaining wall front and side, also side entrance. This is one of those catchy, broad, artistic bungalows that people turn to look at as they pass. It has 6 rooms, besides den, every room large and completed with the last degree of beautiful finish. Living-room and den paneled, with picture rail and wood cove; dining-room paneled, with plate rail and wood cove; seats everywhere; handsome sideboard; bedrooms in white enamel. It's a beauty clear through, cheap at $4500.

SOUTHWEST BARGAIN.

A large home of 8 rooms, besides reception hall and den, located in pretty and quiet street, southwest, near the University of Southern California; all rooms are large; 4 fine bedrooms, large bath and balcony, wide windows. The lot is 50x125 feet, finely improved with shade, flowers, much fruit and berries, chicken corral and house; price only $4600; terms $1000 cash.

ON WEST EIGHTH STREET.

This beautiful home is only 3 blocks from Westlake Park, close to two car lines, and has a view of the mountains that can never be cut off, full-sized lot, 60x135 feet, with cement retaining wall; neighborhood restricted to two-story homes; the house is practically new, a large, substantial, handsome home of 8 rooms, besides halls, large living-room, cosy library, bright dining-room, spacious reception hall, cabinet kitchen, oak floors, Flemish oak finish, basement and furnace pipes complete, four fine large bedrooms and balcony; nothing else like this property in all Westlake section; price $6500.

HERE'S A BARGAIN.

On a fine east-front lot, 60x135 feet, and in a neighborhood closely restricted to splendid two-story homes, we offer this large, handsome property; the house has stone and cement veranda, imposing entrance, large rooms throughout, especially the music and living-rooms, oak floors and Flemish oak finish, basement, furnace, etc., complete, four large bedrooms and a rear balcony on which two more could be easily built; auto barn, etc., etc.; as complete a home as is to be found anywhere in the city. And it would take $1000 more than the price asked to duplicate this property today. Price only $7500.

AN ELEGANT HOME.

A spacious 10-room residence, located in very closely restricted residence district, adjoining Adams st., in the best of the southwest. Here is a fine corner lot, handsomely and completely improved, and the house is as attractive as anything in the city. The entrance is from a pressed-brick veranda, which adds a striking touch to the beauty of the home. There are hardwood floors upstairs as well as down; Flemish oak finish; built-in appointments very complete; basement and furnace; no stairs; floored attic; five fine sleeping-rooms, partly inclosed large balcony; auto barn and oil-house; many flowers, etc.; just a complete, well-established home ready to move right into; price $8250.

HOME AND INVESTMENT, TOO.

This spacious 9-room mission-style home is located near W. Seventh and Rampart sts., on very large corner lot; the house is now a splendid home, having 5 bedrooms and every convenience; it fronts east and the neighborhood is unexcelled; but values are changing so rapidly that this corner cannot fail to be wanted for business or apartments reasonably soon, so to buy here now will surely make big money for the investor. The property would demand large rent if offered for that today. The price is only $20,500.

ONE BLOCK FROM WESTLAKE.

Here is a large, spacious, and very finely built home of ten rooms, located in perhaps the finest residence section of the city, which may be had at very low figure. The owner wishes to sell quick, and has just cut $1000 from his price to secure such a sale. Of the ten rooms five are on the lower floor, four bedrooms on the second, and the attic is finished to closets and one large room, 18x22 ft., full height, and admirable for two or three nice room. The rooms below stairs are dining-room with mantel and fireplace, reception-room, also with mantel; splendidly large dining with swell bay, paneled and finished with plate rail and beautiful sideboard; den, which may be nicely used as servant's room; two pantries, complete kitchen, screen porch, etc., etc. Basement and furnace, auto barn, etc. Oak floors below stairs and in hall and bath above. Rear stairs extra large closets, up to date finish and arrangement throughout. The veranda is 12 feet wide, with the end inclosed in glass. The house stands on fine terraced lot, and commands beautiful view. Price reduced to $8000.

ON MAGNOLIA AVENUE.

Here is one of the most beautiful homes it has been our good fortune to offer. It sits in wide grounds, 70x160 feet to alley, and the locality is one of the best the city affords. The lower floor arrangement includes living-room 17x30, with pressed brick mantel and fireplace, seats, etc., dining-room, or the front, with brick mantel, buffet, paneled walls, etc., spacious reception hall, paneled and beamed in harmony with living-room and dining-room, so that it is a splendid addition to the beautiful arrangement of this home; two steps lead down to the den, in the rear of the reception hall, and this apartment is paneled, carefully appointed and has brick mantel. The floors are all oak, the lighting fixtures very fine, every appointment carried out in elegant harmony, above the ornamental stairs are four very large bedrooms, and a floored attic, large enough for two fine rooms. This property is very cheap at $10,000.

FOR SALE—
is like pouring water from a quart bucket into a gopher hole.

Did you ever seriously consider this proposition? Nobody has ever yet been able to give a lucid and plausible reason for giving some person the bulk of their income for the small privilege of a temporary shelter. Yet people will go along year after year giving away their hard-earned dollars without the remotest possibility of ever receiving anything substantial in return, and what is still more mystifying this practice is followed by people of apparent intelligence and thrift. Of course, it will have to be admitted that if the rent payer has never had his attention directed to Walnut Lawn, famed as the most beautiful residence park in all Southern California, and has never investigated our proposition, there is some excuse.

Any man or woman that can afford to live in a house and pay rent can own one in Walnut Lawn. Come out and select your lot, give a general outline of the character of house you want, our architect will prepare plans, or you can select from the many we have on hand. Our bungalow homes are unique, original, having features distinctly our own, that appeals not only to the artistic temperament but combines the practical as well. You can buy your own home for the same amount you are paying in rent. Our proposition is the most liberal ever offered to owners or buyers of lots in Walnut Lawn. This property belongs to me, and I am prepared to make purchasers of lots a proposition decidedly to their advantage.

It will pay you to investigate this.

Have you the above amount in a savings bank which is only drawing 4 per cent. interest? If so why not put it in real estate and make more? We have an elegant buy on Jefferson street, east of McClintock, which you can buy for $2500, and it takes only $700 cash to do it. The house would rent for enough to carry the interest and pay you the same as a savings bank and in the meantime the property will be enhancing in value. This is worth investigating.

HUNTINGTON PARK LOTS
HUNTINGTON PARK LOTS

WILL MAKE YOU MONEY.
WILL MAKE YOU MONEY.

There is no point around Los Angeles where lot buyers have profited more on their investments than at HUNTINGTON PARK. It is simply due to the fact that HUNTINGTON PARK has grown; has grown from practically nothing to a city of 1400 people, all within two years. There is a reason for this growth. If you know HUNTINGTON PARK you know the reason. If you do not know HUNTINGTON PARK go down right away and see it. Then YOU, TOO, will know why it has grown. Extravagant talk about a place does not usually carry conviction, but seeing is believing.

SEE HUNTINGTON PARK AND YOU WILL BUY.

The opportunities for profit there are even greater now than ever. It is because it is a well-established community, and is growing faster than ever. A score or more of houses are now under way, and as many more are contracted for, to be built at once.

The improvements now there include churches, stores, bank and many handsome residences. Plenty of fine artesian water piped to every lot. Electric lights, telephones and rapid transportation.

FOR SALE—
WALNUT LAWN—THE BEAUTIFUL.
WALNUT LAWN—THE PICTURESQUE.
WALNUT LAWN—THE UNIQUE.

Beautiful, unique, picturesque, are some of the features that have contributed in establishing the fame of

as THE IDEAL RESIDENCE PARK OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

This beautiful park was originally the Lattin Walnut Grove, famous throughout Southern California for its beauty, productiveness and its grand and stately walnut trees, the largest in the country, but a brief ten months ago one of the local features and attractions pointed out to tourists and visitors.

The transformation in this brief period is wonderful in its effect; magnificent boulevards and drives, cement sidewalks, broad parkways of blue-grass lawn, imposing residences and picturesque and inviting bungalows nestling among the graceful walnut trees, give mute but forcible evidence not only of the march of progress and development, but of the pre-eminence of Walnut Lawn as an ideal home spot.

In addition to the features outlined, Walnut Lawn possesses other distinct features that recommend itself to the shrewd buyer either for a home or investment—located on Florence ave., 12 minutes' ride from the business center of Los Angeles on the Pacific Electric Ry., with the finest transportation facilities in the country; in the direct and logical development of the city toward the harbor—in a section where the tide of investment has been stronger than any other in Los Angeles, and where valuations have increased 100 per cent. in the last 12 months. Walnut Lawn has the assurance of a stability and rapid advancement in values unequaled by any other section.

There will shortly be an advance of $200 on the price of any unsold lot and it can be safely predicted that lots will sell for a high premium this coming winter. Are you going to neglect this opportunity? You will never have another like it. Remember there is ONLY ONE WALNUT LAWN and there will never be another.

It costs nothing to investigate and whether you come as a prospective purchaser or to pass a pleasant hour in this cool and inviting retreat you will be well repaid for your time.

The price of lots in Walnut Lawn is lower than property much farther from the city and far less desirable.

A small payment down and balance monthly secures a lot.

Take Long Beach, Santa Ana or any Pacific Electric car to Florence ave., Tract Office 500 feet east of railway, or call at city office of owner.

We offer to the public of limited means an opportunity to become stockholders in a real estate syndicate promoted by some of our most prominent citizens. An opportunity of this nature to become associated with some of our leading financial interests is seldom offered. A small amount of this stock is offered for sale to close the syndicate; we guarantee this stock to be in the strongest real estate syndicate ever formed in Southern California. We can conservatively say that this stock will pay 40 per cent. on the investment, sold in blocks of no less than $1000. Don't delay, but see us at once as this necessitates quick action.

THIS IS A STRAIGHT TIP.

There is no secret about it and the reasons are many.

THE LOS ANGELES-PACIFIC FOUR-TRACK TUNNEL SCHEME HAS BEEN CONSUMMATED AND IT WILL BE CARRIED OUT WITHIN TWO—NOT TEN, BUT TWO YEARS.

The tracks will cross Figueroa street in the open about 150 feet south of Fourth st. There are four car-lines at Sixth and Figueroa streets, the Washington street, Glendale, West Sixth and Belt lines. Seventh street, with several other car-lines, is only a block away. The Los Angeles-Pacific lines will be only a block and a half away. Direct car service to all depots without transfer.

WELL, WHAT OF IT?

JUST THIS. STICK A PIN AT NUMBER 615 SOUTH FIGUEROA STREET.

This number stands for an east front lot, 74½ by 250 feet to an alley; an ideal site for a high-class apartment house or hotel, in size, location, surroundings, splendid street-car facilities, and its convenience to the business section.

REMEMBER, THIS LOT IS ON FIGUEROA, THE MOST ARISTOCRATIC, LONGEST AND WIDEST THOROUGHFARE IN THE CITY, AND IN THE BLOCK COMMANDING THE HIGHEST PRICES ON THE STREET.

Remember, too, that this property is only 150 feet south of Sixth street, the first open cross-town street with easy grades. The business and traffic on Sixth street, between Main and Figueroa, is enormous and increasing daily. Walk along this portion of the street and note the Huntington Building,

Grosse Building,
Hayward Hotel,
Norton Building.

The other three corners of Sixth and Broadway will soon be occupied by fine blocks. Sixth and Spring is the railroad center—THE HIGHEST PRICED PROPERTY IN THE CITY IS ON BROADWAY, SIXTH AND SEVENTH, AND EVERYTHING IS GOING UP SIXTH TO FIGUEROA.

STICK ANOTHER PIN HERE.

The awakening of the down-town section of Figueroa street is at hand and the center of activity will be at Sixth and Figueroa. Nothing can stop it. Other sections have had their boom, built up, and the cream of profits has been skimmed off.

THE CREAM IS THICK ON FIGUEROA AND IT HAS NOT BEEN SKIMMED.

This may make your eyes stick out, but it is a fact.

A FIRST-CLASS APARTMENT HOTEL ERECTED ON THIS PROPERTY WILL, ABOVE THE FIRST FLOOR, LEASE FOR MORE MONEY THAN THE SAME CLASS OF APARTMENT BUILDING ERECTED AT EIGHTH AND BROADWAY. ASTONISHING, BUT TRUE.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT FACT—Figueroa and Sixth streets is as close to Sixth and Hill as Ninth and Hill is; yet property at the latter locality is one hundred per cent. higher per front foot, and THREE HUNDRED PER CENT. HIGHER PER SQUARE FOOT.

WHAT A GLORIOUS OPPORTUNITY FOR PROFIT-MAKING!

Let's get back to that lot, 615 South Figueroa street, which, by the way, has an east front and is the deepest lot between First and Ninth streets and Main and Figueroa streets, the heart of the business district. Every foot of it is valuable for apartment or hotel purposes.

Get wise to the fact that the only scientific or legitimate way to purchase property is by the square foot.

About $800 a front foot.
ONLY $3.25 A SQUARE FOOT.

We will sell this lot for $60,000, one-fourth cash, balance one and three years at six per cent. It should sell for $75,000 in six months and for $90,000 in a year's time.

ON A CASH INVESTMENT OF $15,000 THE PURCHASER SHOULD MAKE ONE HUNDRED PER CENT. PROFIT IN SIX MONTHS. ISN'T THIS GOOD ENOUGH FOR ANYBODY?

We almost forgot to mention that the property is improved with a large two-story house completely furnished, which is leased for $90 per month net until September, 1907.

If you want this splendid property, which at the price is unquestionably the greatest bargain in the city, see us at once. If the property is not sold soon, price will be advanced to $75,000.

We own or control every piece of property advertised by us, so don't waste time trying to "get next" to the owner.

FOR SALE—
VERMONT AVENUE.
VERMONT AVENUE.
WE TOLD YOU SO.

Eight months ago we advised our friends and the public to invest on VERMONT AVE. Some did, the rest are now sorry they didn't take our advise. Property on Vermont ave. at that time was cheaper than residence lots on side streets. As we predicted then they have steadily advanced and will continue to do so for years to come, for Vermont ave. is destined to become the principal street of the West side of the great city of Los Angeles. Reaching, as it does, from the mountains on the north to the great harbor of San Pedro on the south, it is sure to become the thoroughfare between these two principal cities of the southwest. At present Vermont ave. from Washington st. to Forty-third st. is the most important business section in the great southwest as it runs directly through the center of the finest and most densely populated residence section of the city. Prices of property today in this section is ridiculously low compared to any other business street in the city. We predict that property on Vermont ave. between Washington st. and Forty-third st. will double in value in less than one year and advise buying at present prices for quick profit. Get in on this street and "DO IT NOW." The profits you can make on this street in the next six months will come as easy as getting money from home. Remember we are authority on values here as we have made a study on the street, have every foot of property listed, know personally every owner, and have sold nine-tenths of the property that has been sold on Vermont ave. in the last eight months. Come out and look the situation over. Call at our office and let us show you some dead-sure money-making buys on this the greatest street, not only in Los Angeles, but the whole State of California. We do not control all the property for sale on the street, but we do control quite a number of the best prices and can deliver them at prices we will quote you. We might mention among them the northeast corner of Vermont ave. and Thirtieth st., 118x140 to alley, improved with good ten-room house, for $12,000.

100x150 near Jefferson, with cottage, for the ridiculously low price of $70 front foot.

Also a 60-foot corner right in the built-up business district, for only $100 front foot.

The northwest corner of Forty-rst and Vermont, 90x105 to alley, for $125 front foot. Both sides of this have stores. Will be worth $200 foot in one year. See us before you buy. We can save you some money.

NOTICE TO INVESTORS.

Did it ever occur to you that Beaudry ave. and Lake Shore ave. are the only two thoroughfares that lead out from the business center by way of Third st. tunnel into the northwest hill section, on easy even grade with no hills to climb? Also that at the intersection of Beaudry and Sunset blvd. five different streets converge to a common point in front of Sisters' Hospital. As water flows through a channel on easy grade, so will the traveling public follow Beaudry ave. to the Third st. tunnel by way of Second and Figueroa, both of which are already established business streets.

It is a question of months only when Beaudry avenue property will bring as high prices as Figueroa street property brings today and he that can forecast future events should take warning and buy a few of the choice close-in properties on the coming business street south of Sunset before the boom.

The completion of the Second-street tunnel will add greatly to the value of property on this street, as, in fact, it is the only close-in section that has been overlooked by investors. Remember, Beaudry ave. connects the four prominent thoroughfares running westward, Sunset blvd., Temple, First and Second sts., on even, easy grade, no hills to climb. In passing on this street look at the southeast corner of Beaudry and Mignonette, 150x150 ft., choice location for apartment houses, flats and stores, only 1 block north of First st., a large piece of ground with a big future for a very small money, only 8 blocks from Broadway. The corner 50 ft. alone will bring the price I ask for the whole within 2 years. $12,500 is the price for a short time, and I am the sole agent. Agents, co-operate.

JEFFERSON STREET,

THE COMING BUSINESS STREET.

HAVE YOU NOTICED THE NEWSPAPERS during the past two weeks, regarding what is liable to happen on this coming business street? We have already been informed of an ELECTRIC DEPOT TO BE BUILT on one corner of Jefferson and Grand, and now comes the good news of a possible RAILROAD DEPOT, for a TRUNK LINE STEAM RAILROAD ON ANOTHER corner of JEFFERSON AND GRAND. Do you know what this means? Simply, that when a transcontinental line like the GOULD system (Western Pacific) is to approach our city, hauling people from as far as New York, the possibilities for advance in PROPERTIES in this IMMEDIATE VICINITY are so GREAT, that we can only advise "BUY ON JEFFERSON."

CHAPTER II.

It is the historian's aim in this thrilling recital, installments of which will from now on appear with regularity, to inform you not only of the past, nay, indeed, not so much of the past, as of the BRIGHT PRESENT and the EVEN MORE GLOWING FUTURE of that most noteworthy business thoroughfare, VERMONT AVENUE. We will thus unavoidably chronicle the history of our subject, to some extent, by anticipation.

In the first place, there is an IMPROVEMENT which is to occupy a situation VERY NEAR VERMONT and between Jefferson and Santa Barbara, which will have a great and most inspiriting and permanent influence upon the course and solid prosperity and status of a certain section of VERMONT AVENUE. For certain reasons it is not advisable at the present time to state in print just what this IMPROVEMENT is, but we will be glad to furnish the facts privately to anyone seriously interested.

Again, we are in a position to announce, authoritatively, the positive and early construction of five handsome stores in the district on VERMONT in which we are especially working, besides the probable erection of several more at an early date.

Further, we wish to ask you, "What will happen on VERMONT when it is paved, which will be very shortly?" Show us any other unpaved street in the city that has the number of business establishments this sterling mart boasts. Contemplate what it has arrived to without the aid of paving, nay, in spite of the lack of paving, by the sheer press of circumstance and necessity. Why are all these shops there and every one rented? Because the demand is solid, and tangible and real. They could not be (not a single one of them) dispensed with, no matter what the real estate conditions were in the great southwest portion of the city.

Placing one's self on VERMONT AVENUE, the "Tide of Empire" is not voiced in the old familiar cry of "South and West"—the "Tide of Empire" is SOUTH. The great flanking lines of future growth, the extreme east and west edges, will be Moneta and Western avenues. VERMONT WILL BE LEFT TRIUMPHANT AND SUPREME, THE GREAT CENTRAL ARTERY OF BUSINESS in our peaceful and glorious march to the sea.

That is what is to be deliberated upon—THE RIGHT STREET, when you buy property in Los Angeles. You do not have to worry about your choice of city—YOUR CARE IS ALMOST SOLELY REDUCED TO BEING ON THE LINE OF MARCH. The ultimate destiny of this singularly favored metropolis, as a whole, is a foregone conclusion. In fact, a synonym of the MARVELOUS FUTURE LOS ANGELES might almost be said to be THE UNESCAPABLE DYNAMICS OF A CLIMATIC CONDITION.

But more of this general logic from time to time. TODAY it is our good fortune to be able to call your earnest attention to the following superb opportunities for "getting on in the world."

A southwest CORNER—one of the best between Jefferson and Santa Monica. 60 feet front; $6000, part cash, takes it this week. Very few small corners left in this section, and absolutely nothing at $100 a foot. This is the best buy on Vermont.

50 feet, with a nice house, worth $1500; same district. We guarantee it to be the cheapest inside piece between Jefferson and Santa Monica; east front. Price $4000.

100x150, with good cottage; near Jefferson; $7000.

These are so good that we shall be surprised if any of them lasts through the week.

FOR SALE—

CONCERNING JEFFERSON STREET.

If you were positively sure you could locate the greatest bargain on the most active and valuable part of JEFFERSON STREET I presume you would be somewhat interested. Well, I'll tell you about it anyhow, and then you can suit yourself.

It's on the south side of JEFFERSON, midway between Figueroa and Wesley; a fine business location; now has a house on it worth over $2000—I mean just that. The lot vacant would sell easily right now for $5000, because it's right opposite the great Shriners' convention hall, ground for which will soon be broken—I mean just that, too.

This is a $7000 proposition for $6000, and it will be worth $8000 before the beginning of next year. You can't put your money into safer or surer property than this, on one of the greatest business streets of the city, in the line of the most rapid growth—the southwest.

I have two other properties on JEFFERSON, not between Figueroa and Wesley, because there's nothing else for sale there. They are near Grand avenue, but I will frankly admit that I haven't another such bargain on the street as the one mentioned above.

BUY ON A STREET WITH A FUTURE, IN OTHER WORDS, NINTH STREET.

It WILL be the greatest cross-town street in this city. ITS MANIFEST DESTINY, you cannot prevent it—its strategic position justifies the assertion—running from the high-class residence portion of the city through what WILL BE the ACTIVE RETAIL section into the very center of the industrial district, it will be one of the widest, longest paved streets in the city and on the EASIEST GRADE; it is right geographically and the prices are right—NEARER the revenue-producing stage today than on any other equally important close-in thoroughfare.

NINTH STREET IS COMING—COMING QUICK. Below we offer the shrewd and thoughtful a bunch of GOOD BUYS, any one of which are MONEY-MAKERS. Look them over carefully. The time to buy is NOW.

$18,000—Northwest corner 9th and Hawthorne, 120x45, three exposures; $150 per foot—not deep, but CHEAP.

$30,000—Business for industrial site between Mateo and Santa Fe on the north side of Ninth—runs through to Porter street, 100x250 feet, two frontages; will sell part at $300 per foot.

Here is one of the best buys on the street. It is in one of the best blocks on the street between Grand and Figueroa. But you say that's $140 per foot; you are booming that street. Let's talk truth; it's stranger than fiction. Jefferson street is 15 blocks from the next nearest cross-town business street, Washington. It is 82 feet wide from Main to Key West, where it is soon to be paved. An inside lot on Pico in the 2700 block sold last week for $210 per foot. This is many blocks beyond where the street is paved. You know what Pico did in that part of it which was paved. Jefferson will do the same. Walk up the street from Main to Key West and ask what property is worth, then come in and buy this; $4000 cash will handle it.

FOR SALE—IN THE SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY, in the most fertile region, about 18 miles south of Porterville, I have a 12,000 acre ranch of peculiarly good orange soil, in the foothills, entirely frostless and with abundance of water guaranteed. In this region oranges are earlier than in any part of the State. They can be marketed well before Thanksgiving, giving an advantage in price of over $1 a box, as compared with Riverside. This means that the orange district will be transferred inevitably to the San Joaquin Valley.
This land can be delivered today at $30 an acre. The terms can be made extremely favorable for the operation of a company formed to improve and divide into 5 to 20 acre tracts.
$30,000 cash would handle the land and $20,000 would be enough to handle a good development campaign. $50,000 can be made to pay $1,000,000 in 5 years, calculating from what is now being done.
I will sell for $30,000 cash, balance to remain on mortgage for 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. I will also consider forming a company in which I will take half interest to handle the land as proposed.

HERBERT BURDETT, Secretary.

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.

FOR SALE — AN OPPORTUNITY TO ACquire a gentleman's home site, rarely duplicated at any price and never so cheaply as this.

I have acquired under remarkably favorable terms 281 feet front by 220 feet deep, facing an eighty foot avenue, with 14 ft. sidewalks, 9 ft. parkways and 5 ft. cement walks and curbs. The property is only a short distance from Oak Knoll and Huntington Drive and the Monrovia, Sierra Madre and new Oak Knoll electric line and four blocks from the Alhambra and San Gabriel lines.

To a man with sufficient means to make proper improvements, $25,000 would be cheap for the property (for the reason that the majestic trees and shrubbery on the property could not be duplicated at any price.) Yet if taken within a few days before contemplated changes are started it can be bought for about one-fourth that amount and $2250 or less cash will handle it; the balance can run two and three years at 7 per cent.

I offer it for sale at a very modest profit, feeling that I cannot afford to carry it as a home and make the class of improvements the place merits.

There is now on the property an old time residence with foot thick concrete walls as solid as rock. At comparatively little cost this can be remodeled and extended and converted into a stately colonial mansion, in keeping with its majestic surroundings, of trees, either according to plans just completed for me by a good architect or to suit the buyer's fancy.

The house is far enough back from the wide avenue to permit of sweeping driveways and walks. The spacious grounds (220 feet deep) are capable of the most artistic arrangement without the addition or removal of an important tree or shrub.

The trees on the place are mostly rare specimens of their kind. Among others are two very large oaks, one of them a veritable monarch, probably without a peer in lofty height and wide spreading branches. There is a rubber tree, older and larger than any in the State, thrifty and superb. It is visited constantly by tourists and others as a botanical marvel. Cypresses towering high into the sky line and other rare trees and plants, whose names I do not know.

There are rose vines thick as saplings and wildernesses of other roses and flower and foliage plants, needing only a few weeks' work by skillful hands to convert it into one of the show places of the county.

Surrounding property is now sold with good building restrictions, though there are a few old and cheap houses in the few blocks between this and the finest suburban residence district in California. These old places are too valuable now for inferior residences and another season will probably see the last one disappear, when this property will be worth four times the present price as an investment.

It is only a few hundred yards from the boundary of the princely Graves estate—than which there has been nothing more beautiful since the Garden of Eden. Other high class suburban homes are in close proximity in every direction. It is central to all of the best and most picturesque roads for motoring or driving.

To the man who wants such a home the price is insignificant and as an investment in the hands of the right party, the cash investment can surely be trebled before next spring.

This advertisement is not likely to appear again and if sale is not made within a few days, contracts for my house will be closed and property withdrawn. I am not a real estate agent, dealer or speculator and bought this place, which I have known for a long time, out of sheer appreciation of its majestic beauty and attractions and only offer it for sale because it merits such treatment as only a man of more means can give it.

If you are looking for such a proposition and wish to see the property, address WILEY, box 276, Alhambra, Cal., or call up Alhambra Phone Home 61. 21

Did you take an outing with us during the past week? No? Well, I am amazed! You, on whom we counted most, to fail us. And don't you know, by refusing to accept our hospitality this time, you are losing two great opportunities of your life. First, the opportunity of a pleasant outing, with the best people on earth, which is us; and second, you are losing an opportunity of procuring a one-fourth or a one-half-acre lot, or lots, in our Springdale, at prices to astonish you, and the terms easy enough for any easy person. Such opportunities come but seldom in one's lifetime, and it is the person who grasps the opportunity when it comes along that does things, and who gets the best of everything out of life. Now, therefore, be it understood and agreed between you and the sign-writer (that is me,) that you will ever after be alive to this inevitable law of compensation, and henceforth you will corral all opportunities as they pass your way. And be it further understood and agreed that you will DO IT NOW, by coming to our office today, where you will find the "wizard," and get a ticket free of charge, entitling you to a trip to Springdale and return. Just to accommodate you, our office will be open to receive you at any hour today, until 4 o'clock p.m. Come, go with us and see our Springdale, and while at the office procuring your tickets, meet the wizard, the best trader in the United States; and at such time in your life as it may be advantageous and desirable for you to make a real estate trade, you will know the one great artist in the trading world, and you will have but to place your property and confidence in his hands, and wait until he does the rest. And at that time, you and I, the sign-writer, will again covenant and agree, that you have at last arisen to your opportunities.

WHY ARIZONA IS FIGHTING STATEHOOD.

Race Prejudice Figures in the Opposition to New Mexico—Above All, However, Is the American Desire of Self-government.

BY IRA E. BENNETT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Oct. 9.—The Territory of Arizona, rich in American citizenship, as well as natural resources, is making a determined fight to retain its identity. The people as a whole are bitterly opposed to the plan of joint Statehood with New Mexico. They advance various reasons for their opposition, some of them potent and others of little apparent weight. Whatever the reason, they are overwhelmingly against joint Statehood, and will kill the proposition at the polls next month. The leader of the "jointists" in Northern Arizona acknowledges that he does not count upon more than 15 per cent. of the vote in favor of jointure.

Arizona is a pretty clean country politically, and its leading citizens are Americans. The boast is made everywhere in the Territory that voters are not bought in bunches and that corporations do not control the political action of their employés. After making due allowance for the western habit of issuing frequent declarations of independence, it is safe to say that the sentiment against joint Statehood is genuine, and would exist even if the big railroad, mining, and land companies were not on the same side.

OBJECT TO MEXICANS.

The chief objection to union with New Mexico appears to be based upon the disparity in size and quality of population. The Mexican element in New Mexico numbers at least 60 per cent. of the total population. In Arizona the Mexican vote is about 12 per cent. of the total. Much of the Mexican population in Arizona is floating, consisting of laborers on railroads and irrigation enterprises, etc., while the Mexicans living in New Mexico are, as a rule, natives of the Territory.

If the Territories should each vote in favor of joint Statehood, the constitutional convention provided for in the Statehood act would be composed of sixty-six delegates from New Mexico and forty-four from Arizona. This is gall and wormwood to the Arizonans, who believe they would be outvoted on every proposition of vital consequence in framing the very groundwork of the new State. They have expressed their sentiment with more brevity than politeness in a legend on a button which adorns the lapel of three out of five men who walk the classic streets of Phoenix and Prescott: "66 to 44—nit."

AVOID RACIAL DISCUSSION.

In old Tucson where the Mexican element is quite strong in spite of the rapid development of business, there is less open opposition to joint Statehood than in Phoenix and Prescott. It is predicted, however, that when the votes are counted, the "old pueblo" will register its opposition quite emphatically as other sections of the Territory. The residents of Tucson live in peace with their Mexican neighbors, and do not care to discuss differences of racial temperament.

At Phoenix the opposition to jointure is whetted to a keen edge through apprehension that the town will lose its prestige as the capital. Arizona has a substantial Territorial Capitol, and Phoenix is proud of its connection with the Federal government, attenuated as the thread may be. It is also proud of its Legislature, which gathers in dignity and represents the little self-government that is parceled out to a Territory. The people of Phoenix are aghast at the suggestion that that capital of the new State shall be Santa Fé. With the exception of a few officeholders and others who think they see a chance to hold office under a State government, Phoenix and the Salt River Valley seem to be solid against jointure.

SCHOOL FUNDS AN ISSUE.

The people of Arizona are prompt to draw comparisons with New Mexico. They point to their schools and say: "The public school system of Arizona reaches into every mining camp, and no public funds are given to denominational schools, as in New Mexico." This remark was repeated to certain leading citizens of New Mexico, and the reply was: "The public schools of New Mexico are as good as the schools of Massachusetts or any other State. When the Arizonians say that we give public money to denominational schools, they lie." Thus, it will be perceived, there is a promptness in outlining the issue that is characteristic of the breezy West. This is of great service to the pilgrim, who finds it comparatively easy to get at the opinion of everybody—and everybody has one.

The Arizonians draw other comparisons. "Look at the assessed valuation of Arizona," they say. "It is $63,000,000, and New Mexico's is $44,000,000. Look at the tax rate. It is 75 cents in Arizona and $1.50 in New Mexico. Look at the Territorial debt. It is $3,100,000 in Arizona and $3,600,000 in New Mexico, the part that is not repudiated."

The New Mexicans meet these comparisons with a few others that are just as odious. They do not deny that the figures are correct, but insist that a little explanation throws a better light on them. But they prefer to substitute other comparisons, such as the railroad mileage, which is larger in New Mexico, and the sheep industry, in which New Mexico excels. They say: "Look at the coal fields of New Mexico. They are worth more than all the mineral wealth of Arizona, of all kinds."

CHARGE OF ROTTENNESS.

On one point, odd as it may seem, the best people of Arizona and New Mexico are agreed. This is that the politics of New Mexico is rotten. Of course, the matter is first brought up by Arizonians. They point to "Bull" Andrews, Delegate in Congress from New Mexico, and ask whether it is planned that the Hon. "Bull" shall be a Senator from the new State of Arizona. The people of New Mexico look sheepish, and acknowledge the corn. "Yes," said one of the big and clean men of Santa Fé, "they've got us there. It's true that New Mexico is politically rotten."

During the debates in Congress the statement was made that Arizona mining and railroad corporations controlled the Territory, and would exert every influence to prevent the creation of a State. It is true that corporations are opposing Statehood. They do not disclose the nature of their operations in working against the proposal, but it is reasonably certain that they are not wasting money in the attempt to buy votes. No one who has ever lived among Arizonians will credit any story of wholesale purchases of votes. The people do not merge in that respect. The charter of individualism is written in capital letters in Arizona. Corporations may control the greater enterprises of the Territory, but they do not control votes under the Australian ballot system that is in operation. This secret ballot is not used in New Mexico. There is a better chance for corrupt corporations in New Mexico than in Arizona.

ROOSEVELT GREATLY ADMIRED.

President Roosevelt is greatly admired in Arizona, where the sagebrush is full of husky fellows who were in his regiment. Maybe they are no more numerous now than in 1898, but they seem so. All of them speak of him as "the colonel," and plenty of them have jobs of one kind or another. Yet they are not with him in the Statehood fight. Some of them have written to him, telling him that Arizona insists upon being a Territory by herself until she is a State by herself, and intimating that they hope he will not urge the joint Statehood plan too strongly.

Possibly some of the Rough Riders have resigned their jobs as evidence of their supreme devotion to the anti-Statehood cause, but the proof of such supreme sacrifice is lacking. One or two of them seemed to be hopeful of a reprimand from the President, which they might exhibit to their friends, but the President has not called them down for their disloyalty. His silence in the face of insubordination in the ranks of the faithful is interpreted to mean that he is losing interest in his heroic band. As most of the male white citizens of warlike age in Arizona appear to have been Rough Riders, it is easy to imagine the sorrow which covers Arizona like a pall. If he would only kick, or swear, or wield the big stick, they would cheer up again. A mutineer likes to feel that his skipper has at least a languid interest in the proceedings.

OFFSET IN CORRUPTION CHARGE

As the corporations of New Mexico are for Statehood, and the corporations of Arizona against it, one story of corruption may be set against another. The probabilities are that all of them are exaggerated. It is reasonable to presume that the men controlling corporations in the Territories partake of the sentiments of their fellows, and fight accordingly.

Arizona people fear that Congress will pass a joint Statehood act, forcing the Territory into union with New Mexico in case the proposition is defeated next month by a bare majority. They think the plan must be overwhelmingly rejected in order to convince Congress that Arizona is not half-inclined to join her neighbor. This has been discussed everywhere, and even the school children are alive to the situation. The general attitude of the anti-Statehood people may be summed up this way:

"We want Statehood, and believe we are entitled to it. Congress and the President do not think so. They have given us a chance to say whether we are willing to be joined to New Mexico. We are not, and will say so. We are grateful for the chance to decide this question, but we do not want our rejection of the joint Statehood plan to prejudice our chances for separate Statehood. So we are willing to drop all agitation for Statehood for a few years, until Congress has had a good rest. Then, when we have gained in population and development, we shall ask again for Statehood.

LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT.

Perhaps it is putting it a little too strong to say that all of the warlike males of Arizona are Rough Riders. Right in Phoenix there are one or two men who were not with "the colonel," but who are as warlike as the most mutinous of his regiment. They indulge in anger, more than in sorrow. They charge that the President has been induced by Senator Beveridge to write a letter urging Arizonians to vote for joint Statehood. This letter has been widely published, sometimes in full and sometimes in garbled form. It has not done much good for the Statehood cause, for the reason that few people believe the President to be really in earnest. Others resent outside advice, even from the President—but, not being Rough Riders, their numbers are negligible.

Arizona is growing rapidly, and in solid and enduring fashion. If the Statehood question were permitted to sleep a while it would be stronger in argument of the right sort, to say nothing of the relief to Congress. Irrigation, railroad building and mining developments are active. The government irrigation project in the Salt River Valley will bring about cultivation of much new land. Other irrigation works are under construction. Railroads are reaching into the mining regions in the south and west. A new transcontinental line is being formed of links that were built for local purposes.

ENORMOUS COPPER PRODUCTION

Arizona is second among the States in copper production, and next year may be first. It is expected that 300,000,000 pounds of copper will be produced this year. In gold production Arizona is third, with new developments promising bigger things. Silver mining is prosperous and important. The biggest pine forest in the United States is in Arizona, and one of the biggest mills is eating into it.

It would do an yeasterner good to visit the town of Prescott, up among the pines. It is clean, healthful, and prosperous. Its hills turn out gold and silver and copper from numerous mines. Little railroads are extending like spokes of a wheel into Prescott's tributary country. The banks have deposits which show that the wealth per capita is very great. Fire destroyed much of the town a few years ago, much to its benefit, and it is now handsomely rebuilt on a better and bigger plan. The moving spirits of the town have a new club, where the wayfarer finds the comforts afforded by good clubs everywhere. The "sky-pointing spire" is seen, and the towers of schools. On a picturesque eminence stands a school of the Sisters of St. Joseph which would attract attention in any large city. The whole atmosphere of Prescott is wholesome. Its people are cultured, progressive, and up to date.

Yet the town is practically a unit in opposition to joint Statehood. Granting that Phoenix may be tainted with self-interest, and making allowance for all the pernicious influence that corporations are popularly supposed to wield, no one who visits Prescott and mingles with its people can doubt that the determination to resist jointure with another Territory springs from the old American idea of self-government. It is a motive that moves the whole mass, without regard to ordinary matters.

AUTOIST IS INJURED.

Gasoline Blows Up as He Fills Tank and Fire Engine Is Called.

While Bedford Rivers was emptying a five-gallon can of gasoline into the tank of his big touring car at Temple street and Broadway last night, the fluid exploded, throwing out a mass of flame, scorching Rivers's face and clothing, and burning off his eyebrows and part of his hair. Pedestrians fled in all directions, fearing that the auto would be blown to pieces. One excited spectator turned in an alarm and a fire engine soon arrived, but before its arrival the flames had been extinguished. Rivers is the young son of E. B. Rivers of the firm of Rivers Brothers.

CHEAPER RUBBER ROAD TO RICHES.

GREAT FORTUNE AWAITING THE DISCOVERER.

The Increased Demand for Rubber Has Greatly Outgrown the Production Till All Kinds of Expedients Have to Be Resorted to—New Trees Soon to Come In.

If any ambitious young man would like to earn $10,000,000 next year he has a chance. The world will gladly pay him that or even more if he will show how to make India rubber cheaply. He will find much of the preliminary work already done; only one link is lacking in the chemical process. All he has to do is to reverse a well-known chemical reaction. Any freshman chemist can do it—on paper. This is all there is to it:

$2C_5H_8$—$C_{10}H_{16}$.

Isoprene Caoutchouc.

But it is easier to tear down than to build up, as sociologists as well as chemists have found. It has been known for over sixty years that heating caoutchouc gave isoprene, but nobody knows how to reverse the process. It is not impossible. In fact, it has been done on a small scale, for isoprene, allowed to stand a long time in the laboratory, has spontaneously changed into caoutchouc. If, then, one could accelerate and complete the process, this doubling up, or polymerization, as it is called, the main difficulty would be overcome, for isoprene can be made from turpentine. Then the rubber industry would be transferred from the forests of Brazil to our own pine woods. Provided, of course, the manufacture were cheap enough. Chemists can do a great many things that they do not do because it does not pay. They can manufacture quinine artificially, but the process is too expensive to be profitable. On the other hand, Germany has snatched from India an industry worth many millions a year by the discovery of an economical process for the manufacture of indigo. It is cheaper and better to make it than to raise it.

Such will probably be the case with rubber, although its present high price is not likely to last much longer. The jump in price came from the sudden demand made by many new uses. The natives of Brazil could keep us in gum shoes and raincoats by their slow process of tapping the trees, catching the juice in little clay cups and boiling it down over a wood fire, but when we began to use it for the tires of bicycles, and then buggies, and later automobiles, and when electrical machinery used it on an enormous scale for insulation, their primitive industry broke down under the pressure. Now the world is using 60,000 tons of rubber a year, and is calling for more. All sorts of expedients were practiced. Rubber goods were weighted and adulterated until they cracked and crumbled at a touch. Old rubber was carefully collected and reworked, but it never could be made to regain its youthful elasticity and vigor. To make the matter worse, the game of golf came in and gutta percha, which is the next thing to rubber, was sown over our fields and forests by brassie slices.

The increased demand was partially met in a variety of ways; by the discovery of new fields and new sources, by improving the yield and by the cultivation of rubber trees. The Bolivian forests became a rival to the Brazilian. It was found that nearly all plants with milky juice, such as the poppy, contained caoutchouc, at least in small quantities, and from some of them it could be profitably extracted. Instead of waiting for the caoutchouc to rise slowly, like cream, from the milky juice, or collecting it by rude and dirty methods of coagulation, the centrifugal separator was introduced, and a much purer product quickly obtained. Countries possessing suitable tropical colonies established extensive rubber plantations. The Para rubber tree begins to yield when six or seven years old, and already the cultivated rubber is becoming an important factor. Within seven years it is expected that the product of the trees now planted in Ceylon and the Malay States will reach between 10,000,000 and 15,000,000 pounds a year, and in double that time will be five times as great or as much as is now yielded by the Amazon forests.

Still there is no danger of glutting the market, for as the price falls the uses of rubber become more numerous. One can think of a thousand ways in which rubber could be used if it were only cheap enough. In the form of pads and springs and tires it would do much to render traffic noiseless. Even the elevated railroad and the subway might be opened to conversation, and the city made habitable for mild-voiced and gentle folk. It would make one's step sure, noiseless and springy whether it was used individualistically as ruber heels or collectivistically as carpeting and paving. In roofing and siding and paint it would make our buildings warmer and more durable. It would reduce the [illegible] permit the extension of ele[illegible] pliances of almost all kinds. [illegible] short, there is hardly any other [illegible] rial whose abundance would [illegible] ute more to our comfort and [illegible] venience, and it is greatly to be [illegible] that the solution of the problem of synthetic rubber on which [illegible] have been working diligently and [illegible] selfishly for a half century will [illegible] be delayed many more years. [illegible] subject has its altruistic side, [illegible] enslavement of the Congo is due [illegible] the rise in the price of rubber, [illegible] synthetic rubber would do more [illegible] the natives than philanthropy.—[Independent.

HONOR VS. BANKRUPTCY.

Fledgeling Financier Won Hard Fight and Became One of the World's Richest Hundred.

Norman Bruce Ream, "construc[illegible] speculator" and millionaire, was [illegible] in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, [illegible] 1844. His father was a Pennsylvania Dutchman who believed in plenty of good, hard work for boys and [illegible] and believed also that boys should [illegible]gin it as early as possible.

Ream began real work when he was 8 years old, though before that he had a few light tasks allotted him. When he was 14 he [illegible] and write better than the other boys of the neighborhood, and as he was of a size and strength equal to the task of keeping order and crushing [illegible] he was made school teacher.

For two or three short [illegible] taught simple arithmetic, [illegible]ing, and reading through the [illegible] reader. The call for volunteers [illegible] found him among the first to [illegible] and he fought for three years, [illegible] to the rank of first lieutenant, [illegible] courage had marked him for [illegible] advance when he was almost [illegible] pieces in a battle near Savannah, [illegible] one bullet tearing through [illegible] and two others so cutting [illegible] that he narrowly escaped the [illegible] of amputation.

"It's a wonder they didn't [illegible] before," said the field surgeon, [illegible]ing him over. "There's [illegible] you."

There was a little more than [illegible] one inch of him, and as he [illegible] pain he looked up at the surgeon [illegible] said, with a faint smile:

"I've been on short rations [illegible] they couldn't see me, I guess."

He was in such bad shape [illegible] time, and the prospect of his [illegible] seemed so small, that he was [illegible] put on the pension list. He [illegible] drawn a cent of what was [illegible] him. He got back to Pennsylvania and rest, fresh air, and a [illegible] such as comes only from hard [illegible] the soil pulled him through.

He was not strong enough [illegible] to farming as he intended, [illegible] teaching no longer appealed [illegible] So he set up a little general [illegible] in two years had made and [illegible] hundred dollars. With this [illegible] west to Princeton, Ill., and [illegible] other store. He gave it up [illegible] year to devote himself to [illegible] trading in farm implements [illegible] stock in Iowa.

The panic that began to [illegible] the country in 1871 struck [illegible] left him $400,000 in debt. [illegible] the next four years working [illegible] that debt, and it took [illegible] day and night to accomplish [illegible] and he paid every cent, [illegible]

"Now," he said, when [illegible] "I'll get a job and work for [illegible]"

The commission business [illegible] he had earned the money [illegible] debts did not give him the [illegible] wanted and he turned to [illegible]tion.

"I'll plunge," he said, [illegible] "but only when I see at [illegible] something worth going after, [illegible] only when I am sure of [illegible] reach it."

Acting on this principle he [illegible] a good many big things and [illegible] a sufficient number to place [illegible] the first hundred richest [illegible] the world.

Other traders said it was [illegible] luck that enabled Ream to [illegible] and pile up money. Ream [illegible] it was a simple matter of [illegible] men who were behind any [illegible] he entered, knowing whether [illegible] honesty and ability, and trusting them only when he was [illegible] had.

His operations on the Chicago [illegible] Exchange netted him the first [illegible] his big fortune, and he [illegible] by business investments, helping [illegible] build up many big manufacturing con[illegible]cerns and railways. He was [illegible] in the directorate of the United [illegible] Steel Corporation, and [illegible] from others he financed the [illegible] some of the most profitable [illegible] ways in the country.

His fortune amounts [illegible] more than $20,000,000.

"I took chances to get it," [illegible] as any man in business [illegible] chances. A change in the weather [illegible] make or ruin a dealer who [illegible] a big stock of goods. There are [illegible] always happening that may [illegible] out of business or may make [illegible] for him.

SAYS A NEGRO HAS HIS WIFE.

[illegible] WARRANT IN ORDER TO RESCUE HER.

Brady and His Helpmeet in Poverty and She Leaves Him, It Is Alleged; Husband Claims Colored Man Threatened Their Lives — Mrs. Thelkold Will Shelter Them.

To rescue his wife from a negro with whom she is said to be living, Will Brady asked the police for an adultery warrant yesterday. Monday he will go before the City Prosecutor to find legal means of securing her. With Brady was Mrs. A. Thelkold, whose Good Samaritan Home at Elsinore will shelter Brady, his wife, and his aged [illegible].

The Bradys offer a fair sample of pitiful cases in Los Angeles, for whom no help offered until Mrs. Thelkold extended her refuge. The refuge is at Sunnyslope ranch, a pretty place with comfortable houses and abundant land. This is her property, and she [illegible] it in sheltering needy and helpless persons for whom county institutions do not offer aid.

The Bradys lived in a tent at the rear of No. 2207 Almo street. It is a squalid place, and they passed, it is said, a miserable existence, absolutely [illegible] by poverty. Four months ago Mrs. Brady left her husband. She is now said to be living with old John Bell, a negro, at his place on Avenue [illegible] near the pigeon farm. Among other possessions, Bell has a half-dozen red [illegible] raw-boned hounds, so savage that neighbors fear to enter his premises. Brady claims that Bell has threatened the woman and him with death. Mrs. Thelkold will try, on Monday, to help the husband get the wife away from the negro and then she will take the pair to Sunnyslope ranch.

BURGLARS ARE BUSY.

[illegible]'s Store and a Residence. Drug Place on Water Wagon.

RIVERSIDE, Oct. 20.—The Sheriff's office was notified today that Hook [illegible]'s store, at Perris, was burglarized, last night. The thieves were evidently of a fighting inclination, for the only things they took were Winchester revolvers and ammunition. Deputy Sheriff Murphy went out to Perris this morning, to do some detective work on the case. The burglars [illegible].

The residence of N. F. Smith, on Colton avenue, was burglarized by two men yesterday afternoon, in the absence of the family, and the caretaker of the place, D. E. Downs, was held up by the men until they could make their escape. Mr. Downs was coming up from the rear of the house when one of the men came out of a window. Seeing him, the stranger turned and made an attempt to shoot, but the gun failed to respond, although he pulled the trigger twice. An accomplice came out of a front window and the two hurried into a near by orchard. It is not known how much booty the burglars secured. Mr. Smith is the principal of the Monrovia schools and is at present living there.

The Misses Ada and Jean Adair entertained at a charmingly-appointed afternoon tea, yesterday, at their home on Orange street, in honor of Miss Irma Willard, who is to be married next week to Hope Condie McCall of Minneapolis. The affair was one of the prettiest of the season and was attended by about fifty of the young friends of the bride-elect.

Work began, today, on a two-story brick block to be built by Alvin Packard on the north side of Ninth street, between Main and Market streets, opposite the Rubidoux skating rink. It will be built in the mission style, and as soon as it is completed, it will be occupied by Newberry & Parker as an annex to their grocery store. The building will have a frontage of twenty-five feet on Ninth street and a depth of eighty-five feet. The firm will fit it up as a bakery and also contemplate putting in a candy factory. The store is to be completed on or before December 20.

All the ministers, Woman's Christian Temperance Union members and anti-liquor people of the city received invitations to call at the Sun Drug store, at 10 o'clock this morning, to witness the shipment out of town of the last of that store's stock of liquors. The proprietors announce that hereafter no liquors will be handled in any form. It is common talk that a drug store that is on the water wagon cannot exist in Riverside and the Sun people are preparing to disprove the statement.

Five basketball enthusiasts among the business men of the city engaged in a spirited contest with the basketball team of the Y.M.C.A. seniors, last night, and defeated them with a score of 18 to 13. After the game an exhibition fencing bout was given by H. D. French and L. D. Schantz, physical director of the Y.M.C.A.

CARNEGIE BOAT AT SAN DIEGO.

Magnetic Survey Brig Galilee Arrives After Eight Months Cruise in North Pacific.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Oct. 20.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Carnegie magnetic survey brig Galilee arrived here today from an eight months' cruise in Northern Pacific waters, completing her second voyage in making the magnetic survey of the Pacific Ocean. The report of the scientists aboard will be made to the Carnegie Institute. Capt. J. C. Hayes, the commander of the schooner, has been unable to hear from his wife, who was in San Francisco at the time of the disaster, while he was at sea. In the trip she visited the Samoan, Fiji, Ladrone and the Marshall group of islands, having sailed from Yokohama, for this port on July 24. August 25, she was caught in a typhoon and sunk in two fathoms of water. In the trip westward she experienced fifteen gales. News of the San Francisco disaster was given the vessel by the transport Sherman. The Galilee will remain here several weeks, and, after shipping a new crew, will proceed around the globe, via Cape Horn, to Baltimore, thence to the Mediterranean, and through the Suez Canal. The commission on board includes J. Peters, commander; Dr. Martin, J. P. Alt and J. C. Pearson.

SAN DIEGO BREVITIES.

The first yacht race for the Scripps Cup will take place tomorrow, twice around a triangular course of one mile to each leg, the foot of Fifth street being the starting point. Eight boats will compete.

A proposition is being considered for the running of the steamer San Diego between here and Long Beach in conjunction with the steamers to be operated by the Nelson-Napier Navigation Company.

The question of license or prohibition is to be submitted to the voters of many of the country precincts at the election, November 6. In anticipation of the election the Anti-Saloon League is conducting an active canvass in behalf of prohibition.

Ten Republican candidates for county office have returned from the Imperial Valley, where a number of political rallies were held. L. A. Wright, nominee of the party for State Senator, says that all indications point to the election of the entire Republican ticket.

UPLAND NEEDS TEACHER.

Is Jealous of Ontario—Mountain Lions at Brown's Flat—Popular Fruit Brand.

UPLAND, Oct. 20.—The question of added school facilities for Upland, or at least of an increased number of teachers for the work, will not down, and interest in the matter intensifies. The attendance in the local grammar schools is 244, and only six teachers are provided for the work. This necessitates a good deal of crowding, and imposes a very heavy task on each of the teachers, and to relieve this condition is the aim of the one member of the school board who hails from this end of the colony. Ontario, with a lesser average attendance in her grammar school, has nine teachers for the work, and the manifest injustice of this action is what has stirred matters up along school lines.

MOUNTAIN LIONS PLENTY.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Gladwin have been spending the past week in the log cabin on "Brown's Flat," which lies on the trail in San Antonio Cañon, some ten miles from Pierce's Camp. The flat consists of about forty acres of basin land, surrounded by peaks, and dotted here and there with massive pines. At one time the land there was under cultivation but of recent years the only crop is a heavy growth of grass. Game, both large and small, is to be found in plenty, and the place is a popular one with hunters. The mountain lions are so persistent, however, that pack animals are unsafe, unless tethered close to the door of the hut, at night. The view from the cabin is said to be fully worth the strenuous climb necessary to reach the spot.

UPLAND NOTES.

George Good has recently arrived from the East, and will open a restaurant in the former Gilbert place on Second avenue.

B. A. Woodford, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, has just returned from an extensive trip through the Eastern States.

N. F. Franklin has sold to J. Knapp of Ontario his five acres of oranges and one lot on Third avenue, above Tenth street.

Miss Williams, who resides on Sixth street, is having a new home built on Euclid avenue, between Ninth and Tenth. H. M. Sholl is erecting a carriage repair and paint shop on Second avenue, and J. M. Sawyer has his new residence on the same thoroughfare well under way.

BOOSTERS ORGANIZE.

Redlands Citizens Form a Body for the Promotion of the Town's Interests.

REDLANDS, Oct. 20.—Fifty representative business and professional men of Redlands met yesterday and organized a Booster's Club. K. C. Wells was chairman. R. Holtby Myers, Halsey W. Allen and F. P. Meserve were named as a committee on constitution. They presented a constitution and bylaws which were immediately adopted. The object of the club will be to see Redlands grow and the aim of the club will be to get two thousand men to shout for the town. The following officers and directors were chosen: President, K. C. Wells; vice-president, C. S. McWhorter; secretary-treasurer, A. E. Brock; J. W. England, J. J. Suess, A. N. Dike.

OFFER FRANCHISES.

The Board of City Trustees has decided to offer for sale the franchise asked by A. G. Hubbard for an electric, single-track road over Brookside and Citrus avenues from the west city limits to the east city boundary. The board also granted the application of N. Buckmaster for the sale of a franchise over East State street from Orange street to Church street, on Church to Citrus and on Citrus to Redlands, on Redlands street to Fifth avenue and to the city limits, also extending on Church street to the north city limits, which is the wash. Both franchises are to be sold November 23.

First train of business invasion from Los Angeles into the newly-opened Nevada mining district. This city is reaching for the immense trade of the desert camps.

FREIGHT OFF FOR THE GOLD FIELDS.

FIRST TRAIN HEAVILY LADEN FOR BULLFROG.

Local Machinery Firm Sends Shipment of Ten Cars, Which Is Thought to Be the Opening Wedge to a Great Market for Los Angeles Merchandise.

The first train from Los Angeles to Bullfrog pulled out last night over the Salt Lake line. It consisted of ten heavily loaded cars of machinery.

It is evidence that at least one business house in the city has awakened to the fact that there is a great market awaiting all who would embrace it.

All this machinery was purchased for the Bonnie-Clare Mining Company from the Eddie Engineering and Machinery Company, through E. A. Forrester & Sons, who have purchased a controlling interest in the mines, and in this shipment of machinery alone have invested more than $75,000.

The operations of this company alone are simply an indication of what many others are doing, and thus points to the greatness of the market in the Goldfield-Bullfrog region, which has just been tapped by the Salt Lake road. They are erecting a forty-stamp mill, a great cyanide plant, and other necessary machinery for the operation of a great mine, and the ten carloads shipped yesterday were for this work. In addition to the milling plant they will erect seventeen other buildings, and as they have nothing for sale, seems to be the best evidence that the operation is a solid one in every way.

Surely it looks as if it were worth the while of merchants and manufacturers of Los Angeles to do all in their power to attract all the vast trade of the new region to this city, and it is not too much to expect that his first freight train to the gold fields will be followed by a regular service of equal proportions.

The coming excursion, which will carry a large number of business men into the field on the first regular passenger train over the road, will prove an object-lesson that will no doubt bring the desired results, and the local market will seize this trade, which rightfully belongs to it, instead of permitting it to be taken by Salt Lake and San Francisco, both of which are many miles farther from its doors.

HOME FOR STATE SOCIETIES.

Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Massachusetts People to Meet in Fraternal Brotherhood Building.

At a meeting yesterday of President L. M. Hall of the Ohio Society, Mr. Miller, president of the Pennsylvania Society, Mr. Loud, president of the Massachusetts Society, and Newton J. Skinner, president of the Texas Society, it was decided to lease the Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, between Eighth and Ninth, on Figueroa street, for a permanent home of the four different societies.

They have leased the large auditorium, ladies' and gentlemen's parlor and banquet-room of the Fraternal Brotherhood building for each Tuesday night for the next eight months. The Massachusetts Society will hold its regular monthly meeting on the first Tuesday in November, and on each first Tuesday in the month thereafter. The Ohio Society will hold its regular monthly meeting on the second Tuesday in November, being the 13th, and each second Tuesday in each month thereafter. The Texas Society will hold its first meeting in the new rooms on the 20th of November, being the third Tuesday, and each third Tuesday in the month thereafter. The Pennsylvania Society holds its meeting on the 27th of November, being the fourth Tuesday in the month, and each fourth Tuesday thereafter.

On the fifth Tuesday in January and the fifth Tuesday in April, there will be joint meetings of the societies. These four societies are among the largest State societies in Los Angeles. Each society is represented by from 2000 to 3000 people, living in and around this city.

Each society generally has a musical and literary program, followed with dancing. The older members meet in social intercourse, playing cards and other games. The people who are loyal to the States they come from are loyal to the State they adopt as their home.

It is the plan of each society, at two of their monthly meetings during the next eight months, to give a large banquet to their members and friends.

FERRIS IN TOWN.

Minneapolis Theatrical Manager Visits Auditorium, in Search of Home for Stock Company.

"Dick" Ferris, theatrical manager of Minneapolis, is in town.

A month ago The Times forecasted the negotiations between Ferris and S. M. Berry, manager of the new auditorium.

It seems probable that Mr. Ferris has come to conclude the deal for the occupancy of the auditorium after the grand opera season.

Mr. Ferris's stock company contains a number of well-known players, including Florence Stone, as leading woman.

POINTERS ABOUT

Wilshire--Harvard Heights

One of the best known and probably the best spoken of and best selling large subdivisions on the local realty market is Wilshire Harvard Heights. Lying in the very heart of the fashionable new Wilshire section, this tract embodies all the desirable features of homesite perfection. Its desirability for a home has been long and generally acknowledged, but we desire to call your attention to the . Investment Feature

Bought just before the tremendous advance in acreage values in the Wilshire section, we are selling lots, with the highest class of improvements included, at less per acre than surrounding unimproved acreage has sold for.

Within the past nine months a veritable transformation has taken place in the district—it must be seen to be appreciated. Wilshire Boulevard has been widened to 100 feet, graveled and oiled to the city limits (a mile beyond our property.) Dozens of beautiful and costly homes are already springing up along its march to the sea. Poles and wires are up and track is being laid for the Sixth Street car line. The right of way for a new short line to the ocean running through this district,, has been secured and the route is pretty generally known. In our tract over 115,000 cubic yards of earth have been moved, a 5-foot concrete storm-drain over 1900 feet long has been laid, contracts have been let for 6 miles of cement walks, curbs and cement gutters.

We Predict

That with the coming of these two car lines and probably one other, the completion of our costly improvements, the building of many homes which are already planned and the character of which are protected by building restrictions—in other words, within one year every lot in the tract will increase from fifty to seventy-five per cent. in value.

If we could show you the property you would be convinced. If you have a little money that "isn't workin," let our agent call for you at your home or office with an auto, and take you out.

The estate involved amounts to about $10,000. The home place, furniture and accessories of the home are worth about $3500, and this property is in the name of the so termed widow. She claims to have invested of her own personal savings $3250 in the firm of Charles Heintz & Company, and if these holdings should be deducted from the estate and she should receive her one-third of the other property as widow there would be little left for the five children to try to secure. As the matter stands they deny that she is their father's widow or that she invested anything in their father's business or that she is entitled to any more than the veriest stranger to the estate. The home place is deeded her, so of that she cannot in any event be deprived.

These are the charges and counter-charges that will be elaborated when the case is carried to trial. The people of San Pedro are eagerly talking the matter over and wondering how it will all come out.

Do Not Walk Straight.

"Nobody in Philadelphia walks straight," said a human nature observer the other day. "Watch a score of pedestrians on the sidewalk, and not one of them sticks to a straight path. Those deviations are not always due to the crowded condition of the pavement, either. During the rush hours a man is supposed to dodge this way and that in his efforts to make progress, but when given a clear road there is no excuse for so much sidetracking. Yet, no matter how favorable the conditions the city man zigzags just the same. He might have a stretch of sidewalk a block long all to himself and be perfectly sober, yet in that distance he would veer from curb to step line and back again several times."—[Philadelphia Record.

An Odorous Court.

"The scented court" was the name by which the court of Louis XV was known throughout Europe, on account of the rage for perfumes which then prevailed in France. The expenditure of Mme. de Pompadour for this one branch of her toilet amounted to $100,000 annually. It became the fashion for the host or hostess of a great entertainment to signalize to their guests what particular perfume was to be employed for scenting their rooms on the night for which the invitations were issued, and they were expected to use no other, so that the delicate effect of a unity of odors might be produced. At court a different perfume was presented for each day of the week.

Cheese-making Is Gardening.

Cheese-making has been shown by recent bacterial research to be a sort of gardening—an inverted gardening, in which the plants are grown for the sake of modifying the soil. The peculiar qualities and flavors of the different cheeses have been proved to be due to the growth of various species of bacteria and moulds in them. And it has been found possible to produce the flavor of any required cheese from the milk of any locality by introducing the appropriate plants. In a recent paper, for example, C. Gorini shows that the familiar red and green patches which characterize Gorgonzola cheese are the combined work of a special mould, and a species of bacillus. These organisms are introduced as the result of artificial punctures, made in the process of manufacture.

Fight Pictures Shown.

Pictures of the Gans-Nelson fight were shown for the first time last night at the People's Theater on Main street to a select party of newspaper men and friends of the management. They show up exceedingly well and detail every blow struck. The pictures will be exhibited this afternoon for the first time to a Los Angeles public. During the coming week they will be shown each afternoon and evening.

FUNERAL OF STRONG MAN OF FINANCE AND BUSINESS.

Herman W. Hellman, Whose Remains Will Be Laid Away This Morning, Came Here When Los Angeles Had Three Thousand Population—Bankers' Resolutions.

With the funeral obsequies of the late Herman W. Hellman, which will take place this morning at the family residence, Tenth and Hill streets, passes away one of the very important figures in business and finance of this city.

Herman W. Hellman was born September 25, 1843, in Bavaria, Germany. There as a boy he received the ordinary education acquired in our public schools of the grammar grade. His adventuresome spirit led him to leave the paternal rooftree at the early age of 15 years and direct his steps to the far-off lands, across a continent and an ocean, of America. He came directly to Los Angeles, then a little town of scarcely 3000 inhabitants. The first employment the young immigrant found was as freight clerk in the office of the late Gen. Phineas Banning at Wilmington. He stayed in this position but a very short time, as he felt that he could do better for himself than in earning a salary, even from so good an employer as Gen. Banning. His first venture in business in Los Angeles was in a small stationery store, which he managed in partnership with a friend. But the partnership was dissolved in a very short time, and Hellman started in the same line of business for himself. He succeeded beyond his expectations, and in March, 1870, he closed out his business and spent a year of travel in Europe, visiting his boyhood home.

Returning to Los Angeles in 1871, Herman W. Hellman associated himself with Jacob Haas, founding a wholesale grocery house, known as Hellman, Haas & Co., which, under Mr. Hellman's management, carried on a very extended trade throughout the whole Southwest as far as Texas. This continued for twenty years. Then, in 1890, retiring from the wholesale grocery business, he became vice-president and local manager of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank, his brother, I. W., going to San Francisco to take charge of the Nevada Bank there.

The deceased financier remained in this position, the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank growing stronger and stronger under his management, until a little less than three years ago, when he severed his connection with that institution and became president of the Merchants' National Bank, a position which he filled with great satisfaction to his associates in that bank, and in a way generally very acceptable to the business community, until the time of his death. For years he was a director in the Security Savings Bank, and until its dissolution, in the Main-street Savings Bank.

In all these undertakings Herman W. Hellman prospered even beyond his own ambitious aims. His most daring enterprise in business was the erection of the great eight-story office building on the corner of Fourth and Spring streets, which will forever bear his name. This corner was the old-time home of the deceased banker, but when the business center of the city reached out farther and farther southward until that corner became the very center of the business heart of the city, the grounds became too exceedingly valuable to use for residence purposes or for an ordinary business structure, and so, with his usual enterprise and public spirit, Hellman constructed this great eight-story fireproof building, as substantial and handsome as the city of New York can boast of, at a cost of $1,500,000. This includes the estimated value of the ground two years ago. The enhancement of values in that part of the city would probably make this property at the present time worth nearly if not quite $2,000,000. It is still recognized as one of the handsomest buildings on the whole Pacific Slope. There is nothing handsomer west of Chicago, and but little that surpasses it on the American hemisphere.

CLEARINGHOUSE RESOLUTIONS.

The Los Angeles Clearinghouse Association held a special meeting this morning, at which J. A. Graves and J. E. Fishburn were appointed a committee to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Mr. Hellman and report same at the next meeting of the association. The various banks of the city were requested to send representatives to the funeral of Mr. Hellman tomorrow. Subsequently the members of the Los Angeles Clearinghouse Committee also held a special meeting and adopted the following:

Whereas, the passing from earth of our friend and brother member, Herman W. Hellman, calls for an expression of our sorrow and of our appreciation of his high character;

Resolved, that Herman W. Hellman in life and character has conspicuously honored the community in which he dwelt, the circle of friends and associates with whom he was more intimately identified, and the family of which he was the endeared head. The membership now vacant upon this committee, upon which for many years Herman W. Hellman has bestowed a large measure of his great financial ability, may not succeed to another of like devoted and distinguished genius. We, his fellow members of the Los Angeles Clearinghouse Committee, in deepest sorrow, now testify to his rare excellence of character. His many noble qualities of mind and heart will ever be potent with us to inspire high ideals and honorable endeavor.

We sympathize with the bereaved family of our late distinguished associate. We trust that those who were dearest to him may find consolation to a great degree for their loss in the remembrance of his well-spent career, his kind deeds and his estimable character.

The Clearinghouse sends to the funeral an exceedingly handsome casket bouquet, an immense bunch of splendid American Beauty roses.

FROM REDONDO.

The officials of the First National Bank of Redondo, of which Hellman was president, yesterday adopted this resolution:

Whereas, our beloved president, Herman W. Hellman, has obeyed the summons of the Almighty and departed this life; and,

Whereas, realizing the loss to the community at large, as well as his family, by his death, and being desirous of extending our sympathy to his bereaved family in this their hour of misfortune, be it

Resolved, that we the undersigned, officers and directors of the First National Bank of Redondo, do hereby express our sense of the irreparable loss to the community by the death of our president, and extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family in this their hour of sorrow.

The funeral is expected to be largely attended, as Hellman's friends are numbered by the thousands.

The Home Telephone Company last evening named John M. C. Marble, W. B. Bartlett, Thomas W. Phillips and J. S. Torrance to represent it officially at the services.

The Chamber of Commerce will be represented at the funeral today by four of its directors. They are: A. B. Cass, A. C. Keyes, Niles Pease and A. W. Skinner. In 1892 Mr. Hellman was a director.

NEW CATHOLIC PARISH.

Bishop Conaty has issued notice that he has instituted a new parish in Los Angeles, and he has appointed as its rector Rev. Thomas F. Fahey. This parish will be known as Holy Cross, and its location is south of Santa Barbara avenue, east of the eastern line of St. Agnes parish and west of the western line of St. Patrick's parish, and south of the city limits. Six lots for the use of the parish have been purchased on South Main street, between Forty-seventh and Senaca streets, and a parish building will soon be erected thereon.

How to Have Pretty Eyes.

The woman who wants pretty eyes will not have them circled with dark lines. Nor will she have great sacs under her eyes. The pretty girl's eyes are never laden underneath with great bags. They are never red as to the lashes, and the brows are never unruly. On the contrary, the eyes of the pretty girl are of the shining variety, beautifully clear and of the kind which can open widely and look one right in the face.

To get eyes like this one must not abuse the eyes. The girl who sews late at night, the girl who rubs her eyes, the girl who lets her lids and lashes become neglected, this girl cannot hope to have pretty eyes.

The eyebrows should not be neglect. The woman who wants nice eyebrows can heat a little almond oil and apply it nightly to the eyebrows with a small brush. In this manner the eyebrows can be influenced. Often they are inclined to grow straggly. But by painting them with a brush regularly they can be trained into shape.

Value of Acquaintance.

Excepting hopeless bores, who use up time and neither give nor get anything, very few acquaintances are detrimental to responsible, grown-up people.

Even children profit by variety in their associates. To teach them to be socially exclusive is to teach them to be snobs, and against that most right-minded children instinctively rebel.

The people who hit off their social relations to the best advantage are those in whom a strong sense of human brotherhood is tempered by taste and discretion.

The degree of incidental exclusiveness that guards a man's time and husbands his energies for his daily work is indispensable to the accomplishment of any serious business, but that is a different matter from exclusiveness that shuts out for the mere sake of excluding—[Harper's Magazine.

Muscovite League of Cut-Throats Has Grown Enormously, Owing to the Readiness of Both Government and Revolutionists to Pay for Acts Violence.

DUS OPERANDI.

Hundred" lately have attention to the people money to the banks. A will enter the courtyard in which some large office situated, that with the house the servants, treat them to some vodka, and learn when the money is taken and by whom. The person to whom the task is entrusted is then closely watched, and on going into the street he is followed. If he happens to have the money with him, the suspicion that he is being shadowed may cross his mind, but he has no other choice but to go on. Within a short distance of the bank, some ten or twelve people fall upon him. One pins his hands behind his back while the others, drawing out their revolvers, cry "silence" and rifle his pockets till they find the money. If he happens to shout for help he will probably get killed, for nobody will go to his rescue. On the contrary, the passers-by who see his plight hastily cross to the other side of the street and make off from the scene of the outrage as fast as their legs can carry them. There will be a sentry at the bank, but none of the spectators will dare to tell him of what is happening a few yards away for fear of "revenge" at the hands of the Black Hundred.

Another habit of these ruffians is to go up to a man or woman in the street, represent themselves as artisans out of work, ask for money, and when it is refused, take purse and watch by force. The victims in such cases think themselves lucky if they do not get a knife run into their bodies into the bargain, as the younger members of the hundred are fond of practicing with stillettoes in this way. In fact, there is now a tendency to substitute the knife for the revolver in street attacks, as no noise is made and the victim does not feel the cut at first, thus the assailant is given time to escape.

A favorite way of killing a man in the street is for the assassin to catch hold of the first woman who falls in his way, link his right arm through her left and fire at his victim. The woman, who has not had time to realize what has happened, runs off screaming, or falls; a crowd collects around her and the assassin's victim, while the perpertrator of the crime escapes scot free.

WOMEN VICTIMS.

Banks are closely watched inside as well as out and when a woman is seen to take out a large sum of money, a man follows her into the street and says, "Allow me to take you home, madame, the times are so troublous that you should not walk about alone." If she agrees, he will walk a little way with her, and be joined by another friend at a short distance, when both will enter the house with her and rob her of her money. If she refuses to be "taken home," a knife thrust is the result, after which the money is snatched from her. It rarely happens that a thief of this kind is caught, for most people prefer to give him a wide berth when they see him running, for fear he should fire off a revolver on his way.

But the Black Hundred does not stop here, it can be "engaged," as it were, for acts of revenge. In some of the large towns in Russia, there are offices in which one can, by paying various sums, according to the difficulty of the deed, hire men to kill or injure any person he may name. It is, in fact, only necessary to enter any of the pothouses in the lower quarters of the towns to find an unlimited number of ruffians, armed with knives or revolvers, and ready for any deed of violence for a fixed sum of money or a share of the booty.

Suppose a man does not pay his rent for a year or two and his landlord threatens to evict him, he will if he is unscrupulous, engage five or six ruffians to go to the landlord with revolvers cocked and make him promise not to send his troublesome tenant away. This kind of terrorism is now practiced to such an extent, especially in the Polish towns, that the landlord is lucky indeed who gets even a small part of his rents or can evict a tenant without having his property damaged. The scenes which have been and still are enacted in Warsaw alone under such circumstances appear incredible to those who have not seen them. These scenes are not confined to the slums of the town, for perhaps the most daring act of revenge perpetrated during the current year took place in the best street in Warsaw, and in a good restaurant.

The keeper of this place had not paid any rent since he came into the house. At the end of a year and a half, the landlord determined to have his furniture seized and called in the bailiffs for the purpose. The tenant wrote several threatening letters, of which, however, the landlord took no notice. Before the date fixed for the sale of his tenant's effects, he was obliged to go abroad, but left the case in charge of a young lawyer who had his power of attorney. When the day arrived, a band of ruffians called upon the lawyer, telling him that he would be shot if the sale took place; the bailiff was also threatened and both gave in, satisfying themselves with getting an eviction order out against the restaurant keeper.

GUNS IN HAND.

The evening had begun to close in before the order was forthcoming, and the tenant spent the day in threatening the lawyer and the bailiff. When the order was ready, the bailiff accompanied by the lawyer went to the restaurant to shut up the premises and turn out the tenant. Both had revolvers put to their heads as soon as they reached the threshold, for the restaurant was crowded with ruffians who had been brought there to terrify them. The lawyer made his escape, however, and the bailiff also, though the latter stayed till a policeman arrived and some soldiers. But the policeman gave the keys of the restaurant back to the tenant and went away.

Being now master of the situation, the tenant, after treating his suffians to unlimited supplies of vodka, began to take away his furniture regardless of the fact that it had been sealed by the bailiff. Crowds of riff-raff had now collected and spurred on by the promises of more drink, took the furniture into vans which they requisitioned by terror from a neighboring furniture remover. When this was done, they began to destroy the premises, led by the restaurant keeper who told them to ruin the man who had sucked his blood from his veins and had grown rich upon the work of the proletariat.

In a short time the kitchen ranges were pulled down, and the hermetically-sealed stove in the dining-room. The floorings were next ripped up, and the wall papers stripped off by a hundred destructive hands. Then plate-glass windows hampered the crowd, so they were smashed to the accompaniment of shrieks of joy that the property of a "bourgeois" was being destroyed. Some friends of the absent landlord, aghast at the ruination they saw, tried to get the police to interfere, but the police said it was no business of theirs, and refused. At last, somebody, who knew the inspector on duty at the nearest police station, managed to get him to send a policeman and some soldiers to the scene of the orgy; but they were soon bought over with basins of vodka, got drunk, and helped to pull down the walls with their bayonets.

ORGY ENDS IN VATS.

The orgie terminated in the cellar, where the mob repaired to take the vats of Pilsener beer up into the street; but, finding them too heavy, they hacked them into pieces, let the beer flood the cellar, drank it till they could drink no more, and finally lay down to sleep. On awaking late in the evening, they asked the restaurant keeper for more drink, and as all had been pilfered or consumed the night before, were uncommonly angry, and demanded payment for their "work." But by this time the authorities, seeing that the remains of the restaurant were open to the four winds of heaven, sent a strong detachment of soldiers, who turned the mob off the premises, using the butts of their rifles and ordered the window frames to be boarded up.

The fact that an nnocent man lost property worth $2000 or $3000 because one of his tenants did not choose to pay his rent, would in any other country be sufficient to send the guilty ones to the nearest police station. But under the Russian government these things are allowed to pass unpunished, and though the landlord would like to see his old tenant in the dock, he receives letters threatening to kill him and his family if he dares to do so, and, therefore, satisfies himself with having his damaged property repaired as soon as possible. Occurrences like this one are too frequent to surprise anybody, and people think themselves lucky if they manage to keep their money away from the Black Hundred and the revolutionaries, for the chances are that if they escape the first, they will fall into the hands of the second.

The Black Hundred of Warsaw has formed a "Debt Collecting Society." This consists of a band of men who go into the less respectable shops, ask if there are any book debts, and when the answer is in the affirmative, offer to collect them for a certain percentage. On receiving permission and a list of the debtors, they go to their houses and say that they are authorized by Messrs. So-and-So to take the money owing to them. When the debtor makes some excuse, the inevitable revolvers are produced with a threat to use them if the money is not forthcoming. Of course, reputable firms are above "collecting" money in this way.

Hard on the Persian.

Prof. William Jackson tells in his "Persia Past and Present" some stories illustrating character in the land of Omar Khayyam. One is of a man who, suffering from inflamed eyes, went to a horse doctor for treatment. The veterinary gave him some of the salve that he used on animals and the man lost hisc eyesight. Te then brought suit in court to recover damages. The judge, after weighing the evidence in the case, handed down his decision as follows: "There are no damages to be recovered; the man would never have gone to a veterinary if he had not been an ass!"

PROTECTION A TRIPLE BENEFIT.

BY WALTER J. BALLARD.

It is a fact not generally known, but a fact nevertheless, that our protective tariff has, during the nine fiscal years of its existence, not only increased exports by increasing the outputs of our factories, but it has increased our imports of dutiable goods faster than it has our imports of free goods.

Here are the Bureau of Statistics figures by fiscal years, beginning with 1896 and 1897, low tariff years, to prove it:

Low tariff.	Free imports.	Dutiable imports.
1896 ...	$369,000,000	$410,000,000
1897 ...	382,000,000	383,000,000
Total ...	$751,000,000	$793,000,000
Yearly average ...	375,500,000	396,500,000
Protective tariff.
1898 ...	291,000,000	325,000,000
1899 ...	300,000,000	397,000,000
1900 ...	367,000,000	483,000,000
1901 ...	340,000,000	484,000,000
1902 ...	397,000,000	506,000,000
1903 ...	426,000,000	589,000,000
1904 ...	454,000,000	537,000,000
1905 ...	517,000,000	600,000,000
1906 ...	549,000,000	677,000,000
Totals ...	$3,641,000,000	$4,608,000,000
Yearly average ...	404,500,000	512,000,000

These figures compare as follows:

Protective tariff— Average yearly free imports	$404,500,000
Low tariff— Average yearly free imports	375,500,000
Protective tariff yearly gain in free imports	$ 29,000,000
Protective tariff— Average yearly dutiable imports	$512,000,000
Low tariff— Average yearly dutiable imports	396,500,000
Protective tariff yearly gain in dutiable imports	$115,500,000
Yearly protective gain over low tariff— In dutiable imports	$115,500,000
In free imports	29,000,000
Total yearly protective gain	$144,500,000

Protection is a triple gain over low tariff, in that, first, it increases exports; second, that it increases free imports; third, it increases dutiable inports, and most surprising of all, it also increases dutiable imports four times as fast as it increases free imports. With such an outcome the present protective tariff should satisfy everybody.

FORTY YEARS OF INVENTION.

Telephones, Electric Lights, Electric Cars and Other Conveniences Have Come Into Being.

[Philadelphia Record:] Forty-five years marks, we may say, the man of middle age, yet the retrospect of the last forty-five years will point to many of the most remarkable, and as now considered, indispensable inventions and devices of civilized life. These, the middle aged man, as a boy, did not even dream of. Going back to the time when the man, now forty-five, was five, we will find that he and all the rest of mankind lived very satisfactorily without telephones. Scarcely a house of any considerable size, would now be deemed habitable without one. When communication with a distant point was needed quickly the telegraph was brought into requisition. If great haste was not requisite, a letter sufficed.

The expedition with which business is now transacted was obviously impossible without the telephone, although other inventions, then equally unknown contribute much to the hurry of today. The electric light, like most other electrical inventions, was as distant as the telephone, though gas and oil, principally the former, made what was considered satisfactory illumination. Great construction works could not, however, be carried on at night with gas while now, by arc light they may. In that day the miner toiled underground by the dim flickering illumination of a candle. At present, large mines are strung with incandescent electric lights and kept practically as light as are surface establishments by night.

Forty years ago a speed of thirty miles by rail was deemed wonderful and continuous trips of more than 200 miles were rare. Changes of cars were frequent on long distance journeys, and as the segments of road were in those days controlled by different companies, there was much transferring of passengers and baggage, and buying of new tickets. Dining cars were unknown, and wayside lunch counters, with their familiar gongs and summary "All aboard," terminations to unsatisfactory and abbreviated repasts, were the rule.

The postage rate on domestic letters was then 3 cents, and foreign postage was charged to Canada and Mexico, while every negotiable document, deed, check, bond or legal instrument, bore an internal revenue stamp. Bankers, brokers, stationers, druggists and even saloonkeepers kept a supply of revenue stamps on sale, and merchants had them in sheets ready to be affixed to receipts if even for the most trifling amounts.

Every bank and merchant, and practically every storekeeper then subscribed to some publication which gave a weekly list of new counterfeit bank notes; and these publications, owing to the then imperfect methods of engraving and registration, were usually many pages in extent.

Songs of the war, printed on single sheets of music, were strung along park fences and sold at a penny apiece, the dealer being generally a wounded soldier of the Civil War, incapacitated for work. Small change was mostly of paper in denominations of 3, 5, 10, 25 and 50 cents. For a time a 15-cent bill was circulated, but it was soon withdrawn Nickel 3-cent pieces, as substitutes for silver 3-cent pieces, were also in circulation, though the silver 3-cent piece, or "scally," was not rare. Plugged silver pieces, when there were any silver pieces, usually 5 or 10-cent pieces, were the rule, rather than the exception, though the holes and lead filling seemed in no way to interfere with their circulating capacity.

Canned Olives.

The San Diego Tribune says: That the olive business is rapidly becoming one of the most important industries in San Diego county is shown by figures which are being compiled for the State Statistician, and which will be incorporated in the next report showing the progress of the State during the past year.

A careful and thorough investigation shows that during the past twelve months the olive industry has advanced with remarkable strides. The increase in the output of olives of various kinds has been enormous, and in spite of this fact is still advancing with great strides.

Not less than 120,000 cans of ripe olives were produced in San Diego county in the past twelve months. This means 10,000 cases, most of which were shipped to various points in the State and on the Pacific Coast, as well as to the other sections of the country, including the far eastern States.

More than 140 tons of green olives were shipped from the northern end of the county to Los Angeles, and from the latter place was shipped to the East. Six thousand gallons of bulk olives were also produced and 14,400 gallons of olive oil was turned out. When it is remembered that San Diego consumes but a small part of the output and that the prices received for the goods were satisfactory, some idea of the extent of the industry may be gleaned.

The next twelve months is expected to see the olive industry in San Diego county doubled, and it will not be long before this part of the State will be known as the principal olive-producing section of the entire country.

FROM POVERTY TO RICHES.

A Railroad Fireman Invents a Reversible Rotary Steam Turbine Engine.

A few days ago it was announced that James Devlin of Escanaba, Mich., a fireman on the Northwestern Railroad, had become a millionaire through the invention of a reversible rotary steam turbine engine, which he had sold to three of the British steamship companies.

The invention of Devlin makes the rotary engine reversible, which is the end for which inventors have been striving for years.

The change in the new invention from former patents made on the engine is in the method of applying steam by means of alternating cut-off valves.

He is one of the most peculiar characters Escanaba has ever boasted. He is of an extremely retiring disposition, with no close friends, and but little is known of his life before he came to Escanaba eight years ago to become a fireman on the Northwestern Railroad. He hoarded his savings in order that he might purchase material for working models, and many times denied himself the necessaries of life in order that he might carry out his ambitions to perfect his engine. On one occasion nearly two years ago, after giving a successful demonstration of the model in Appleton, Wis., Devlin learned that an attempt was being made to steal his idea, and although the invention was not then brought to its present state of completion, he blew it up with a stick of dynamite and burned all the drawings that he had prepared.

Since that time, up to March of this year, when he began the construction of a final model, he burned all drawings prepared by him and carried the entire idea of the invention in his mind.

The invention was completed early in June, and on June 19 a patent was issued. Devlin left Escanaba this morning for New York.

Oil Queen Buys.

John C. Kofoed has sold to Emma A. Summers, the "Oil Queen," a lot 100x150 feet on the northwest corner of Sixth and Carondelet streets, for $10,300. That is $100 per foot for the Sixth-street frontage, which is about the ruling price for property in this vicinity at this time. About three years ago Mr. Kofoed sold the same property for $4000, but could not convey because of some legal complications. That marks the increase in values around Westlake. This lot is about 100 feet west of the northwest corner of the park. The sale was made by Maj. George N. Nolan, who says corners along Sixth street are getting scarce. Mrs. Summers buys on speculation, expecting to sell in a rise.

Four Good Deals.

The following parcels of real estate have been sold through the agency of C. P. Deyoe: Lot 60x149 feet on west side of Westmoreland avenue, between Wilshire boulevard and West Seventh street, C. W. BUYING FARMS.

Tracts Large and Small Being Taken for Actual Use in All Kinds of Farming.

J. S. Tipton has sold ten acres in the west end of Anaheim for $3500 to J. L. Foote of Glendale, who will erect a pumping plant and make a number of other improvements on the property.

A. P. Hoffman sells an orchard in deciduous fruits and walnuts, ten acres, in the Lankershim ranch, near Toluca, for $3000. The buyer is August Mascotti. The orchards are in bearing. The buyer will make his home on the ranch.

The third big acreage deal was made Wednesday at Santa Ana, which goes to show that the eyes of men of large means are being turned toward Orange county as a place for investments. Edmund Snow sold his 40-acre ranch near the townsite of Fairview for $60,000 to J. Kujawsky, president of the Union Wine Association of Los Angeles. Kujawsky deposited a check for $1000 to bind the deal until the papers can be made out. Snow has owned the ranch for some time, and conducted a large dairy there until recently, when he has been getting the place in shape for alfalfa growing exclusively.

The Los Angeles wine man is also contemplating the purchase of the big farm of 470 acres near Snow's place, known as the Allen ranch, which is owned by W. L. Allen of Los Angeles, who was formerly a resident of Tustin. Allen's price for his property is $200 per acre. Part of the land is in the lowlands along the edge of the mesa, and could make a splendid duck preserve. The farms adjoin, and both could be utilized for splendid duck grounds.

At Anaheim Gus Hansen has sold his Orangethorpe-avenue residence to Jacob Stern of Fullerton for $27,000.

An important real estate deal was consummated when Chase Bros. sold to Francis D. Ellis a plot of thirty-seven acres of navel orange trees on Washington Square, Victoria avenue, Corona. The consideration was about $25,000.

Supervisor Linebarger of Orange county has made the following real estate sales about Anaheim: Thirteen acres north of the J. R. Allen place to G. H. Forster of Capistrano for $1800. Forster will build a residence on the property. He recently purchased the Allen twelve-acre orange grove on the south for $8000.

Sixty acres of undeveloped land, six miles east of town, to C. H. Henning of Anaheim for $4000. Henning will erect a residence and plant the entire tract to potatoes.

Linebarger has sold forty acres of his Yorba place to Bob Harris for $4000, reserving the house and barn and ten acres in Valencia orange trees. Harris will set his property to trees and will also raise alfalfa.

Linebarger has purchased a 160-acre stock ranch at Palmdale, with seventy head of cattle, which will be increased to 400 or 500 head. He will also purchase 500 stands of bees to be placed in the hills. His son, C. A. Linebarger, will move to Palmdale and take charge of the property.

TYPICAL LOS ANGELES HOMES.

The illustration on this page shows two typical Los Angeles homes, with an interior view of one of them. One of these homes is the home of Martha G. Thompson on the northeast corner of Avenue 31 and Griffin avenue. It is a double house, and cost about $6000. It will be noticed that it gives a good idea for the treatment of a side hill lot. The house has some features that are sui generis. The treatment is plain and substantial, giving two very comfortable homes at very moderate expense. The architect who drew the plans is Thomas Preston.

The second house in the group is that of W. C. Brain, on the southwest corner of Magnolia avenue and Eleventh street. The interior view is of the same house. This is an eight-room residence, of one of the best types now built in the city. Its cost was about $12,000. The treatment here is quite usual in building good homes in Los Angeles, the plastered gables with the timber showing through being quite common. The cosy porch at the entrance is a suggestion of the great amount of sunny hours of the day, and also of the calm of the cool evenings in summer, which the people of Los Angeles are very fond of. The plans for this house were also drawn by Thomas Preston.

"Nevers" of Well-dressed Woman.

The well-dressed woman never fails to lift her skirts in the back when she is going down steps, because this insures her skirts from becoming bedraggled.

She never wears soiled evening or soft kid gloves with her tailored walking suit, but heavy one-clasp kid gloves.

She never slips any sort of glove on without first making sure that her hands are clean. Once a soiled hand enters a glove the latter will always be grimy.

She never leaves the house without stuuying the hang of her skirts in a mirror. Nothing betrays hasty and careless dressing more surely than the hang of a skirt.

She never wears a motor veil except to protect herself from the wind at the seaside or in the country. For the street, with her tailored suit, she wears this year a close face veil of fine mesh, with small dots or none at all.

She wears a ruching instead of a voluminous lace flounce in her three-quarter or elbow jacket sleeves.

FLEES CELL BY FAULTY SYSTEM.

CITY PRISON INMATE ESCAPES THROUGH CARELESS WORK.

Will Francisco, Desperate Convict, Is Made Trusty in Municipal Jail, and Allowed Access to Tools Whereby He Was Enabled to Gain His Freedom—Better Plan Needed.

As a result of the apparently faulty system of police officers in charge of the City Jail came the escape of Will Francisco from its walls Friday night.

Francisco, though considered one of the most desperate prisoners in the jail, was detailed as a trusty and had access to tools. He made use of these and climbed through a flue. He then slid down a rope from the jail roof and escaped.

Nearly a year ago came the first demonstration of the poor care taken of the prisoners in the City Jail. A Mexican became violently insane and was confined in the dungeon. Evidently he was not well searched when locked up, as he set himself afire. He would have burned to death had it not been for the aid of other prisoners.

Changes were made in the jail, and for a time no other incidents that ever leaked out of the rigidly censured Police Station were made known. About three months ago an aged capitalist was sent to the Receiving Hospital for medical treatment. He was in a semi-conscious condition. A trusty bound up his head and he was thrown in a "drunk" cell. For three days he was allowed to remain there without further attention, and when discovered—as the "trusty" bookkeeper had lost track of him—was found to be in a serious condition. Careful aid finally saved him from ill effects from his imprisonment.

A week later a prisoner sent to the City Jail for medical treatment, as well as to be held for investigation, shared the same fate. He was lost in the tanks, and despite his appeal to "trusties," he was detained in jail for many days. He was finally located through mistake and released. His condition when liberated was serious.

When inquiry was made regarding these cases Chief of Police Auble answered that the system in the jail had been faulty and that he had made it better by ordering tags sent to the book-keeper of the jail with each prisoner. Nevertheless others suffered from the present system.

A few weeks ago a jailer was attacked by a prisoner, who had armed himself with a long knife, which he had gotten from the jail kitchen. After a desperate struggle, the prisoner was overpowered and sent back to the tanks. Had the crazed prisoner sought to attack patients in the Receiving Hospital, there would have been no one to restrain him.

Francisco was arrested in a desperate fight at the grounds of the Forepaugh-Sells Bros. circus, which was here about a month ago. He attempted to kill two officers, and in a fight with Detective McNamara, succeeded in inflicting an ugly wound on the officer's head.

Other policemen arrived, and prevented more serious trouble. Francisco was finally landed in the city prison and was sentenced to serve several months in jail.

By order of Jailer MacCaulley, Francisco was made a trusty in the stable department of the jail. The trusties in charge of the stables have access to the workshop, in which a variety of tools are at their disposal. They also have access to the jailers' office, and to the Receiving Hospital.

With the present system used by the police department the trusties are the nurses of patients in the Receiving Hospital. They do the janitors' work, they are allowed to go about the Police Station almost at will; they do the cooking, and the carpenter work, and, are allowed access to every part of the jail.

That some drunken prisoner or drug fiend trusty has not attacked helpless prisoners with surgical instruments from the Receiving Hospital or even attacked the patients themselves is a matter to be wondered at, as the authorities acknowledge, themselves.

Francisco secured ropes used for fire lines and tools from the carpenter shop to assist in making his escape. Despite the fact that these things are known to the police they are careless in handling the prisoners, as has been shown by past events. Many narrow escapes have been hidden from the public by the officers just as they tried to suppress the news of Francisco's escape.

Aztec Women Are Beautiful.

The feminine direct descendants of the famous Aztecs are tiny creatures, exquisitely formed and refined in feature. They carry the head with the up-bearing grace of the full-blooded Indian; their skins are not red, but a clear, smooth copper color that shines like gold in the sun; their hair is coarse and black as ebony, and they are decorated with bright feathers and gay ornaments. These women make the most wonderful pottery that comes to us from Mexico, for they have kept the old Aztec forms and decorations in their art, and they also weave wonderful baskets and do exquisite embroidery.—[Scott Valley (Cal.) TOPICS OF THE STAGE.

In the resumé of recent effective work here in Los Angeles no chronicler could afford to neglect the beautiful series of character studies that have been offered of late by George Barnum—studies as divergent as real men may be, yet each created in a consummate artistry that speaks a lifetime of preparation and an unusual amount of inherent genius.

Not all of these have been merely pleasing or idyllic. Leschaut is neither to admire or to emulate—yet the painting of a battle or a crime, if executed with technique and feeling, is a fair thing to gaze upon.

So in some of these parts we have seen the alchemy of Mr. Barnum's art burn away the material grossness, the meannesses, the sordid gossamers of vice which would have enveloped these beings of vice in real life, leaving to us—his audience—only great problems in the mathematics of mind, sections of sterilized iniquity—specimens of dissected souls.

However, in the present week Mr. Barnum has swung the pendulum across the moral arc, and has created a gentle, lovable, pathetic old man.

It is characteristic of great actors, as Mr. Barnum, to mingle to a real human element the abstract ideas of comedy and tragedy. In philosophic old men like Nathaniel Berry there is seldom a laugh which does not quiver upon a tear—seldom a tear that is not warmed and vapored away with a smile.

Only great actors catch this rare mark of the real human being.

To the little actor comedy is one thing and tragedy is another, and there is either unalloyed laughter or unrelieved gloom.

"Shore Acres" is not a great play. It is merely sweet and provincially interesting and quite harmless, but when vivified by such a portrayer as Mr. Barnum its central character is fit to stand alongside the giant personalities of the historic stage.

No man can see Mr. Barnum's Nathaniel Berry and not be better, at least in purpose, for his gentle vision. And this is all the more wonderful, since Mr. Barnum in propria persona is not a man to inspire gentleness or linger for a moment upon tender sentiments. Mr. Barnum has the whirlwind of the age in a frail body, and he has driven that body as a mad motorist would hurl a burning car, every moment on the third speed, taking the curves with two wheels in the air. Had he organic faults at all in his thin material structure, he would have blown himself into Nirvana long ago.

So it is a magnificent testimonial in itself that Mr. Barnum has pulled himself in, modulated the nervous ferocity of his voice, dimmed the glitter of eternal restlessness that lights his eyes and abated that anxious fury of walk and gesture that is so marked a Barnumian trait—has reborn them all, in fact, in that slow, dear, peaceful dawdler Nathaniel, keeper of the light and himself a pure light among restless, selfish humanity.

The pity is that Mr. Barnum's Nathaniel dies tonight. Mr. Blackwood is urging the pace with his long procession of new plays, and so no more of the kindly old grand-uncle, for tomorrow he relapses into a nervous melancholy, tense-lipped, irritable stage director—telling other people how to act, making beautiful productions, teasing the life out of scene-makers and stage hands and property men.

Though he is gone, sweet old Nathaniel will not be forgotten. His pure light will still be luminous beside many lofty-priced, tin-horn Syndicate players—and will equal in tender radiance the brilliance of the isolated stars who do come, at intervals, to brighten the local Syndicate stage.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

"Checkers," dramatization of the book of the same name, will appear at the Mason Operahouse tomorrow night. It is the opening attraction of the season.

The piece is by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., and since its initial appearance three seasons ago it has been dividing its time between New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

Hans Robert will play the title role. He will be supported by Dave Braham, Jane Kelton, Isabelle Parker and others.

"Lady Windermere's Fan," Oscar Wilde's fascinating drama of epigrams, will re-introduce Mary Van Buren at the Burbank Theater this afternoon.

The piece itself needs no recommendation. The cast has been well chosen, and a good production is promised.

Two very large parties have been arranged, as the Fraternal Brotherhood will be present on Tuesday, while the Elks will come in force on Thursday evening.

"Mistress Nell" will be the Belasco offering this week. This is the romantic play, with dashing Nell Gwynne as its heroine, in which Henrietta Crosman made a success in New York several years ago.

Amelia Gardner will have the chief part, which should be well suited to her vivacious talents.

Following this, the Belasco company will put on "Brother Officers," which will serve to introduce to the patrons of this house Harry Glazier, the newest recruit from other fields.

The programme at the Orpheum for the week commencing tomorrow evening will be headed by the Four Bards, acrobats of the first order.

James Thornton, famous as a monologist and as a writer of popular songs, will be another visitor. Willie Eckstein, pianist, is said to possess high artistic temperament, though still a boy not in his teens.

From the present bill will be held over DeHaven and Parker, the Three Roses, Adamini and Taylor and the French pantomime.

"Secrets of the Police," a rip-roaring melodrama with all types of European cut-throats as its chief characters of villainy, will disport itself in accustomed gallery-hissed savagery at the Grand this week.

Maurice Hageman's farce comedy, "A Crazy Idea," will find a place on the Hotchkiss boards this week.

George B. Howard will have the principal role, and the play will introduce the petite and pretty ingenue, Betty Jonson.

Richards and Pringle's minstrels have a week's engagement at the People's Theater, commencing tonight, and promise a first class entertainment of the joke and folk-music variety.

Elsewhere.

A new tragedy has just been written by Gabriele d'Annunzio, that prince of sybarites, most energetic of workers, and most changeable of men.

The title of the play is "More Than Love," and it will be produced in Rome at an early date. It is in two acts of an hour and twenty minutes each. It is an up-to-date romance, and those who have read it say it has intense dramatic situations, especially the night spent in the gambling den.

Yet it is reported that d'Annunzio has given up all idea of ever writing another line, and vows that the only good of life is to add something to man's material achievements. The great author has turned inventor and asserts that he has a scheme for a bicycle which doubles its speed and renders pneumatic tires useless. He is working all day in a hidden shed surrounded by furnaces and workmen bound to secrecy.

Burton Holmes, in speaking of the giving of his illustrated travelogues in London, relates an incident which illustrates one of the many difficulties which confront an American manager when making his first attempt upon the strongholds of the London public.

"Up to the time of our first London appearance," says Mr. Holmes, "all illustrated lectures were known there as 'lantern shows' and were looked down upon as soporific and boresome tortures by nearly every right-minded Englishman. My manager, Louis Francis Brown, feeling that we had something new and different to offer, immediately carried the war into the enemy's camp by instituting a campaign of advertising such as never had been seen in London since the days of the earlier Sousa invasion.

"He engaged Queen's Hall—which in local importance ranks with Carnegie Hall, New York; Symphony Hall, Boston, and the Auditorium in Chicago—for ten dates, and at once frightened the manager of that dignified abode of the muses by requesting permission to erect an electric sign at right angles to its imposing facade. As this was an idea which no one had heretofore had the temerity to harbor, the manager said he must refer it to his 'managing director.' After a day or two Mr. Brown asked for his answer. He was told that as it was 'something quite unexpected, you know,' the matter had been held over for a special meeting of the entire board of directors. Another few days elapsed and again Mr. Brown asked for his answer to this unheard of request. This time he got it, and it is the first and last time that I have ever known Mr. Brown to be at a loss for words in which to express himself. The answer was: 'I'm frightfully sorry, don't you know, but one of our principal stockholders on the board, a conservative old chap, objects most keenly to the electric sign, you know, because he is afraid it will make the hall too awfully conspicuous. So sorry.'"

The announcement that Richard Mansfield is to do "Peer Gynt" is the natural corollary to the earlier hint that he was planning an excursion into Ibsen. Mansfield is a poet-actor, and Ibsen, though in most of his other plays a pathologist and pessimist, is in "Peer Gynt" a poet and an optimist. It is one of the all-world dramas in the same sense as is "Faust," which it in some respects resembles.

"Peer Gynt" is the story of a life threatened with ruin by selfishness, saved by love. Peer is a Norwegian youth with a fantastic imagination and singular bravado, who has dreams of no lesser destiny for himself than a kaiserdom. His imagination has a Midas-gift, which makes a success of all he attempts. At first he only ventures the spinning of harmless lies about his own adventures, which he embroiders out of the lore of the mountains, as a jest with his mother, and to enjoy the wonder and applause of the peasants. Women are no less susceptible to the influence of his cleverness. But when his mother dies he seizes his emancipation to go on his world conquest. Every material success is his; he becomes a plutocrat and a power; sycophants gather as his riches multiply, but he finds no sincerity in these false friends and no permanence in his sordid wealth. They all dissolve and maturity is upon him without any consolation of rectitude. He returns to mountains of the north and finds there the woman who years before offered him the priceless love of a pure heart. She has been faithful to her love for him, her whole life long, and in her heart he finds his true haven and heaven. "Here was my kaiserdom!"

This, briefly, is the story of Peer Gynt. It is embroidered in tender sentiment, frequently with romping humor and at times with a fantastic introduction of the supernatural. This last is represented by two allegorical figures. One is the sordid Troll-king, or king goblin, a sort of fairy Mephistopheles, who teaches, "To thyself be enough," that is, realize yourself by the utter satisfaction of your own will, a selfish, self-centered point of view which Peer has unknowingly assumed. The other is the spirit of final accounting, or angel of death, who appears as a voice, then as a passenger aboard ship, and finally as the button moulder with his ladle. This spirit urges Peer to "go roundabout" instead of ruthlessly and inconsiderately straight through, and learn to "be thyself," and try to learn his duty, instead of to gratify his will.

Some Gold Mines.

Probably "A Chinese Honeymoon" made more money than any other musical comedy. It ran for two years and eight months, and at the end of that period the author estimated its remaining value at £54,000. On the London production alone the profit reached six figures, and there were besides eight provincial, American, European and South African companies playing the piece on tour.

ADOLFO PACINI.

Pacini is a new discovery of Impresario Lambardi, and will make his first appearance in America during our grand opera season. He is a young man, and is said to be an intelligent actor, with possession of a brilliant baritone voice on the style of Taurino Parvis, who last appeared here as a principal in the Conried production of "Lucia."

WENZEL KOPTA.

Mr. Kopta is about to commence his chamber concerts. Such a venture into the field of absolute music is always attended with more or less risk, but Mr. Kopta believes that the conditions warrant the innovation. Personally, he is an artist of the highest standing, and is a virtuoso of international reputation.

The Musical World.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

They say that Emilio de Gogorza is of Cuban parentage, born in the United States and educated in France. His singing indicates the very cosmopolitanism that has characterized his whole life.

Everybody who loves good music should know that Gogorza is going to sing here on Tuesday night. Last year he came here with Mme. Eames, in the eminent company of Joseph Hollman—himself a very modest and unknown artist. But he swept the house before him, and stars and all considered, there was little doubt at the end of the concert as to who had been the genuine favorite.

Most people who heard Gogorza will tell you that he had a wonderful voice, and is a great artist. Some of the critics said so. The statement is half true and half an emotional mistake, for Gogorza has not a wonderful voice, but his mastery of it is so consummate, and the intellectual brilliance and variety of his work is so great that he seems to have all the voices, and the ravishing qualities of a Caruso.

Gogorza is exactly the sort of singer that Jean de Reszke was. De Reszke was a tenor of no phenomenal throat gifts nor especially exalted range, but like the man with few talents, he built upon these with the care and precision and inspiration of true genius, and people hailed him for the greatest tenor of his time. So, while Caruso pours his warm golden notes in a tropic exuberance that quite melts the unsuspecting auditor's heart, one could not conceive this heaven-gifted Italian doing Raoul or Faust half as seriously as De Reszke, and as for Siegfried or Tristan—in which De Reszke made genuine history—Caruso cannot be seen even by the eyes of a worshiper.

There is no baritone in the world today who is a greater artist than Gogorza. Happy to say, he is receiving some of his dues, for he has just come from a tremendous popular success at the Worcester Festival—the huge jury-trial in which a serious musical populace sits year after year in calm judgment upon new singers and new compositions.

In what you will, Gogorza is a master. He sang us last year the "Pagliacci" prologue, a group of French airs and the exquisite old English "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes"—things as divergent as the "Lohengrin" prologue and the "Lucia" sextette—and in each of them he was heartfelt, melodious perfection.

Tuesday night he will offer: "Caro mio ben" (L. Giordani;) "Adieu chere Louise" (A. Monsigny;) "The Pretty Creature" (J. Storace;) "The Viking's Daughter" (A. Coring-Thomas;) "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" (Old English;) "Mother o' Mine" (F. Tours;) "The Lark Now Leaves Its Wat'ry Nest" (Horatio Parker;) prologue from "Pagliacci" (R. Leoncavallo;) "Lenz" (Eugen Hildach;) "Es blinkt der Thau" (Rubinstein;) "Cacilie" (Richard Strauss;) "Le Gardeur de Chevres" (E. Lenormand;) "Malgre Moi" (G. Pfeiffer;) "Le Marriage des Roses" (Cesar Franck;) "Le Plongour" (Ch. Widor;) "La Partida" (F. M. Alvarez;) "El Celoso" (F. M. Alvarez;) "Largo al Factotum" (Rossini.)

OSSIP GABRILOWITCH.

Three years ago, this distinguished artist—who will be the first visiting instrumentalist of prominence this year—made an American concert tour in which he played from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast, with orchestras, clubs and other organizations. Gabrilowitch comes of a distinguished family, and, like all high-class Russians, is a very well educated man. Not only has he made his name famous as a pianist, but it recently developed that he is possessed of exceptional talents as an orchestral conductor. He is clever with the brush, having painted a very creditable portrait of the late Anton Rubinstein. His father is remarkable for his legal talents, occupying one of the most important places on the bench of Russia.

"THE SUGAR QUEEN."

This is what the habitues of the Folies Bergeres call her, though out in California her old friends still know her only as Marion Winchester.

Speculation.

The delight of the approaching grand opera is at present speculative.

We are about to explore a field of rich voices; we are certain to pick out a few gems; every one of us is anxious to shout "I saw it first!"

None of these Berry-Lambardi principals are known in the United States. Whisperings of great accomplishments have come up about several of them, but at the opening night—which is not so very far away, now—there will be a perfect fever of anticipation in the orchestra, and doubtless many anticipatory thrills in the boxes.

It is even more delightful than if Conried's star-cluster were to drop down among us. Were any of Conried's people to sing, we would diagram their cadenzas, plot out their acting and even analyze their tone-qualities—all before the curtain rose, or before the world-famous and equally-understood director found his way—amid proper and expected applause—to the center of the orchestra. Such would be the calm joy of certainty; here we confront the exquisite, spine-tickling perturbation of the unknown.

It is from such as these that Caruso came, you know. Conried's greatest stroke of genius lay in his abiding faith in the voice-making qualities of the Italian common people. And—tradition says—when he came to sit upon the throne of Grau, he hied himself not to the centers of art or the famous conservatories, but to the poor Italian quarter, and there patiently sought the name the people secretly held up as the title of their musical idol. A press agent fixed it up that a bootblack finally gave him the magic word, "Caruso," but however that may be, Caruso was certainly unknown to the world until Conried patiently ferreted him out and made him stand forth, the most wonderful-voiced tenor of modern times. A few successful European engagements and one or two London seasons had been put behind the tenor's back, and he was working patiently and industriously, as are these Lambardi folk for the musical education of Mexico and South America.

Tetrazzini, who will trill from the Metropolitan stage this year, is another genius out of Mexico.

The pool is open for a harmless artistic gamble on our probabilities.

Miss Donnell's Concert.

Miss Blanche Donnell will be heard in concert Friday evening at Gamut Hall. For the past five years Miss Donnell has been training her excellent soprano voice in the East, and this will be her first appearance since her return. She will be assisted by Mrs. Blanche Rogers-Lott, pianist, and Herr Oskar Seiling, violinist.

Kopta and Von Stein.

Wenzel Kopta and Heinrich von Stein, well-known violinist and pianist, will be heard in concert Saturday evening at Gamut Hall.

Mr. Kopta will play Tartini's "Devil's Trill," a Vieuxtemps ballade and polonaise, Paganini's "Witches' Dance" and short numbers by Tschaikowsky, Spies, Schumann and Kontski.

Mr. von Stein will accompany Mr. Kopta, and will be heard alone in Weber's "Perpetuum Mobile," a Chopin valse and a Schanoeaka etude.

The "Sugar Queen."

Such is the European title of a pretty California girl, Marion Winchester.

She is still young, but in the vaudevilles of Europe has had the experience of a veteran. The details of the little story which gave her this "nom de guerre" she has never told, but all the play-goers of the British capital—where this graceful little lady is now dancing at the Gaiety—know that not long after the present century came in she took a "flyer" in sugar, which netted her more than $100,000.

As her jewels are worth twice that amount, she can well afford her annual trip back to the Pacific Coast.

The better part of last summer she spent near Pasadena.

MR. NEILSON'S ART EXHIBIT.

The twenty-six water colors that C. P. Neilson has on view at Steckel's gallery may be seen till the evening of the 28th. The gallery will be open on Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

This interesting little collection of pictures is so quiet in its effect that its full and abiding charm does not make itself felt at once. None of the pictures jump out at you. All seem a part of the general harmony.

In this day of flamboyant art, which often shrieks for attention like a hawker in the market place, such sure and self-contained painting as Mr. Neilsons' is a joy forever. It has the restful distinction of the poise of a grand dame when contrasted with the uneasy fidgeting of a fishwife. Its message is gently spoken, always grammatically correct, with here and there an agreeable note of accent. It has great refinement, yet it is by no means weak. It is pleasant to linger with and pleasant to remember when you have left it.

I spoke of these pictures of Mr. Neilson's at some length two weeks ago, but I have returned to look at them again and again since then, and with ever-increasing pleasure. They will richly repay earnest study.

The Little Corner.

Artemisia, the bungalow where the Sign of the Sagebrush swings, has been known to Angelefios for some years. We knew that we could get books artistically bound there, and that the big bungalow, with its wide verandas, was a very pleasant place to linger in.

Recently, however, Artemisia added a book-stand and a picture gallery unto itself. The stand holds autographed books by Los Angeles writers, the gallery is hung with pictures by our home painters. Together, the table and the gallery are known as the Little Corner of Local Art. The pictures and the books are both good of their kind, for the motto of the Little Corner is "The best of the best."

Idah Meacham Strobridge, who is mistress of Artemisia, has shown excellent judgment in picking out Norman St. Clair to be the first painter to have a "one man" show at the Little Corner, for according to such competent authority as Elmer Wachtel, Mr. St. Clair has painted at least one masterpiece of water color at Laguna this summer. Mr. Wachtel declares, indeed, that it is one of the best water colors he has ever seen anywhere. This picture is "The Charmed Shore."

Seven of the thirty pictures from Mr. St. Clair's brush have already been sold. One of them, "Arroyo Pastures," was bought by the Cnoc Tara of Berkeley, the association of girl students who meet for fellowship in the building so generously donated them by 10,000 club women of California. This picture will be shown at the Ebell Clubhouse in November, when the district Federation of Women's Clubs meets there. Then it goes to Berkeley, to give constant pleasure to the hundreds of young women at Cnoc Tara. A happy fate for any picture.

Mr. St. Clair's water colors will remain at the Little Corner of Local Art, No. 231 East Avenue Forty-one, till the evening of the 28th of October. It is open to the public every day and evening. On Sundays it will be open from 2 to 4 p.m.

Coming exhibitions at the Little Corner are Hector Alliat's Beaumont prints, recent California landscapes by Carl Oscar Borg, and Lillian Drain's collection of monotypes.

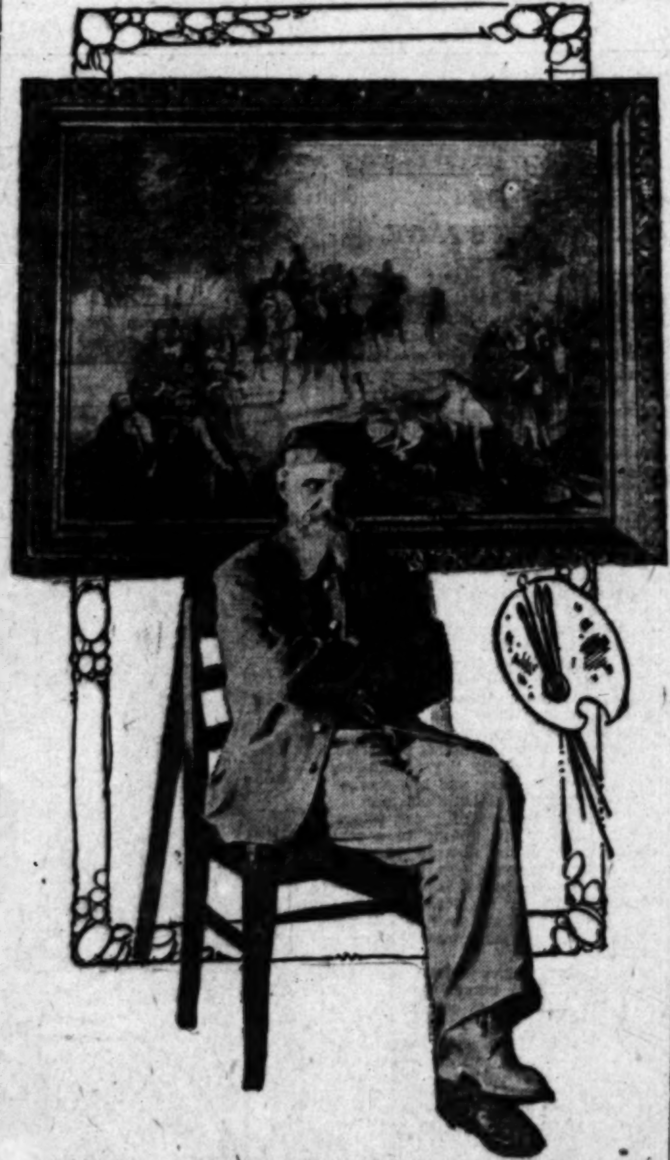
ART NOTES.

The ceremony of unveiling the statue of George Washington, erected at Budapest, took place on September 16. When, a few years ago, a statue of Kossuth was erected in Cleveland, Hungarian citizens of the United States started a monument to raise the money for a Washington statue in Budapest. The call for subscriptions met with a hearty response, and the statue recently unveiled is the result.

Karl Hummel, the veteran landscape painter, who recently died abroad, was the son of the musician, Johann Nepomuk Hummel, and was born in Weimar in 1821. After traveling with his father in England, he returned to Leipzig to assist Preller in his great series from the Odyssey. Hummel was an idealist in his landscapes, which became popular and are known in most of the German galleries.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of the city of New York has, through one of its members, authorized the offer of a prize of $500 for the best design for a bronze drinking fountain. The competition is open without restriction to all architects, sculptors, modelers and decorative designers who comply with the society's requirements.

SOLDIERS' HOME VETERAN'S STRIKING CANVAS.



The remarkable painting pictured above—pronounced remarkable by those who have seen it—is the handiwork of Prof. Martin Collin, a war veteran and inmate of the Soldiers' Home, who has devoted considerable time to it, and certainly great talent as well. The canvas is in the home of Gov. O. H. LaGrange. The artist depicts the victorious return of Arminius and his German tribe of Cherusie after the battle of Teutoburg Forest, when Quintilius Varus and his Roman legions were annihilated. The canvas is 50x36 inches, and gives room for the grouping of many figures, which is skillfully done.

The Return to Nature.

Oh, Nature, take me home, and henceforth keep!
Laugh out at me with all thy mirthful streams,
To break the tenor of dull-hearted dreams;
From ambush in a waving thicket leap,
And startle with a song as past I creep;
Or speed me by invisible wild-teams
That drive through forests and rough mountain-seams,
And furrow dark the forehead of the deep.

Nay, do thou more for me, great griefless friend!
Hurt to the core, without the gift to weep,
Back from man's world to thine I groping tend;
Now let thy clods unkindled smoothly sweep
This cooling clod—my heart; then do thou bend,
Uplift, and in bright calm my spirit steep.

Mr. Jackson's Exhibit.

Even the most sanguine and most far-sighted of the art prophets never expected to see Los Angeles, at this early date, with three exhibitions of pictures by local painters on its hands at one and the same time. Yet this is what we are having today, and the boom in art (if one may be allowed to use such a vulgar term) seems to be in a fair way to rival the boom in real estate. Nor is there any apparent danger of a slump—still speaking vulgarly.

In all seriousness, this rapidly growing interest in art and art matters is most encouraging—it shows that we have become aware of the need of beauty in our daily lives. Men and women whose souls are awake cannot live healthily on bread alone. The spirit has its inexorable demands, and their gratification is as necessary—nay, more so—as the response to the body's clamorings. Our senses, as a rule, have not as yet been surfeited with too much of beauty. In all conscience, then, let us foster their craving for it, and let us satisfy it all we can.

Norman St. Clair's water colors are still to be seen at No. 231 East Avenue Forty-one; C. P. Neilson's are still at the Steckel gallery, on Broadway. Both these interesting collections have already been reviewed in Art and Artists. Martin J. Jackson's oils and water colors are at the Blanchard, where they will remain for one week longer. The gallery wil be open on next Wednesday evening from 8 to 10, and on Sundays from 2 to 5.

The first impression of Mr. Jackson's exhibit is that he has shown too many pictures. There are sixty-four in all. If half of these had been rigidly excluded, his show would have gained much in strength and beauty. As it is, it looks a trifle unwieldy in size, especially as almost all the pictures hung are small ones. Mr. Jackson should become his own severest critic, and thus ease the burden of the professional fault-finder.

However, as picking flaws, though a very easy task, is also a sadly thankless one, I shall shirk it today. Appreciation, after all, is much pleasanter, almost as easy, and often much more helpful to everybody concerned.

Mr. Jackson, then, shows a goodly number of well-painted canvases that have much charm of color and feeling. I can mention only a few of those that pleased me. One of the very best is "A Flurry of Snow," in which the feeling of early winter is caught with much truth. The gray sky is bleak and cold, and so is the sodden field, with its rustling corn shocks, that stretches toward the horizon.

"A Sultry Morning," is another picture, a very small one, which contains much of nature and some excellent painting. Its elements are simple, a sloping bit of land, a torrid sky, and a few houses huddled toward the left—but they are combined with skill and feeling, and they make an unusually good picture. The heavy heat that broods over the scene is unmistakable.

"A Peasant's Home Near Brussels" is quiet in effect, with the browns and grays of the foliage in the foreground very well rendered. It is refined and delicate in technique. "The End of Winter" is a bit of moonlight over yellowish-brown marshes. It is well done, the moonlit air being vibrant and truthful.

Mr. Jackson's Laguna water colors are by far the strongest he has yet done. "Low Tide, Laguna Beach," has a fine play of color in the foreground; the rocks are green and mossy; a deep purple shadow is flung across one corner of the picture. "Late Afternoon" gives a strong effect of sunlight on the Laguna rocks.

"Harmony" is a garden scene, a dainty and decorative bit of painting in which some flaming cannas are the highest note of color. "Autumn," a water color that Mr. Jackson has shown here before, is full of tenderness, both as to color and sentiment.

On the whole, Mr. Jackson shows some good work in this exhibit—but he should learn to eliminate.

Monday, Miss Hazel Bryson was a charming young bride. Daughter of a pioneer family, and talented, she was an interesting addition to the [illegible] of young matrons when she became Mrs. George Ragland. In the evening of the same day, Will Batchelder entertained the bridal party of Miss Emma Dryden and Eugene Bohringer, whose wedding took place on Wednesday evening.

Tuesday, one of the delightful events was a musicale given by Mrs. I. N. Van Nuys in compliment to Mrs. Frank P. Flint and Mrs. A. L. Danskin, who left yesterday for Washington. Mrs. Baker P. Lee was hostess Tuesday at a reception given for the [illegible] of Christ Church. Mrs. [illegible] Randall of Monmouth avenue opened her home for a card party given by the Sunshine Society on Tuesday afternoon. Miss Amy Frink and [illegible] A. Murphy of this city were married at Redlands the same day.

Wednesday, Miss Emma Dryden and Eugene Bohringer were married at a pretty church ceremony in St. John's before a large company of guests. Mrs. [illegible] E. Call of Beacon street entertained in the afternoon with a buffet luncheon and bridge party for Mrs. Frank P. Flint and Mrs. Danskin. That afternoon, Mrs. Albert Crutcher of West Adams street was hostess at a luncheon and bridge party, entertaining as guests a few women friends in the neighborhood. Miss Coulter's Wedding.

Much interest centers about the wedding of Miss Frances Coulter and Dr. R. P. McReynolds of Philadelphia, which is to take place some time in November. Miss Coulter belongs to a family long associated with the good of Los Angeles. Her father, Rev. B. F. Coulter is proprietor of the Coulter Dry Goods store and pastor of the Broadway Christian Church. He and his wife have always been most generous in their dispensation of charity along worthy lines. Though quiet about it, hundreds of people have been benefited through their kindness. Miss Coulter herself is a charming and bright girl, and a favorite among all who know her. Dr. McReynolds is prominent in medical circles of Philadelphia, and as his wife, Miss Coulter will be in a delightful position in Philadelphia society.

MISS MARGARET WOOLLACOTT,
who will be formally brought out at a large ball to be given Thursday evening.

The pretty girls here pictured today are the girls whom Miss Coulter has chosen to act as her attendants. Miss Inez Moore is a cousin of Miss Coulter's, and she is to be the maid of honor. The other girls are all intimate friends, and most of them, if not native daughters, like the bride-elect, have at least resided here a long time. The other members of the bridal party are: Misses Adele Brodtbeck, Eva Elizbeth Keating, Mary Chapman, Anna Chapman, Charlene Coulter, Elsie Laux, Alice Harpham, Bertha Pollard and Inez Moore. The wedding is to be an afternoon affair and will take place in the Broadway Christian Church, in which Mrs. John V. Posey, formerly Miss Belle Coulter, was also married.

S.P.C.A. Ball.

Those in charge of the ball to be given for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals on November 3 at Kramer's Hall are enthusiastic over the assured success, from a social stand point, of the affair.

Of course, the object of the function is to raise money in order that the society may have a rescue home for animals. To care for broken-down horses and cruelly-treated animals and to look after and obtain charge of the dogs which the "pound" now looks after.

Mrs. W. J. Variel, the president of the society, is at the head of affairs and is energetic in her efforts. She is, of course, assisted by the other officers, who include: Mrs. A. W. Remnitz, vice-president; Mrs. A. C. Morton, treasurer; Mrs. L. E. Gehse, chairman, and Mrs. E. L. Powell, assistant. Count Boris de Lodnonier is in charge of the ball and dance itself, and Mrs. William John Scholl has arranged a delightful musical programme, to be contributed to by some of the best artists in town.

The programme is as follows: Violin solo, "Berceuse" (Jocelyn,) E. C. Kammermeyer and orchestra; address by Rev. Burt Estes Howard; group of songs, (a) "Ich Lieb Dich;" (b) "Morgenthau;" (c) "Jaegerlied" (Grieg,) Miss Estelle Heartt; vocal, "Reveries" (Storch,) Euterpean Quartette, Messrs. Dupuy, Nay, Zinnamon and Wallace; harp solos, (a) "Sur le Rive de la Mer" (Oberthur;) impromptu, Opus 17; (b) "Mazurka" (Schuecker,) Miss Joanna Kinsinger; grand duett, from opera "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni,) Miss Belle Hamburger and Domenico Russo; vocal, "Star of Love" (Dudley Buck,) Euterpean Quartette. Henry Edmond Earl and Mr. Yubell are accompanists. This is really Miss Hamburger's first public appearance, and it is reported that she is possessed of a brilliant soprano. Miss Kinsinger of Cincinnatti, the harpist, is a new arrival here, but her exquisite harp tones and expression in playing have already won admiration for her work.

Women who are acting as patronesses of this affair are: Mmes. E. T. Stimson, W. W. D. Turner, R. L. Horton, N. B. Blackstone, H. W. Hellman, F. W. Braun, Mary Briggs, Willoughby Rodman, W. J. Variel, Granville MacGowan, William John Scholl, W. W. Neuer, James T. Fitzgerald, Emily Wilson, E. P. Thom, Cora J. Miller, H. J. Kramer, Egelhoff-Rundell, and Misses Evelyn Hamburger, Mary O'Donoughue, Gwendolyn Overton, Mae Prentiss, Anabel Owen, Katherine Kurtz, Verna Kerchevell and Lillian Fletcher.

Pearl Wedding Anniversary.

An enjoyable reunion dinner was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Barker, No. 324 California street, in honor of their pearl wedding anniversary, and of the seventy-ninth birthday of the "bride's" father, A. J. McIlvain. The decorations were ferns and pink and white carnations. Those gathered around the table (four generations being represented) were: A. J. McIlvain, Mr. and Mrs. William Barker, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Carnes, Miss May Barker, Mrs. E. B. McCormick, Miss Frances McIlvain, Miss Frances Carnes, Masters Andrew and Harry Barker, Miss Mayme Schoenholtz and F. Gansert.

Anderson-Hart Nuptials.

Miss Susie May Anderson and Woodford Bushnell Hart were united at a pretty marriage ceremony on Thursday evening, Rev. Burt Estes Howard officiating. The marriage took place at the home of Mrs. M. G. Lobdell of No. 847 Menlo avenue, and was witnessed by a company of about fifty friends.

The entire home was garlanded with greenery and pink and white cosmos nodded from baskets and jars in pleasing contrast with the background of greens. The couple stood before a bank of greens starred with fresh blossoms and in the dining-room yellow cosmos and yellow shaded candelabra were combined with satin ribbons in an artistic decorative scheme.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. Harriett L. Anderson of Boston and has been on a visit here for the past year and a half, and during that time met the groom. Her brunette beauty was becomingly gowned in white satin and lace and she carried bride roses. The wedding veil was of exquisite lace, an heirloom in the family and was caught with a wreath of orange blossoms.

An orchestra on the second floor furnished bridal music and Miss Louise Amsbury played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the couple approached the altar and Mendelssohn's at the close of the ceremony. Mrs. Elizabeth K. Wuerker sang during the ceremony. After the wedding supper the guests enjoyed a merry dance. The groom is a grandson of Mrs. W. D. Whipple of the Garvanza Villa and is a native of California. He is connected with a well-known wholesale firm, and has lived here all his life. The bride's going away gown was of dark brown doe cloth with coat, hat and gloves to match.

Mr. Hart and his charming bride have gone up the coast on their wedding journey and on their return will be at home at No. 1403 West Eleventh street, until their new home is completed.

Double Birthday Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Campbell of "Vista Del Valle," Hollywood, opened their pretty home on Thursday evening, giving a jolly birthday dinner for Mrs. Campbell's sister, Mrs. J. E. Brada, and also for C. O. Peyton, whose birthday anniversary came on the same day. Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Valentine acted as hostesses, and it was they who planned the pretty surprise.

The home was decorated throughout with roses and chrysanthemums and after the guests had all gathered the doors into the dining-room were thrown open disclosing the table shining with lights and bearing two gorgeous cakes covered with tiny tapers in pink. A great basket of nodding pink chrysanthemums occupied the center of the table. Pink ribbons reached from the center to each place and place cards, dainty hand-painted affairs, each adorned with a fancy appropriate to the owner.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Brada, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. Beamer of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Ames, Mr. and Mrs. J. Esdon Beamer, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Eason, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, Miss Ruth Rosseau, Miss Campbell, C. Dealer and H. L. Woten. Mr. Beamer of San Francisco sang, and Mrs. Brada gave interesting readings and Esdon Beamer delighted the company with his exquisitely rendered old-fashioned violin music.

Honors Miss Hansen.

In honor of her cousin, Miss Laura Hansen, who is visiting here, Miss Florence Osborn entertained with a musicale and informal evening on Thursday at her home, No. 2703 Raymond avenue. Later supper was served from long tables bedecked with pink chrysanthemums and ferns.

Besides the guest of honor and hostess guests were: Misses Juana Creighton, Marjory Menafee, Florence Clark, Ruth Baumgartner, Grace Whitesell, Ruth ClinkScales, Florence Wheelan, and Messrs. Aubrey Austin, Ransom Trippett, Clarence Whitesell, Harvy Gsell, Thomas Froelich, Robert Marmount, Newton Foster, Wells Couch, A. L. Markwell, Sidney Alden and Harry Wagner.

They have been visiting all the cities of interest and have found friends in nearly every place. They will remain in New York about three weeks longer.

This establishment enters upon its second year with a confidence born of success.

FOR all our friends who availed themselves of anniversary week to look through the establishment, and for the many kind words they said, we feel deeply gratified. It has enthused us with new vigor. We are taking up the work of another year with a feeling of new strength in the position this institution holds in the community; that its methods and its policy have met with the approval of the public.

In the selection of the stock, the peculiar demands of our patrons and a high regard for quality have been the governing factors, and in its selling we adhere to one price and one price only, with absolutely no deviation. Edward J. Nally, who has risen to the position of vice-president and director of the $100,000,000 Postal Telegraph Company, at the age of 15 was a telegraph messenger boy.

W. Morgan Shuster, the young Washington lawyer who has been appointed by the President a member of the Philippine Commission, is just past 29 years of age. His appointment carries with it a salary of $15,000. Mr. Shuster was formerly stenographer in one of the departments in Washington.

Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria is a big, bearded man of 45, and was elected ruler of stormy Bulgaria in 1887. His consuming ambition is to become King, but despite his affability his reign is not popular and he lives in constant dread of assassination.

Bishop Henry M. Turner of the African Methodist Episcopal Church entertains and occasionally expresses somewhat original views. One of his recent utterances is that "lynchings, burnings and the murder of negroes here are plagues God is inflicting on the race to drive it to Africa, where it can build up a great country."

Osuke Hibi and Hironuchi Shugio, two Japanese merchants, are in New York City looking over the ground with a view to establishing a Japanese department store. Mr. Hibi is the head of the Mitsugoshi store in Tokio, in comparison with which New York stores are but mushroom enterprises, for the Mitsugoshi was established more than 200 years ago in the city of Tokio.

William Gowdy, a nephew of John K. Gowdy, formerly Consul-General to Paris, is a candidate for County Assessor in Rushville, Ind. Democratic leaders questioned his eligibility, charging that he had not been a freeholder for four years, as required by law. Young Gowdy, however, proved that during the period named he had owned half a lot in the Rushville Cemetery, and Atty.-Gen. Miller has decided that the possession of "six feet of earth" constitutes eligibility in the eye of the law.

Charles E. Hughes is the only Republican to be nominated for Governor by the Republican party in New York, since its organization fifty years ago, who had not previously held public office. Edwin D. Morgan, Reuben E. Fenton, John A. Dix, Alonzo B. Cornell, Levi P. Morton, Frank S. Black, Theodore Roosevelt, Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., and Frank W. Higgins had all occupied public posts before they were nominated for Governor.

IN THE BIG INDUSTRIES.

New Kansas Cotton Mills.

The work of installing thirty-five carloads of machinery in the plant of the Kansas City Cotton Mills Company, has commenced. Ten carloads more of manufacturing machinery are to be added as soon as that to be installed how is put into working order and more room provided. It is estimated that it will take three months to get the machinery into running order. When fully equipped the mill is to have 10,000 spindles. It will give employment to 250 persons and will convert 5,600,000 pounds of cotton into fabrics yearly. The machinery now being installed converts the crude product into duck cloth. When all the machinery is here it will have cost $150,000. A 600-horsepower engine is to be put into the plant.

A Future Iron Famine.

A correspondent of a London paper says, regarding the increasing use of iron:

"While iron rules." But what of the world without iron which is soon to come? The world is careless of its resources, and we are using up iron at a prodigious rate. New uses are ever being found for it. Our modern buildings are essentially of iron. Iron has largely displaced wood as a fencing material, and in Amreica they are using steel railway sleepers. Everywhere the world is demanding new railways, bridges, engines, machinery, as civilization widens its borders. And while we have this ever-increasing demand to meet, the end of the world's iron ore resources is actually in sight Even American iron ore may be exhausted in thirty years. The cream of the great lake deposits has been skimmed. Some authorities put the total American workable deposits as low as 1,100,000,000 tons. As she is using up about 25,000,000 tons per annum, that gives a life of thirty years or so. The estimate of deposits may be pessimistic, but consumption will certainly not pause at 35,000,000 tons per annum. It is more than probable, then, that in the lifetime of many young people who read these lines America will be without native iron. The ore deposits of Europe are in similar danger of depletion. For a time resort may be had to Asian resources, but Japan is awake and China is awakening, and Asia will probably herself need what iron she has. It is likely that in about thirty years' time will be witnessed a great appreciation of iron prices, leading to an iron famine.

Cheap Aluminum Wanted.

The successor of iron is believed to be aluminum, of which the world contains an enormous quantity. Combined with silicon and oxygen, it is present in felspar and all the older rocks, and also in clays, marls, and slates. It is already produced on a commercial scale, and some day we shall learn how to separate the metal cheaply. When that is done, iron will no longer be needed, even if iron be available, for aluminum has all its good points, and none of its bad ones. Aluminum is exceedingly light, its specific gravity being only 2.6, against iron's 7.8. Yet its strength is great, and it does not readily corrode. The man who discovers the secret of cheap aluminum will earn the gratitude of the world. It may be added that he will not receive it.

Glass from Quartz Rock.

In the Allegheny Mountains there are cliffs composed of almost solid quartz rock. These cliffs were considered practically worthless until it was discovered that glass could be made—and very cheaply—from quartz rock.

It has been known for years that coffins, tombstones, bricks, tilings and similar articles could be made of glass. Nearly ten years ago experiments showed that railroad ties which were almost indestructible could be manufactured from glass.

Now that a process has been discovered for utilizing these cliffs, it is claimed that glass manufacturers will be able to extend their field of operations. There are even some enthusiasts who predict that the time will come when people will live in houses made of glass bricks, walk on floors made of glass tilings, sit in glass chairs, sleep in glass beds and be buried in glass coffins.

By-products of Packing-houses.

Each large packing establishment now has its long list of by-products. The products of the gray brain matter of calves are employed in affections of the nervous system, such as nervous debility, nervous exhaustion, St. Vitus' dance, mental disorder and insanity.

The blood of the slaughtered animals is congealed and manufactured into buttons, and is also utilized in the production of albumen for the use of the calico printer, the sugar refiner, the tanner and others.

The bones are used for a score of different purposes, being manufactured into knife and toothbrush handles, chessmen, combs, backs of brushes, mouthpieces of pipes, and various other articles. Black hoofs are used in the manufacture of cyanide of potassium for gold extraction, and are also ground up to make fertilizer for florists, grape growers and others.

Among the other articles manufactured out of the former waste products of theabattoirs are glue, flypaper, sandpaper, gelatine, isinglass, curled hair, bristles, wool felt, hair felt, laundry soap, soap powders, glycerine, ammonia, bone meal, pepsin, poultry food, neat's foot oil and a score of other products. The annual value of the by-products of the packing industry, all of which are manufactured out of what was considered a waste material thirty years ago, is approximately $200,000,000.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Dr. J. K. McLean, president of the Pacific Theological Seminary at Berkeley and a member of the State Board of Charities, has decided to make an eight months' trip to Europe and while there will visit all of the charitable and penal institutions of the various European powers, making a report on his return on his findings.

John Segalos, hero of the Valencia wreck, will probably receive the Carnegie hero medal. For the last five weeks George A. Campsey, special agent for the Carnegie hero fund commission, has been in Seattle and at the scene of the wreck investigating the Greek's act. Mr. Campsey's report to the commission was sent off several days ago, and upon their action depends the award. His report was a voluminous document, consisting of 50,000 words.

Mrs. May E. Olive, a former Sacramento resident, who was living in San Francisco last April and lost all her property by the conflagration, is now on her way to New York, en route to Devonshire, England, having heard that an uncle there recently died and bequeathed her $100,000. Mrs. Olive has been living in Oakland since the San Francisco earthquake and fire.

Rufus P. Jennings, chairman of the California Promotion Committee, has returned to San Francisco after five weeks' sojourn in the East. Most of his time was spent in New York City, where he established the eastern bureau of the committee, and, en route to California, he visited Washington, Chicago and other cities. While in New York arrangements were made for illustrated lectures on California by Colvin B. Brown, manager of the eastern bureau, and will be of great value.

Prof. Jerome B. Lanfield of the University of California, who, the dispatches announce, is to marry a Russian Princess, went abroad early in the summer, intending to make a voyage down the Danube and to visit the principal cities of Central Europe. He writes to a San Francisco friend that he hopes to introduce the Princess as his wife to his many friends in that city.

MEN AND THINGS OVER THE SEAS.

Mrs. Arthur Paget Rewarded.

For her heroism in enduring prolonged and intense suffering, King Edward has rewarded Mrs. Arthur Paget, Mrs. Paran Stevens' daughter, with a title and henceforth she is Lady Paget.

"She deserves the Victoria cross," said his majesty when Lady Paget was recovering.

But he could not give her that, so he has decorated her vicariously. He has made her husband Knight of the Victorian Order. There are no less than six Lady Pagets now, and as it is inadmissible to use Christian names in addressing, the opportunities for confusion are numberless.

Anarchism in Spain.

Count Romanones, the minister of justice in Spain, officially announces that he will submit to the Cortes when it next reassembles a bill for the enactment of a law providing for severe punishment of what may be described as theoretical anarchism. Police authorities all over the world, save, perhaps, in Russia, have been hampered until now by the difficulty of dealing with those who are engaged in the propagation of the creed which drives fanatics and mentally unbalanced individuals to perpetrate those barbarous outrages which have won so much popular abhorrence for this particular cult of crime. The authorities, as a rule, are obliged to wait until the outrage has been perpetrated before acting, or at any rate to obtain some positive proof that it is about to occur by means of explosives or documentary evidence found on the prisoner. But they have no way of getting at those who incited the deeds, such as that which cost the lives of a number of people at Madrid on the occasion of the wedding of the young King and Queen of Spain.

Tuberculosis in Germany.

The returns of the German National Congress of Tuberculosis show that there has been a decrease of 38 per cent. in the deaths from tuberculosis since 1875, while the sanatoria have restored to health and to their work 34 per cent. of the persons treated in them. During 1905 no fewer than 26,621 persons coming under the workmen's insurance act were treated in the sanatoria. From 1901 to 1905 the insurance companies of Germany have expended $9,246,350 in fighting the scourge. This outlay included 26 sanatoria, with 2111 beds for women, and ten sanatoria with 541 beds for children, all these being due to the suggestion of the German Empress.

Germanizing the Poles.

Germany does not allow the Polish language to be used or taught in any of the eastern provinces. The result is that the Polish children have a great deal of difficulty in keeping pace with their German classmates. It is as if an English or American child, living in his own country, were obliged to repeat lessons, and write all his exerises and compositions in French. The tasks, therefore, though easy for the German, are terribly hard for the Pole, and often necessitate his sitting up late at night to finish them. Next morning he goes to school sleepy and nervous. He is asked a question. Perhaps he hesitates, not because he does not know the lesson, but because he is tired, and his childish mind realizes how much depends upon his answer—his place in the class, his weekly report, perhaps his seat in the school.

The hatred of the scholars for the schools grows as time goes on. The elder boys and girls learn to bear their teachers' taunts in sullen silence, but their feelings find vent in Polish school magazines. Surreptitiously circulated in the class, they consist of one or two sheets of paper, closely writter or typed. A Polish eagle heads the first page and the columns are full of incidents of school life in which disparaging remarks about the Prussian government predominate. When captured, the magazine is confiscated and the contributors expelled.

The Samaritans.

Tall of stature, gaunt, as through suffering, but dignified and silent, four men clad in the robes of their priestly office have just visited England to implore aid for a dying race. They were representatives of the Samaritans of Palestine, who are so harried and taxed by the Turks that life is a continual struggle to them. The oldest Jewish sect on earth, and once very numerous, the Samaritans have dwindled to thirty families and fewer than 150 persons. As a people they have defied the ravages of war, poverty and oppression nearly three thousand years. Never has their unity been broken; their customs and manner of worship have remained unchanged. The Samaritans are all clustered together in a colony in the small city of Nablus, in North Palestine, where they dwell quietly, close by their little synagogue, where they assemble for devotions conducted as they were 3000 years ago.

They declare that a copy of the Pentateuch in their possession is older than that of the Jews. They have other ancient manuscripts of priceless value as well. Among these is a scroll which has been used in their synagogue for many centuries.

Inclosed in a silver case and kept in a chest, the original scroll is rarely shown to visitors. It consists of dingy skins, which were prepared long before the invention of parchment, sewed together. The skins are about 15x25 inches, and are now worn and patched; in fact, large portions of the writing are illegible.

When the Samaritans want a new copy of the Pentateuch, some scholar among them slowly prints it out by hand. They have no printing presses. A year is required to make a copy, which is never sold, but kept for the use of the community.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Glass That Won't Melt.

A new discovery which is likely to have important practical results, has been made by Dr. A. L. Day, formerly of the U. S. Geological Survey. Dr. Day has perfected a method of making "quartz glass." This is a problem on which scientists have been at work for a decade. Hitherto they have been able to make the glass, but never without bubbles—and the bubbles rendered it useless for most purposes.

The Carnegie Institute came to Dr. Day's rescue and furnished him with money for expensive apparatus by which the glass could be subjected to the enormous pressure of 500 pounds to the square inch at the very high temperature of 2000 degrees Fahrenheit. With this combination the perfect quartz glass has been produced.

The particular quality which renders quartz glass valuable is its hardness and its resistance to heat. A slab of this glass may be put in a safe door, and the safe remain as fireproof as if it were solid steel. Oven and furnace doors may now be made with windows.

German Science Workers.

In the Zeiss glass works at Jena, fourteen doctors of science are employed, and these include mathematicians as well as physicists. The great German aniline color works employ more "scientific" than "technical" chemists. At one of them, for instance, fifty-five scientific and thirty-one technical chemists are engaged; at a second 145 scientific chemists and 175 technologists; at a third 148 scientific chemists for seventy-five technicists. The research laboratories of these works are lavishly equipped, one of them possesses a library of 14,000 volumes; a second spends 150,000 francs a year on glassware. These things are no doubt expensive, but these great factories will manage to pay a dividend of from 20 to 30 per cent. Every newly discovered substance which is usable is patented, and in this way Germany has managed to establish a monopoly. The house of Baeyer possesses 1000 patents at home and 1200 in foreign countries.

Life in Radium.

Whether any form of life can be generated by radium is still a question, unanswered. Many theories have been advanced regarding the possibilities of radium, but actually nothing has been accomplished in this direction.

A few preliminary experiments suggested by the marvelous qualities of radium have been made, and that is all. These experiments and their results, which are not at all revolutionary, may be described in half a dozen sentences. Mr. Burke finds that when small quantities of radium bromide (or chloride) are scattered on the surface of carefully sterilized bouillon, well protected from the air in closed vessels, minute objects appear in the bouillon after one or two days. These objects have been watched, and Mr. Burke reports that after their first appearance they develop into two dots; next present the appearance of dumbbells, and subsequently of biscuits; afterward take on forms which remind an observer of frog's spawn, and, finally, divided, lose their individuality and become transformed into minute crystals.

These bodies, which Mr. Burke very prematurely describes as "cultures," do not multiply, as living organisms should do, when they are transferred to fresh tubes of sterilized bouillon, though, as might be expected, they give some slight evidence that the activity of the radium salt is not quite exhausted by its first action, and they are soluble in water. Now, it would be dogmatic to say that radium will not generate life in organic matter, but, clearly, Mr. Burke gives us little or no reason to suspect that it does so at present.—[The Cornhill.

Incandescent Lamps.

The ordinary carbon incandescent lamp remained nearly two decades the sole representative of glow lamps. Within the last year or two great strides had been made in experimenting with filaments other than carbon. The two objects aimed at were a lamp with a longer life, and one to use less current and give more light. The tantalum lamp had a filament about two feet long of very thin wire. It was the most economical lamp yet made, and of long life, having an efficiency of from 1.5 to 2 watts per candle-power, and a useful life of about 600 hours before its illuminating power decreased, with a total life of 1000, and in some cases 1200, hours. The ordinary carbon lamp required 3.5 watts per candle-power, or about double that of the tantalum lamp. With the same current the tantalum lamp gave twice as much light as carbon. It also gave a much whiter light, and gave its full candle-power immediately it was turned on. One pound of tantalum metal was sufficient for 23,000 lamps of 25 candle-power each. Several minerals had been found to contain tantalum, and in various countries. The ore, however, has been only found and worked in small quaitities. In Cornwall small quantities of tantalum and niobium had long since been noticed in ores of tin and tungsten; but up to the present only in quantities sufficient to raise scientific interest, and not of commercial value.

Boric Acid and Appendicitis.

So eminent an authority as Dr. Reginald Harrison, past vice-president and Hunterian professor of pathology and surgery at the Royal College of Surgeons of England, declares that the increase of appendicitis and related diseases is directly traceable to the employment of boric acid and other chemicals for the preparation and preservation of food. He points out that the death rate from enteritis, appendicitis, and perityphlitis increased in Great Britain during the twenty-year period from 1885-1904 from 133 to 305 per million.

According to Dr. Harrison's theory, the process by which the boric acid produces appendicitis is mechanical and indirect, the first step being the development of flatulent dyspepsia—now recognized as being an almost inevitable effect of the presence of such preservatives in the food—and the second step being the entrance of gas into the appendix. Dr. Harrison says:

"The initial lesion which probably renders appendicitis possible is the opening or blowing out of the appendical canal to such a degree as to render it accessible to the contents of the intestines. . . . When this condition has thus been fairly well established, the ease and life of the appendix, not to say anything of the individual, are liable to become precarious."

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

An Uncle Tommer's Diary.

October 9.—This is Skidville. We opened here last night and are to play again tonight, and also Wednesday night. The show is a hit, and all because of me. There was a good sized congregation present when the services opened. I state it that way because it was the soberest, saddest audience I ever saw anywhere. It sat out there in the hall and regarded us with suspicion. Before I came on with the donkey half the audience had slipped out softly, making as much noise as a packing box rolling downstairs when they went down the steps themselves.

I was a little nervous when I started out with the donkey. But the nervousness wore off very quickly. Also almost all of my costume and considerable of my make-up.

It was all the fault of the manager. The donkey started on as slowly and solemnly as an ice wagon, and the manager threw something at him from the wings.

The donkey suddenly wished to stand on his head.

I urged him not to. I pulled back on the bridle and dug my heels into his side, but to no avail.

Finally we compromised. I stood on my head.

And then the donkey came across the stage, as soon as I had assumed a sitting posture, and began eating my trouser's legs.

The more I wriggled and twisted and tried to get away, the more he bit off, at times heedlessly taking a chew of my skin.

By this time the audience was sitting straight up and yelling with delight and admiration. The people that had gone out heard the cheers and came rushing back, increasing the racket and adding to the excitement of the donkey.

Every time I tried to run off the stage, the manager or some of the company would be in the wings and push me back. Simon Legree threatened me with his whip several times.

But at last I made a flying leap, knocking the manager down, and escaped to the dressing room. There I stood, counting my bruises, when from outside I heard a tumult like to the sound of twenty thunderstorms all working at once.

The manager came running and called me:

"Go on," he said. "Go on. Man, you've made the hit of your life. Get back there and give them an encore."

"Not much," I replied, pinning up a chewed place in my coat.

"Go on. Have you no regard for your art?"

"I have, but I have a little regard for my skin, too."

"My heavens, man, what do a few inches of skin amount to, compared to a success?"

But I wasn't going out there again. I was beginning to ache all over by this time, and I had found a bump on my head that I had overlooked.

"Come now," begged the manager, while the hand clapping and stamping of feet and yelling grew tremendous. "Come, now, if you won't respond to an encore, at least go on the stage and bow your appreciation of the applause. There is no necessity of insulting an audience, is there?"

"Where's the donkey?" I asked.

"The donkey will be held, all right. Go on, and take your stage call."

I shouldnt have done it. I should have stuck to my decision. But when he said "Take your stage call," I remembered all the actors I had ever seen, and how magnificent and stately they appeared when they would advance to the center of the stage, and bow repeatedly while the audience shouted and cheered.

It was too much of a temptation. I drew my tattered coat about my throat with my left hand, crooked my right arm behind me, and stalked calmly onto the stage. The audience redoubled its yelling.

I bowed to the right, I bowed to the left, I bowed to the front, and still they cheered. I stepped forward to the footlights and bowed again.

The audience roared and clapped hands, and I bowed right along until the noise subdued somewhat. Then I cleared my throat and raised my hand to command silence, just as Bryan does from the rear platform.

At once a deathlike hush fell over the assemblage. I never heard silence come so quick. Even the smiles faded from the faces of those before me, and into their eyes crept a tense expectancy. I began:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I am proud to ——"

And then the donkey kicked me clear from the stage into the bass drum.

While the manager was helping me separate myself from the drum in my dressing room, I heard more cheers in front.

"I won't go out there again, no odds how much they cheer," I said.

"You needn't. They're encoring the donkey now," he told me.

Amalie: Its beautiful; it only wants to be a little more even; at present you have three hairs on the left and five on the right.—[Fliegende Blaetter.

"You say you get 250 marks a month? I can't believe it, tell me how."

"I get 110 marks salary. Then I don't pay my rent, 40 marks, that's 150 marks; I owe the milkman 30 marks, that's 180 marks; my butcher, 40 marks, 220 marks; and every month I raise 30 marks out of my friends, makes an income of 250 marks a month."—[Fliegende Blaetter.

We Sell the Gustav Stickley Craftsman Furniture

Considerable confusion has developed in the use of "Stickley" and "Craftsman" in connection with furniture. Here is the correct statement of affairs: Gustav Stickley is the original Stickney and the originator of the Craftsman movement. All others are imitators.

No other store in Los Angeles can sell you the genuine Gustav Stickley Craftsman furniture. We now have good assortments of chairs, rockers, settees, Morris chairs, Davenports, library tables, bedroom pieces, brass, wrought iron and copper brackets and ornaments and draperies.

Although in this novel factory there are no machines and every piece is done by hand, the prices of its products are moderate indeed.

It will be our pleasure to show you the goods at any time and present you with a copy of "Craftsman," the official magazine of the shop.

a story in Mary E. earlier style, but her best in that style. a strong one, a story that one or two others have attempted to handle—the question whether it may ever be right to relieve suffering by putting an end to a human life. Such an ending to a life forms the climax of the book, but the plot has other features that give room for powerful work. Briefly, Dr. Gordon is a country practitioner with a beautiful wife, who lives with him under the name of his sister. Dr. Gordon had two sisters, one of whom married a scoundrel and died in giving birth to a daughter. It was given out that her child died with her, and the father was never allowed to know of the existence of his daughter. The other sister of Dr. Gordon, also mother of a daughter, being on the point of going to England to live with wealthy relatives of her husband, Dr. Gordon persuaded her to say that she was going to live with him, and then, marrying, he caused his wife to play the part of the second sister, assuming her name. The girl was thus protected.

Yet in some manner her father gains an inkling that she is not dead, and begins following the supposed daughter of Mrs. Ewing to obtain a glimpse of her face. It is at this point that Dr. Elliott, a young practitioner, comes on the scene, to act as assistant to Dr. Gordon. He first falls in love with his chief's supposed sister, but is informed of her true relation to the doctor. Later, his affections center on the doctor's niece. On the evening of his entry into the village where he is to practice, he comes on the girl in mortal terror because she has been followed by a man who, she has an uncontrollable feeling, is trying to make her turn and look at him. This man follows her many times afterward for the same purpose, and finally lies in wait for her and her lover when they are returning from a drive at night. Dr. Gordon, who is unarmed, looses the bulldog that he has recently bought, and the dog, attacking the waiting man, inflicts a wound that runs into erysipilis and kills. The loosing of this brute is occasion for the presentation of another problem to the mind of Dr. Gordon—the question whether it is ever right to take life to rid the world of moral evil.

Then comes the death of Mrs. Gordon, or Mrs. Ewing, as she is called. She is the victim of a disease that is continual torture—pain that can be relieved only by morphine. But she has a weak heart, and there is danger of killing her by an overdose. Her torment increases day by day, and finally, when she is screaming in agony, Dr. Gordon, though he knows that he risks her death if he gives her any more of the opiate to relieve her, is unable to endure the sound of her pain longer, and administers another dose—which he sends the younger physician to inject. Mrs. Gordon dies, and all actors in the tragedy—the two physicians, the nurse and the niece—are overwhelmed. A coolness arises between the lovers; and the situation is relieved only by the nurse, who confesses that she heroically diluted the morphine with water, so that the injection for which the physicians were responsible was harmless, and that she herself, unable to endure Mrs. Gordon's agony, gave the fatal dose.

The strong features of the story are, of course, the dramatic handling and the character study. Hamburger & Sons are exclusive agents for this cheap edition of the book, of which print and binding are those of the $1.50 novels.

An Invalid's Story.

CUPID'S MIDDLEMAN. By Edward B. Lent. Cupples & Leon, New York. (Price, $1.50.)

Edward B. Lent, one of the world's quiet benefactors, as a cheerful invalid who tries to lend his talents to the cheering of others, and has already written one entertaining book turning on his illness, "Being Done Good," has this season put out another volume under the title quoted above. It is the story of the love affair of a friend of the invalid, in which love letters written years before and chiefly for the amusement of the two play an unhappy part: the wandering brain of the letter writer, in hospital, adding strange fancies and exaggerations to the facts. It is a whimsical tale, expanding incidentally on the charm of trained nurses, the average stupidity of detectives, and a number of other points. Those who appreciate the manliness of courage and good cheer in face of invadilism will doubtless be interested in this, Mr. Lent's second story.

An Old Plot.

THE PRINCE GOES FISHING. By Elizabeth Duer. D. Appleton & Co., New York. (Price, $1.50.)

This is a moderately amusing story written, however, without large literary skill, and embodying a plot old as Lalla Rookh and older—the story of a prince who wins the love of his bride-to-be by accompanying her wedding train in guise of one of the attendants. In this case the prince travels as the officer in charge of the escort. The opening scenes of the story are by far the best. The treatment loses in vividness, in dramatic action and emotional force later on, and the climax is weak.

An Oriental Tale.

THE HOUSE OF ISLEM. By Mark Duke Pikthall. D. Appleton & Co., New York. (Price, $1.50.)

Two brothers of totally different character are the study of this book. One, Shems-ud-din, a holy and unselfish man, who lives according to the rules of the sages and the dictates of a noble heart, and, unskilled in the wisdom of the world, continually appears to dare and sacrifice everything, yet acquires ever greater power and honor. The other brother, Milhem, actuated only by selfishnes and sacrificing all other considerations in the struggle for self-advancement, finds fortune the opposite of that of Shems-ud-din. And the end of it all is that Shems-ud-din, out of the evening calm of his life, looks back and sees "the vanity of man's endeavor, from least to greatest, upon the earth, and how it floats on God's mercy as a boat on a mighty deep." The book is written in strong ethical-philosophical vein, in oriental spirit; and the author has evidently read much eastern literature.

Kai Jans dreams through his boyhood. He tells strange tales out of his own imagination to the children who wonder at and admire him. But the problems and sorrows of the world overwhelm him. Old Hule Belderwand believes in the deliverer who will make Hillingenlei in reality a holy land; but Kai Jans despairs of this. On the other hand, he believes that somewhere in the big world there must be a true holy land, where people are happy and good; and he sets out to find it. He becomes a sailor and sees many lands, but nowhere does he discover what he seeks. With him is Pete Boje, Anna's brother. They see hardship and adventure, but no holy-land. After four years of this, Kai returns to Hilligenlei. In the meantime a wound received in a storm cripples him for awhile, and to keep him from melancholy because of his uselessness, a passenger teaches him Latin. This reassures an earlier liking for study, and thus he comes to fulfill his father's desire that he should study and get learning. By and by he goes to Berlin to study theology, for still the sorrows and problems of the race oppress him. But questions arise within him which his studies do not answer satisfactorily; recent Bible criticism reaches him, he ceases to believe as did his fathers. So he returns again to Hilligenlei without completing his course. Men and women are now his studies, and the iron of human pain has entered his soul. So he ponders, and love passes him; Anna Boje spurns the dreamer for the man of action.

But her younger sister has always had a particular liking for Kai. Heinke Boje is as tall as Anna, but not of the same spirit; Anna is heroic in cast; Heinke is lighter of mood, girlishly sweet and tender, full of pretty ways. Kai, however, has nothing but friendship for her; absorbed, now, in melancholy, he scarcely sees her. There comes another, the new teacher—William Boje being now deceased—who takes lodgings with the Bojes and is daily served with coffee by Heinke. The story of the love making of these two is one of the prettiest and most original in recent fiction.

The introduction of modern methods of finance into Hilligenlei, through Hjark Dusenschoen, and other transforming changes in the simple village life do not bring Kai Jans to a more cheerful mood; on the contrary, his melancholy becomes so great and noticeable that the tender and affectionate heart of Heinke is touched. During an absence of her betrothed, she seeks him out and attempts to cheer him up—with a success far beyond her anticipation. For the new attractiveness which has come to her with the joy of love wins all the heart of her earlier choice. And in this dilemma she is amazed to find how the old tenderness for Kai returns. She loves him so well that, but for the other she would gladly become his wife. But she is promised to the other and will not betray him. His return, too, convinces her that, after all, he is one she would have for husband.

In this crisis, the spirit of Kai Jans is again broken on the wheel. But Heinke has spurred him on to a work that earlier he had outlined to her as one that some one should undertake—but that hitherto he had only dreamed about—the writing of a life of Christ that should show him to the people according to newest researches, a man of men, a man among men, but strong, pure, tender, beautiful in life and death. In his sorrow now comes to Kai the meaning of all his suffering. "Did you think you could tell the Savior's story with laughter in your heart?" And he begins his task. The little book, when finished, he gives to Heinke.

About a fifth of the book is occupied with this story of the life of Christ which Kai Jans wrote—the life that was to teach men more because it was the life of a man and not of a son of God in any exceptional sense. And Heinke marries, and by and by Kai receives strength to see her again in her happiness and to know and love her children. But Kai dies early—the book closes with his burial, and the speech about it of those who knew him. Hjark Dusenschoen says: "It's a pity that he never came to anything—he was such a gifted fellow. But, you know, he had no class feeling. That was what it was. He always remained the workman, the country boy. He never rose—that was his failing."

JUVENILE BOOKS.

Anna Chapin Ray.

JANET, HER WINTER IN QUEBEC. By Anna Chapin Ray. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Anna Chapin Ray's new book is another Canadian story, not quite so interesting and not quite so well told as the last, but a very good book, nevertheless, and one that young people, both boys and girls, but, perhaps, more especially the latter are sure to enjoy. A Canadian boy and girl, brother and sister, and the boarders whom their mother, through loss of property, is obliged to take, a brother and sister and mother from the United States, are the personages of this book. The contrast in the fortunes of the Canadians and their boarders does not stand in the way of a very warm friendship among the young people, and this is only the more firmly cemented in the end by some intermediate misunderstandings that arise from differences of nationality. A well-meaning, but eccentric and not very brilliant Englishman, affords amusement to the four friends, and finally becomes the aid of the impoverished Canadians to better fortunes. Tehre is much in the book regarding Canadian sports and customs.

From Greek Literature.

LONG AGO IN GREECE. By Edmund J. Carpenter, Litt. D. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

In simple prose Edmund J. Carpenter tells the story of Homer's "Battle of the Frogs and Mice," a part of Aristophanes's "Birds," Ovid's tale of the race of Atlanta and Spomene, other stories from Apollodorus and Museeus, Lucian, Moschus, Virgil, Plutarch, Diodorus Siculus Theocritus, Hesiod, Pindar, Euripides, Apollonius etc. The book is a good one for the young people's home library, the tales being both interesting and instructive historically.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Lincoln at Gettysburg.

THE PERFECT TRIBUTE. By Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. (Price, 50 cents.)

This is a dramatically conceived and strongly written little story about Lincoln's Gettysburg speech—its writing and its delivery, followed by utter silence, though the two-hour scholarly address of Everett was received with a storm of applause. According to the story, Lincoln was deeply depressed by his apparent failure to move the people, and, wandering about in the night, in melancholy reflection, was taken into a sick room by a boy hunting a lawyer to draw a will for his dying brother, and there, from the lips of the invalid he heard the seemingly cold silence of his audience explained, and his speech called one of the greatest in history.

The publishers have done well to print this effective story under separate cover. It is one that appeals to and nourishes the spirit of real patriotism an excellent gift for young people, for whom especially it is intended, but a story that any one may enjoy reading.

Booker Washington.

PUTTING THE MOST INTO LIFE. By Booker T. Washington. Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., New York. (Price, 75 cents net.)

A litle series of week-end talks to Tuskegee students is here enlarged and issued in book form. Manly and helpful in spirit, they may be read with advantage by any one, although especially intended for students of Mr. Washington's race and adapted to their needs.

New Thought.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF REST. By Ella Adelia Fletcher. Dodge Publishing Company, New York. (Price, cloth, 25 cents; leather, $1.25.)

This is a booklet turning, as is indicated by the title, on the value of rest for health and peace, yet preaching, above all, the power of mental force in matters of physical vigor.

NATURE BOOKS.

A Song Bird's Story.

THE STORY OF SCRAGGLES. By George Wharton James. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Those of us who love animals will be grateful to our neighbor, Mr. James, for his beautiful story of a little pet of his—a song sparrow, who was handicapped from birth by physical defects that prevented its flying and left it in danger of an early death but for Mr. James's kind intervention. The story is written with great tenderness—in a manner to delight those who believe in this finer spirit of brotherhood and pity toward weaker species rather than the savage blood-lust and pleasure in destruction. "Scraggles" became Mr. James's intimate comrade and playmate—and even assisted, in a manner, at the composition of a book that is now well known to the public. And Mr. James has written so simply of his tiny friend that no better book could be given the children to teach them gentleness; while older people will find the story equally interesting.

The very beautiful introduction to the little volume deserves quoting:

"Most of our Indians have a tradition that in the days of old animals and man had a common speech. Each was able to understand the other, and thoughts and language were common to all. It was not until man began to regard himself as superior to the animals, and think of them as 'lower,' that this oneness of speech and relationship was lost. Since then envy, jealousy, anger, on one side, and conceit, pride, and contempt on the other have widened the breach, while Love has stood with tearful eyes, looking on at the sad and unnatural estrangement.

"But in these latter days prophets among the white race have risen up to awaken again within man the desire for brotherhood with the humbler creation of God. Thoreau, John Burroughs, John Muir, Ernest Thompson, W. J. Long, Elizabeth Grinnell, and many others, are showing us our kinship to the birds, buds, bees, blossoms and beasts. It is with the two thoughts before me of the common speech and understanding existent between the animals and man, and of the kinship that affection shows us does really exist, that I have written the 'Story of Scraggles,' from her viewpoint, with the confident anticipation that young and old alike will enjoy this truthful record of a sweet and beautiful little life."

This book is especially recommended to the attention of all people interested in humane work, and of all true friends of Nature in general.

NEW MAGAZINES.

Elizabeth Robins Pennell and Joseph Pennell are preparing for the new volume of The Century an illustrated series of descriptive articles on "French Cathedrals." They are intended to have special interest for travelers and art lovers.

Recollection of Whistler in Paris, Venice, and London by Cyrus Cuneo, the artist, and Otto Baucher, the etcher, both of whom enjoyed delightful comradeship with the great painter, will be coming among the features of The Century in 1907.

A very timely and searching article in the October World's Work deals very frankly with "The Hearst Myth." It shows, perhaps more than any other article written about the originator of Hearstism, how a great game of bluff is played with other men's brains. In view of Mr. Hearst's great activity in New York politics just now, this article has a peculiar significance. The article, by the way, is by "Q. P.," whose article on "The Life Insurance Machine," in the World's work, attracted such wide-spread attention.

In the October number of Farming appeared the first series of articles of the utmost importance to the live stock and dairy interests of this country. Consumption carries off over 150,000 human beings annually. It causes enormous losses in every branch of the live stock industry, but more particularly among our dairy herds and swine. The best authorities agree that this disease is surely transmitted to human beings through infected milk, butter, cheese and meat, and constitutes a serious menance to the public health as well as a serious financial loss to breeders. The remedy lies with then. These articles present the results of investigators. They show the rapid increase of bovine tuberculosis in this country; how it is spread from herd to herd and delivered to thousands of families in their daily milk supply; how the farmer may apply every safeguard known to science.

The forthcoming special number of the International Studio, published by John Lane Company, will be entirely devoted to the subject of old English country cottages. For the express purpose of illustrating this work a series of pen drawings, numbering at least one hundred and fifty, have been made of picturesque cottages in various parts of England—the Home Counties, Midlands, the West of England, Cheshire, Shropshire, etc., etc., and these will be supplemented by numerous colored plates reproduced from the original drawings by water-color artists who have specialized in this direction, including Mrs. Allingham, Wilfrid Ball, W. Pilsbury, Grosvenor Thomas, Walter Tyndale and others. These, together with the many illustrations which the volume will contain of all kinds of details of cottage architecture, both internal and external, and including the garden and its accessories, will make the work one of much interest.

Chester Holcombe's excellent article, "The Missionary Enterprise in China," recently published in The Atlantic, occasioned much favorable comment in both the secular and the religious press, and in response to general request it will be published in separate form by the Revell Company.

The University Digest, published by the University Research Extension, Chicago, is a new monthly of a most desirable kind. Following is the publisher's definition of its intended scope:

"Its mission is to serve as a primary source of information to the student in every interest of life, as well as to the man of affairs who does not wish the stress of business to exclude him from the pleasure and benefits of the Life of the Mind. By a primary or first hand source of information is meant such knowledge about a masterpiece in literature, art or science, for example, which is derived not from comments upon these great productions, or from dictionaries and magazine articles, but from the original works themselves. Second and third hand information about the men and the books which are influencing civilization today is responsible for many misconceptions and unwarranted conclusions. It is a great mistake to be satisfied with a mere comment upon a great work, when it is within our reach to acquaint ourselves with the masterpiece itself. Nor is it fair to the author not to place him directly in touch with the people for whom he writes. It is true that the majority of readers stand in need of interpreters, but, after all, is not the best interpreter of an author the author himself? To condense, select and arrange an author's thought, and then to pass it through a sieve, so to speak, which, while permitting the details to run out, shall preserve and present the essentials, is a more valuable service, not only to the makers of books, but also to the public that can appreciate them, than that which is rendered by the ordinary magazine article."

PEOPLE AND THINGS LITERARY.

Bram Stoker's "Personal Reminiscences of Henry Irving," which has been looked forward to as the authoritative biography of the great actor, was published by the Macmillan Company on Saturday, October 13, the anniversary of Irving's death.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have just jublished a reprint of one of Frank Norris's most appealing stories, "The Joyous Miracle," which appeared originally in McClure's Magazine. It is one of the best things written by the man whom many critics believed was destined to become the greatest American novelist.

The next contribution to the "Farm Library" will be "Farm Animals," by E. V. Wilcox. It has been prepared with a view to making it a valuable manual of how to breed and care for, use and doctor all the animals on the farm. Another volume in preparation is "Soils," by S. W. Fletcher. Other volumes to complete this library will be "Farm Equipment," "Field Crops," "Special Industries," "Farming as a Business" and "Fruits and Vegetables."

In view of the fact that William Jennings Bryan is the model for the hero of Mrs. Mary Dillon's new book, "The Leader," it is interesting to recall a list of statesmen who have figured in American novels. The list includes the following: Washington, in "Richard Carvel," by Winston Churchill; Grover Cleveland, in "The Hon. Peter Sterling," by Paul Leicester Ford; Lincoln, in "The Crisis," by Winston Churchill; Alexander Hamilton, in "The Conqueror," by Gertrude Atherton; Andrew Jackson, in "Peggy O'Neal," by Alfred Henry Lewis; Gen. Grant, in "The Captain," by F. C. Williams; Aaron Burr, in "Blennerhassett," by Charles F. Pidgin; Richard Croker, in "The Boss," by Alfred Henry Lewis.

"A Lady in Waiting," by Charles Woodcock Savage, has been recommended to libraries by the American Library Association, and a German edition of the same novel will be published in September, 1906, by Herman Hillger, the German publisher, Berlin-Leipzig. The translation has been made by Emma Vely, the well-known German novelist. The illustrations are by Prof. Pape, Court Painter to the German Emperor.

In the last of his papers on "The Future in America," published in Harper's Weekly, H. A. Wells describes a characteristic interview with President Roosevelt: Mr. Wells had suggested a pessimistic prophecy of America's future—that she "must presently lose the impetus of her ascent and culminate and pass." "With one of those sudden movements of his," he relates, "the President knelt forward in a garden-chair, thrusting out his familiar gesture, a hand first partly open and then closed. 'Suppose, after all,' he said, slowly, 'that should prove to be right. That does not matter now. The effort's real. It's worth going on with. It's worth it—even then.' "I can see him now," comments Mr. Wells, "and hear his unmusical voice saying, 'The effort—the effort's worth it,' and see the gesture of his clenched hand and the—how can I describe it?—the friendly peering look of his face, like a man with the sun in his eyes. . . . He sticks in my mind as a many-sided symbol of the creative will in man. He kneels out, assertive against his setting—and his setting is the White House with a background of all America."

BALTIMORE'S SEWER SYSTEM.

AN UNDERTAKING THAT WILL COST ABOUT $50,000,000.

Separate Sewer Systems to Be Constructed for Sewage Proper and for Storm Waters—Method of Purification Will Leave the Sewage 95 Per Cent. Free from Bacteria.

The city of Baltimore is engaged in the construction of a sewage system, so immense in its nature that it will cost probably $50,000,000 before completed. The entire present sewage system of the city will have to be remodeled and separate sewers built all over the city to take care of the storm waters, separate from the sewage, so it is estimated that approximately 700 miles of sewers and drains will have to be constructed. This does not include the house connections to be carried to the property line, which will add 100 per cent. to the above estimated length.

At the present time the city of Baltimore is closely built up, with heavy grades; is pierced by two railroad tunnels, with two streams dividing the city, which at times grow into raging torrents, and with low-lying land around the river front. Of the great work Chief Engineer Hendrick says:

The pumping station will require, to begin with, three 27,500,000-gallon plunger pumps, with additional pumps to be added later. The sewage will have to be lifted through iron force mains to a height of over sixty feet (the friction in the force mains making it equivalent to seventy-two feet,) in order to put it into the outfall sewer, to flow or float to the point at which it will be rained onto the filter beds.

On reaching Back River the sewage will first be deposited in huge septic tanks with a capacity of 25,000,000 gallons, where it will remain for six or eight hours, depositing therein much of its suspended matter as sludge, which gradually is reduced in quantity and made inoffensive by bacterial action, and finally is discharged on adjoining lands. The effluent from the septic tanks, which is a partially clarified liquid, flows to the so-called "sprinkling filters." The filters are composed of beds of small broken stone about nine feet deep, and cover an area of thirty acres. The sewage is discharged upon these filters in the form of spray from a number of nozzles placed about fifteen feet apart at their surface. The sewage filters or trickles through the beds, a thin film or liquid surrounding each stone, and issues below, freed from its putrescent matter.

This effluent then enters the settling basins, which have a capacity of 11,000,000 gallons, where it remains about three hours, and deposits the films of matter detached from the sprinkling filters.

The removal of the bacteria by the septic tanks, sprinkling filters and settling basins is about 95 per cent. of the number contained in the original sewage.

The final process of purification is secured by discharging intermittently the effluent from the settling basins upon artificial sand filters, by which substantially all the remaining bacteria and fine suspended matter are removed, so that the final effluent is clear and has obtained the highest practical degree of purity. These artificial sand filters are to cover an area of 100 acres.

The necessity for purifying the sewage to such an unusually high degree is due to the great oyster industry of Baltimore. The Baltimore oyster is known the world over, and it was therefore considered highly important that not a breath of suspicion should arise in regard to the purity of the oyster. Therefore the filter beds for purifying the sewage were located on Back River, a broad stream about half a mile wide, and following a very circuitous route some fourteen miles in length before emptying into the Chesapeake Bay at a point some distance from the nearest of the smaller oyster beds.

The difficulties in this great sewage project are numerous. Baltimore is very hilly in some sections and very flat in others. Both of these are objectionable features in sewage construction. For instance, on the steep grades it will be necessary to keep the velocity of the sewage flow down, which will necessitate drop manholes in order to flatten the grades. In the low-lying sections we will be below the tide level with flat grades. Jones's falls and Gwynn's flats bisect the city, necessitating siphons in some cases and greatly adding to the difficulties in the storm-water division, as they drain a very large area to the north and west and heavy storms cause them to become raging torrents, overflowing the low-lying sections of the city. There are also two railroad tunnels which pierce the city, one east to west and the other from north to south, and these have developed serious difficulties.

Baltimore being an old city, it has an accumulation below its streets of a perfect network of pipes of all kinds, some dating back possibly a hundred years. This adds to the many difficulties of construction. When you stop to realize that every house in the city, whether situated on a street or an alley, must be tapped by this new sewerage system you will then begin to see in a small way what it means.

Most sewerage systems grow up with the city, covering the period from the first settlement, but this system is to spring into existence, you might say, over night. No house can escape, the law making it obligatory upon the Board of Health to see that all houses are properly connected.

In building the sanitary sewers great care will have to be exercised in order to keep out the ground water, such as rainwater and tides, as every gallon that is allowed to enter the sanitary sewers will have to flow to the pumping station and be pumped and then pass through the filters, which, of course, adds greatly to the expense.

CUBAN WEALTH AND TRAFFIC.

If Cuba, so wonderfully endowed with natural advantages, so favorably situated for agricultural and commercial development, although periodically devastated by revolution and indifferently fostered, in time of peace, was worthy, under the old Spanish domination, of being called the "Pearl of the Antilles," what might she become under an administration guaranteeing permanent peace and good government and justifying the investment of such capital as may be necessary to develop the riches of nature that up to the present moment have been but half revealed, says the Washington Post.

Cuba is entirely within the torrid zone, but not so far south as to make its climate characteristically torrid. The climate does not differ materially from our own Gulf States, but the rainfall is greater. Its insularity insures a moist, equable atmosphere, and the never-failing sea breezes of the afternoons and evenings tend to make the nights cool and comfortable even in the warmest months.

Shaped somewhat like Long Island, Cuba is long and narrow, being about 730 miles in length and in width varying from 18 to 118 miles. Its area comprises about 44,000 square miles. By way of comparison, it is larger than Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey put together. The island would make almost four Marylands and about two West Virginias, and is greater in the aggregate of her square miles than either Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee or Virginia. The State of Pennsylvania has practically the same area as Cuba. The island lies 100 miles south of Key West, the most southern port of the United States; Havana is distant from Tampa 306 miles; from New Orleans 597 miles, and from New York 1227 miles. It controls the highway to the Panama Canal.

The last census of the island, taken in 1899, put the population at 1,572,797. Immigration has been steadily increasing, the number for 1904 being 20,217. A reasonable estimate of the present population is fixed by those best informed at about 1,700,000. Of the total population, 53 per cent. were native whites, 9 per cent. foreign whites, and 32 per cent. colored, the remaining 1 per cent. being assigned to Chinese and others unclassified. The figures as to the density of the population are significant. They indicate a population of 153 persons to the square mile in Havana province, decreasing to but 8 to the square mile in Puerto Principe. Havana province, therefore, is about as thickly settled as New York State, and the last-named province about as much as the State of Washington. It has been estimated that Cuba is capable of supporting, in comfort and prosperity, a population of at least 15,000,000, which would be 340 to the square mile, or less than the density of the population in Rhode Island or Massachusetts. The census of 1899 found sixteen cities on the island having a population over 8000. The chief of these is Havana, with 235,981; Santiago, second, with 43,096, and Guines, a suburb of Havana, at the bottom of the list, with 8149 inhabitants.

The total trade between this country and Cuba during the last fiscal year amounted to $132,743,519. During that period Cuba sold to the United States sugar valued at $60,208,148, and tobacco valued at $17,474,269, her total exports to this country being $84,979,831, of which all but about $2,000,000 was dutiable and upon which the duty collected, according to the Department of Commerce and Labor's preliminary figures, was $43,928,682. In the same period the United States sold to Cuba merchandise aggregating $45,377,277.

The sugar crop of 1904 was 1,040,220 tons; 1905, 1,100,000 tons; and as experts claim the yield of Cuban sugar is two and a half tons to the acre, the total number of acres devoted to sugar cane amounted to not more than 450,000. There is said to be 5,000,000 acres of the island that might easily and quickly be turned into sugar plantations. If this estimate be correct, the imagination is dazzled by the contemplation of what Cuba would be capable of doing in the sugar-producing line if advantage were taken to the full of nature's gifts. The cultivated area of Cuba is about 1,000,000 acres, and, according to the last census, 47 per cent. of this was devoted to sugar production and 10 per cent. to tobacco. Adding the areas of cities, towns and very large tracts for pasturage purposes, it is found that only about 14,000,000 acres, or about one-half the island, has been developed. The remaining half awaits future exploitation, and is claimed to be, for the most part, as capable of high development as that which has brought great riches to the people of Cuba.

In 1903, according to official advices from Consul-General Steinhart, $100,000,000 of American capital was invested in Cuba, as follows: Sugar plantations, $25,000,000; tobacco lands and factories, $45,000,000; fruit lands, $3,500,000; mining property, $5,000,000; Cuba Railroad Company, $13,000,000; street railways, $8,000,000; other real estate and commercial investments, $1,500,000.

[illegible] a scream that sent the [illegible] my back bone, and [illegible] to her she paid no [illegible] but rising up took the man's head in her arms, crying. 'Billy! Billy! Billy! What's the matter? How came you here? What has happened? My God, Billy, are you dead; are you dead, Billy? Wake up, Billy, it's Jennie, your old true love, Jennie of the long ago; your Jennie who has loved you all these years. Oh, Billy, Billy, what is it? Where are we?' and so her cries went on, coherent and incoherent, mingling joy and grief and wonder and despair as her poor, muddled brain tried to solve the problem placed so tragically before her. And while I stood uncertain what to do or how to break in, the man opened his eyes, looked at her with a smile of instant recognition, said faintly, 'Hello, Jennie, girl,' and then relapsed into unconsciousness. In that brief moment his life had gone back ten years and he spoke just as he might have done when he was a boy and they were meeting daily. There was no surprise in his voice. He was not conscious long enough for his mind to enter the tangle of perplexity which tortured the woman.

"I caught her arm then, and in a few moments made her understand the situation. She was unhurt, except for slight bruises, and she helped me lift Billy's unconscious form and carry it under the opening I had made. Then, with my assistance, she climbed out, and together we got the sick man through the broken window. The first air brought him around in a few moments, and finding that he, too, was not seriously hurt, I fixed them as comfortably as I could and left them to their own explanations, while I went on to see if I couldn't be of assistance elsewhere.

"Well, that's all there is to the story, except the sequel. After the wreck was cleared and we resumed our journey, I learned from them the facts I have given. She had started to Texas, but changed her plans and accompanied him to California, where she nursed him back to health, and then they were married. Whenever I go to Los Angeles I visit them, and you may be sure that I am welcome. They have one of the prettiest homes in that beautiful city, and I really believe they are the happiest couple on earth."

"Gee!" said the red-headed man in the corner, after a silence punctuated by many rings of smoke. "Cupid must have been desperate when he took a man and threw him bodily at a woman in order to bring them together. I've been running away from the kid all my life, but if that's the kind of game he plays when he's mad, I think I'll look him up before he loses his temper."

"Yes, you'd better," said the ex-detective from Kansas City. "I judge from your looks that you're past due now, and if you meet him he'll either break your neck or turn his back on you. He's a queer duck, is Cupid, and he plays queer tricks sometimes. Sometimes, after he shoots his arrows in, he finds he's made a mistake and pulls 'em out again. This story reminds me of a case of that kind."

"Well, fire away," urged the red-headed man. "It's early yet."

"Oh, I'm going to," replied the ex-detective, cheerfully. "I always do what I start to do, whether it's pleasant or not. This happened up in Nebraska. I was going from Omaha to Niobrara to investigate a train robbery. It was a chair car. On the seats in front of me was a young fellow and a girl, and I saw at once that Cupid had hit both of them and then twisted the arrows in the wounds. They was about the sickenest pair I ever saw, and they lovey-wovied and tootsey-wootsied until I had to go into the smoker and take a drink to steady my nerves. After awhile I went back and found they had slowed down enough for me to sit in the neighborhood without being visibly affected. From the scraps of sweetness that floated over the backs of the chairs I learned that they was running away to get married. They had given her old man and the dog the slip, and was satisfied that the bumpety-bump road of true love was goin' to be as smooth as a Senator's shirt front from now on. True love was certainly runnin' easy just then, but the train wasn't. It was a bad piece of road in them days, and the engineer had an hour's time to make up, so he was just hittin' the high places on the straight stretches and playin' crack the whip around the curves. We had just pulled away from the Elkhorn River when there was a terrific screech from the locomotive and the train stopped so sudden that everybody in the car was given a big jolt. The little girl in the seat ahead was thrown clear over the back of the empty chair in front of her, and hung there like a shirt on a clothes-line, screaming for help, and kickin' worse than a Missouri mule.

"It was one of the finest department store displays I ever seen. The lover wasn't sighin' like a furnace any more, nor breathin' soft tommyrot in his lady's ear. Not on your life. He was down under the seat tryin' to get himself into a space six inches square, which was about the size of the man, though his clothes hung over some. As delicate as I could, I helped the young woman to resume her equilibrium. Then I took that young feller by the collar, pulled him out of the hole, stood him up and asked him what in the dickens he meant by lettin' his lady hoist the signals of distress while he crawled under the seats. 'Ain't there no train robbers?' he whined; and then you ought to heard that girl pitch into him. Talk about old Socrates's wife! Why, say, Zantippe, or whatever her name was, was a canary bird compared with that girl when she was tongue-lashin' the feller she had been about to marry. 'Marry you,' she said; 'Why, you measly little runt, I'd rather marry the dirtiest Indian at Rosebud, for he'd at be at least a man.' And then she told him she'd get off at the next station and go back to her pa, but he'd better keep a goin' if he had any regard for his hide, for if pa ever caught him——

"Well, sirs, just then the train stopped at the next station and a great, big, raw-boned Western cattle drover strode through the door at the forward end of the car. He carried in his right hand a blacksnake whip as big at the butt as your wrist. 'Oh, papa!' yelled the girl, and 'The devil!' hollered the boy, and he jumped over the seat and went down the aisle like he had a bunch of hornets under his coat tail. The old man was right after him, and the last I seen of the pair they was chasin' across the prairie at a mile-a-minute gait, the old man snappin' his whip at the youngster's legs at every jump. I 'spec' that kid's runnin' yet."

"What about the girl?" asked the red-headed man in the corner.

"Oh, she threw a fit in my arms and I had to carry her off the train. As a reward for buttin' in, I got left at the station, let the man I was after get away, and nearly lost my job. Since then I don't care what kind of a derned fool Cupid makes of himself."

We Deliver Goods to All Near-by Towns. To Nearly All Other Points We Prepay Freight

Prices

Be Sure You Get in the Right Store. Look for the Name Brent's on the Windows and Remember the Numbers are 712-714-716-718 South Main St.

Prove It

Prove that a Furniture Trust exists.

Prove that Trust Prices are exhorbitant.

Prove that Trust Prices are going up constantly.

Prove that Brent's is the only safe store.

There is a trust right here in Los Angeles.

This concerns you because it may mean that you pay 100 per cent. extra profit on your goods—a tariff that is positively outrageous.

If you doubt the existence of a Furniture Trust, go and get prices and compare them with Brent's.

You will be astonished, amazed and dumbfounded.

You will marvel how intelligent people can be fooled.

But, remember, the Furniture Trust has many stores. If you don't like the high prices in one Trust store, try another. Perhaps you will be asked even more.

It is a Fact Easily Proved, That Brent's Positively Undersells the Trust From 25 Per Cent. to 40 Per Cent.

Understand this is no careless statement made by an irresponsible concern, but a plain, bold assertion by the largest furniture house on the Coast.

Brent's prices are marked in plain figures. The saving applies to all classes of goods, fine brass beds, solid mahogany, old mission pieces, carpets, pianos, sewing machines, as well as all the multitude of simpler goods.

A Bill of Goods Costing $100 at Trust Stores	Costs Only $60 to $75 at Brent's
A Bill of Goods Costing $1000 at Trust Stores	Costs Only $600 to $750 at Brent's

And you get newer goods at Brent's. The vast business of this store turns over the stock in a short period. Goods never get out-of-date. Doesn't it stand to reason that Brent's would not be doing a tremendous business if prices were not greatly below the Trust?

Pay When You Please

The Only Fair and Legitimate Credit System in Los Angeles.

We hereby expose a shrewd method by which the public has been paying enormous premium to Trust furniture stores.

Advertisements appear in which certain furniture houses claim to ask no additional price when goods are sold on credit.

The fact is, these furniture houses not only mark goods at exorbitant prices, but actually ADD 10 per cent. EXTRA to their prices, so that while their credit customers apparently pay no extra for the privilege, in reality they pay 10 per cent. on the top of the already big price.

Unless cash customers are wise enough to ask for this discount, they also pay the 10 per cent. premium charged for credit.

At Brent's all goods are marked at CASH prices. By our popular credit plan, we add 10 per cent. when goods are bought on time. There is no sliding scale of prices—no cut rates for some, and increased rates for others.

You can figure up any bill of goods at Brent's or take any single article and simply add 10 per cent. to get the CREDIT price.

Our prices are fixed and unchangeable. No discounts to any one. Everything sold at the closest possible margin and prices positively from 25 per cent. to 40 per cent. below the Trust.

THE NEW HEAD OF THE JESUITS.

Most Extraordinary Religious Organization That Has Ever Existed Now Takes Its Orders from Father Wernz Only.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

ROME, Oct. 10.—By his election as General of the Society of Jesus, a German priest became the supreme ruler of the most remarkable religious organization the world has ever seen. As rector of the Gregorian University of Rome, Father Francis Xavier Wernz was unknown to the world at large. As general of the Jesuits, he commands the implicit obedience of every member of the order the world over. No monarch in Christendom—not even the Czar of Russia—is invested with such autocratic power over his subjects. The ballot has conferred upon the German priest greater authority than the scepter.

When the votes had been counted and the result announced, the seventy-four other delegates from all quarters of the globe, whose ballots had made Father Wernz the head of their order, knelt reverently before him and kissed his hand. That act revealed the secret of the strength and power of the Jesuit organization. Thereby they acknowledged that henceforth he was their ruler—him whom they and every other Jesuit, high or low, are bound by the most solemn oaths to obey absolutely "within reason and right" in all that is not sinful. A few minutes before, Father Wernz had been a mere subordinate officer in an army of priests. Equally with the humblest soldier in the ranks, he had to do whatever his superior ordered. As one of the legion who must obey, he counted for little in worldly affairs. But as the man who must be obeyed by that legion, he became at once a factor in international affairs—one of the mighty of the earth. And men of authority in various ships of state began at once to take stock of him and to speculate as to what would be his policy and how it would affect their interests.

Greatness has been thrust upon Father Wernz unsought. According to the rules of the Jesuits, any father who canvasses for votes on his own behalf disqualifies himself. If he solicits votes for another, that father is likewise disqualified from becoming the autocrat of the order. No wire-pulling is permitted at their elections. So far was Father Wernz from anticipating the honor conferred upon him that when he left the university to participate in the election, he showed his secretary two packages of letters relating to the affairs of the university, one containing those to which answers should be given during his absence, and the other those which he had laid aside to answer personally on his return from the congregation. Some matters concerning arrangements for the new term he directed should remain over until after the election, when he would give them his own supervision.

But there can be no question of Father Wernz's fitness for the position of supreme command. There could have been no question, either, that any other of the seventy-five delegates, not incapacitated by age or infirmity, would have proved equal to its duties. Before a Jesuit priest attains a position which qualifies him for a delegate, he must have given abundant proof that he is a man of the keenest intelligence and iron will power.

Just as the Spartans of old strove for supremacy by cultivating physical strength, courage and endurance, so the Jesuits, in accordance with the system laid down by their founder, Ignatius Loyola, nearly 400 years ago, seek to obtain power and influence by the cultivation of their brains. To make a Jesuit necessitates seventeen years of the most strenuous study and training. There are no fledglings in their priesthood. They go forth into the world fully equipped for their labors. A fully professed Jesuit priest under the age of 34 is practically an impossibility. Only the strongest physically and intellectually—men of steel, who to indomitable will power unite the richest mental equipment—can attain to full rank.

The Jesuits constitute an intellectual cosmopolitan aristocracy, formed by a process of selection and elimination which inevitably weeds out all weaklings. It is this, combined with their blind obedience to their general, which accounts for the extraordinary influence they have wielded and their persistence despite persecution and decrees of expulsion innumerable. It is their quality and not their numbers which has made the Jesuits so formidable in the past, and makes them still a force to be reckoned with in the affairs of the nations, temporal as well as spiritual, although at the present time there are only 15,000 of them throughout the world.

The election of the "Black Pope" was held in the German College, formerly the Hotel Costanzi. Students from all over Germany come to the college to undergo the rigorous Jesuit training. In their bright scarlet robes they add much to the picturesqueness of the Eternal City, though their costume has led the irreverent to nickname them "cooked crabs." Father Wernz's predecessor, Father Martin, in the last years of his generalship, transferred the headquarters of the society to the college from Fiesola, near Florence, where they had been, as they said, "merely camped until better times."

That they should be thus established in Rome itself and elect their leader here is one of the amazing contradictions which illustrate the great power still exercised by the society through secret channels, of which no outsider knows anything. In 1873 a bill was passed suppressing, among other congregations, the general house of the Jesuits at Rome. That bill is still unrepealed, but they have been back here for several years unmolested. They claim that the German College enjoys the right of extra territoriality, so that the bill of suppression could not be enforced against it. It is extremely doubtful if the contention would stand in law, but the powers that be deem it prudent not to put the matter to the test. The toleration accorded the Jesuits in Rome, France attributes to the potent power of the Kaiser's mailed fist. It is said there that in the game of international politics he has formed an alliance with the Jesuits, and is credited with dark designs to establish the supremacy of German Jesuitism in France with the aid of the Pope. Yet in Germany itself, though the Jesuits are particularly numerous there at the present time, they are still officially under the ban of the law, and the annual motion for their restoration is invariably rejected by the government.

Many of the windows of the German College overlook a garden rich in palms, acacias, oleanders and flowering shrubs. On one side is its chapel dedicated to St. John Berckman's, with its stained-glass windows and Gothic architecture; on the other side are the grim barracks of the King's body guard of Cuirassiers. The buildings themselves and the martial music of the bugles alternating with the melodious chiming of the chapel bells, present a piquant contrast suggestive of the struggle in Rome between the spiritual and temporal powers.

Though housed in what had formerly been a hotel, the Jesuit delegates enjoyed none of the luxuries of hotel life. They occupied the rooms which had been vacated by the students. They are furnished in the plainest fashion, all alike, each having an iron bedstead, a chest of drawers, a table and a straight-backed, hard-bottomed chair. Of ornamentation there is none. A prie-Dieu with a crucifix and an image of St. Ignatius Loyola invite the occupant to devote his thoughts to pious meditations. The meals furnished the delegates were of the plainest character. But in these days, even the simple life cannot be lived without cooks and attendants. To prevent any of the menials from communicating any intelligence to the outside world of the deliberations that went on within, extraordinary precautions were adopted. The regular college barber was replaced by a Jesuit novitiate. Every servant was supervised by another nominal assistant. The man who purchased supplies was accompanied by some one whose duty it was to see that his conversation was discreet.

The election was conducted in strict accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the founder. Four days were devoted to what in a political body would be called a caucus—discussing candidates. And that these deliberations, despite the religious exercises that attended them, are productive of somewhat similar feelings to those which are evoked at political conventions, may be inferred from the fact that the delegates consumed enormous quantities of ice.

Notwithstanding the precautions taken, something did leak out concerning these deliberations. It became known that Father Meyer of St. Louis, Mo., although personally popular with the delegates, would not be chosen, because it was feared that in the free atmosphere of America, he had progressed further than his European coreligionists were prepared to follow him. Also it was learned that the choice would certainly fall on a German.

On the day of the election, the delegates heard mass in the chapel and then, forming a procession, entered the large hall of the German students, intoning the "Veni Creator." Most of them, especially the older ones, carried with them some bread and a bottle of water, for they had eaten nothing since the night before and could partake of no refreshment save bread and water until after the election was over. Nor could they leave the hall, the doors of which were locked, until they had chosen a General.

Two ballots were taken and Father Wernz was elected by seventy-one votes. An American journalist beat the Pope on the news. The result of the election was known in American newspaper offices before tidings of it was received in the Vatican. The enterprising correspondent obtained admission to the college, and managed to station himself near the door of the big hall. A bell sounded from within. That was the signal to the rector of the college, who was responsible for seeing that the seclusion of the delegates was not disturbed, to open the door. When the door was opened, the correspondent heard the secretary say, "We have as General Father Wernz." That was enough. He dashed off to the telegraph office and started the name of Father Wernz on a lightning journey across the Atlantic. It was some minutes later before Father Alfred Maertens, the Procurator-General of the Jesuits, left the college in a cab to tell the Pope who had been elected. He had to drive all across Rome and some ceremonial had to be gone through with before he was admitted to the Pontiff's presence. While he knelt at the feet of Pius X to deliver his message, printers in various American cities were putting the news in type.

The new General is a man of medium height with that thick-set, sturdy frame, which best sustains the strenuous life, mental or physical. He is good looking—might even be called handsome. But what most impresses one about his face is its strength. His clean-cut features are unmistakably those of a man who has mastered the lesson of self-mastery. He is reputed to be a rigid disciplinarian. He looks like a man who would spare neither himself nor others. His eyes are clear and alert—they are the eyes of a man who does not study human nature through books merely. Father Wernz is both a profound scholar and a polished man of the world. Father Vaughan, the Jesuit priest, who has been dubbed the English Savonarola, and has been flaying the "smart set" lately, says that Father Wernz knows the sins and follies of modern society as intimately as he does himself. He speaks English without a trace of foreign accent, Italian as fluently as his native German, and French and Spanish with consummate ease. In the matter of linguistic attainments, the "Black Pope," as he is called in Rome, presents a striking contrast to the "White Pope" in the Vatican who speaks only one living language—Italian.

Father Wernz was born in Wurtemberg sixty-four years ago. As a youngster, he gave little promise of the seriousness and piety of later life. The ordinary tasks of school boys were so easy for him that he devoted little time to his studies. But in other matters, he gave evidence of the spirit of the lad who is born for leadership. At a very early age he showed a passion to excel in things that appeal most to healthy boys, and a contempt for the weakness of the flesh. One day when all the pupils of the school were deep in their studies, young Wernz was found to be absent. Later he was discovered unconscious on the floor of the gymnasium. At that time it was great physical strength which seemed to him the most desirable of all human attainments and, disregarding the punishment he was inflicting on himself, he had exercised until he fell completely exhausted to the floor.

Whatever he undertook had to be done immediately. He did not learn to swim as most boys do—by slow stages with one foot on terra firma. One day, when alone, he boldly flung himself into the stream, far beyond his depth and was nearly drowned before he managed to struggle back to the shore. But he had learned to swim and became such an adept at it that thrice he rescued other boys from watery graves. In these unregenerate days, he was not averse to a fistic encounter and whatever the result, the other fellow always had reason to remember that he had been in a fight.

It was in these days, according to a story which is told in Rome, that an old gypsy woman predicted that he would live to be a greater man than either monarch or pontiff. In the past at all events, it would have been held by many that as General of the Jesuits he had attained that distinction, for "Black Popes" have more than once controlled "White Popes" and humbled the pride of kings. But in these days, in theory at least, the Jesuit General is a submissive subordinate of the representative of St. Peter.

It was probably not at all due to the gypsy's prophecy—if it was ever made—that young Wernz at 15 gave up all thoughts of becoming a hero of the fighting type and entered a Jesuit college. His progress was unusually rapid. He left Germany when the Jesuits were expelled. At the novitiate for German Jesuits at Ditton Hall, near Liverpool, he spent some years as professor of canon law. Canon law is his specialty. He knows more about it than any man living and has published four bulky volumes on the subject. In 1883 he was appointed a professor in the Gregorian University and two years ago he was made rector of the university. He is adviser to the Sacred Congregation of Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs and of the Index. He is credited with being a man of progressive ideas, but that comprehensive phrase, in his case at least, does not include acceptance of the so-called "higher criticism." He stands above all things for hard work. "He is the right man in the right place," said Pius X, when informed of his election.

A Fair Proposition.

The following notice found in the shingle mills of Western Washington seems to be a fair promise of a square deal as between man and man:

We will open and operate our mills only under the following conditions:

This is strictly an open shop.

There shall be no steward in this mill.

We retain the inalienable right to hire and discharge any man we see fit.

We decline to confer with any committee or representative of any organization whatever regarding the conduct of our business.

We propose to operate our mills continuously until Christmas, unavoidable accidents excepted.

We agree to pay the same scale of wages that has been in effect in this mill in the past.

We propose to treat the employés of our shingle mill with the same consideration that is due from one man to another and shall exact the same from the men.

Any grievance that our men may have will be promptly and thoroughly investigated and any injustice will be corrected.—[West Coast Lumberman.

CITY'S GARBAGE PLANT FAILURE.

Milwaukee Will Abolish the Costly White Elephant.

Eight Years' Trial of Works Brings Immense Loss.

Grafters Use Reformers' Idea to Loot.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) Oct. 16.—After a trial of over eight years, Milwaukee is about to abolish its municipal garbage plant. Health Commissioner Bading, who assumed charge of the health department some months ago when Mayor Becker was elected, favors returning to the contract system, and says that by so doing the city can save from $50,000 to $60,000 a year. Since he assumed office, Dr. Bading has wiped out many evils in the operation of the plant, but even then he finds it a hopeless proposition and has notified the Common Council that another plant must be obtained.

The municipal plant has been a failure from the very beginning. When it was erected, it was soon found that the cost of building would be much greater than the original estimates. After long and tiresome delays it was finally announced that it was ready for operation. A few months after, it was discovered that the plant could not be operated with the number of men originally estimated, and that many times that number had to be employed. Then it developed that the plant was inadequate for a city of Milwaukee's size. Later the building began to crumble together and it was shown that it had been erected on a quicksand bottom. In this manner matters went from bad to worse. Extensive repairs have been made from time to time, and it has finally been decided to give up the plant and return to the contract system.

NEST FOR GRAFTERS.

But that is not the only trouble Milwaukee has experienced with municipal ownership. The administration of the plant has been as big a failure as the building of it. When Health Commissioner Bading assumed office, he found that the garbage plant had been made the dumping ground for political workers. A number of positions were held by politicians who did not even make a pretense of doing more than drawing their salaries. He cut off a high-priced garbage inspector, who was getting $1800 for a position which a private concern would have considered overpaid at $1200.

Half a dozen other inspectors were dismissed and their work assigned to some one else. The place was overrun with minor positions and "rushing the can" consumed considerable time of the employés. Petty grafting also was unearthed.

NEVER WEIGHED THE COAL.

A number of the garbage collectors held their positions because of the influence of politicians. One politician had provided a number of the collectors with positions, but had compelled the collectors to buy their horses and wagons from him at exorbitant prices. Later, some of these collectors got back their money by collecting garbage outside of the city limits and collecting fees for the work and pocketing the money. It was also learned that the city bought coal by the wholesale at the plant but never weighed it or checked up the deliveries.

The coal was dumped outside of the plant and thousands of pounds were stolen every month by people in the neighborhood, who got their fuel supply from the pile at the garbage plant. Dr. Bading has tried to eliminate these evils, and has succeeded in cutting down the cost of disposing of a ton of garbage from $4.15 in 1906 to $3.05 in 1906, but he declares that the city can still save $50,000 by going back to the contract system.

MUST ABANDON PLANT.

"Our system is a failure and is necessarily extravagant," said Dr. Bading. "We cannot even burn waste paper in our plant. It was built to burn garbage and we have to call on the householder not to put paper in the garbage receptacles. We cannot burn manure. What the city needs is a modern system of incineration and there are several contractors who are ready to build a plant for the produce they can get out of the garbage. I have examined many plants in the country, and all of them are far more economical than ours. The systems in Detroit, Dayton, Toledo and Cleveland are as near perfect as it is possible to make them at this time. Minneapolis, Duluth, Atlanta and Toronto also have good systems. The Chicago plant is far superior to ours. I have recommended to the Council that the plant be abandoned and that a committee of Aldermen go to some of the cities I have mentioned and convince themselves that Milwaukee is wasting money in continuing as it does at present.

"The conditions at the plant have been bad. There has been too much politics. How can good service be expected when men have been compelled to indirectly pay for their positions by paying exorbitant prices for their horses and wagons and a percentage of the salary they make? Little wonder that they should try to collect a few pennies by hiring out to collect garbage in the suburbs at the expense of the city."

Feazed the Lawyer.

"Lawyers in their cross-examination have no right to browbeat innocent and well-intentioned witnesses," said Mayor Jones of Cleveland. "When a lawyer, misconducting himself in this way, gets the worst of it, it is a good thing. It teaches him a lesson.

"An honest old gentleman was being cross-examined the other day in an Ohio court.

"'Was the defendant's tone, then, angry?' said the cross-examining lawyed to him.

"'Well, if it were not ——' he began, but the lawyer interrupted.

"'Come, come,' he said in the blustering tone that we all know. 'Come, come. We have had enough "wells" and "buts." Give me a plain answer Was his voice angry? Yes, or no?'

"'Really,' said the witness, 'I can't, in justice to all concerned, reply "yes" or "no" to such a question. Either answer would be misleading. You see, I ——'

"'Do you mean to say,' shouted the lawyer, 'that there is any question in the world to which a plain yes or no could not be answered?'

"'I do,' said the old man, quietly.

"'Could you put such a question to me?'

"'I could.'

"'Do it then. Do it at once, sir. I defy you to ask me a question that I cannot answer with a straightforward yes or no.'

"The old gentleman leaned forward, and, smiling a little, he addressed the lawyer, slowly and deliberately, with these words:

"'Will you tell us whether, in your own opinion—in your own opinion, mind you, for no one else can have any possible doubt upon the subject—will you tell us whether you are as big an idiot as you look?'"

Big Demand for Plate Glass.

Referring to the big increase in the demand for plate glass during the past few years the current issue of the Commoner and Glassworker is inclined to attribute it in no small part to the advent of the automobile as a popular means of conveyance. It says:

"The plate glass industry has undergone great changes during the past few years, and the many uses for the product has resulted in an excellent demand. The automobile interests have been an important factor in this demand in recent years. Plate glass plates are used for the protection of the chauffeur, and searchlights also utilize a considerable quantity.

"There is also a demand of some consequence for table lights, used not only in office fixtures, but also for hospitals, door lights and in the way of novelty mirrors, hand glasses, standing adjustable shaving mirrors, shelving in show windows, street display cases and many other uses the outcome of modern demand. There is no question that many other uses, now undreamed of, will be found for this commodity, as the field is ever widening and is practically illimitable.'

Compared with the scale of the globe, the volcanic manifestations which we know are those of small, spluttering known are those of small, sputtering either in the ancient rock sections nor on the present surface, of very profound origin.

It is not difficult to construct a theory which readily explains the birth of new islands in the Pacific and the disappearance of old landmarks. On the American continent volcanoes are limited to the Pacific Slope, along which they may be traced from Cape Horn to Alaska. In South America there are numbers of these mountains, of which Cotopaxi, rising to a height of 19,500 feet in the Ecuadorean Andes, is the most notable example. Central America has nearly 100 volcanic peaks, some of which are extinct, while others are at present quite active. In Mexico there are seven well-defined volcanic peaks, chief among which is Popocatapetl.

OF RECENT ORIGIN.

Two of these volcanoes actually cropped out at Pacific islands to which they gave birth. There is the volcano on the Hawaiian Islands and there is a new volcano on the Island of Savaii, the largest of the Samoan group, which also owe their origin to volcanic activity. The new volcano on the Island of Savaii is a little over a year old, having made its outburst on August 5, 1905.

It came after a series of about fifty earthquakes, some of them very violent. A photograph of the volcano taken only a few weeks after it first came into view shows an enormous mass of volcanic matter heaped around the crater. This mass was lifted from the subterranean depths by the eruptive forces to a height of at least six or seven miles and scattered in the first two or three weeks around the chimney-like vent through which it had passed.

We do not know from what depths under the earth's surface volcanic material may be brought, but the volcanic islands of Samoa rise from sea depths of from 25,000 to 28,000 feet, and the millions of tons of outpourings in the volcano of Savaii were carried up through the throat that opened from subterranean regions to the surface of this island mass.

This is the second volcano that has come to light on this island within three years. All the islands of the group, excepting the coral islands around them, are of volcanic origin, but there is no evidence that volcanic disturbances have occurred on any of them, excepting Savaii, for thousands of years.

The new volcano is in the interior of the island, about seven miles from Maugaafi, the volcano that was found in September, 1902. In all phases of these outbursts the recent eruption has been far more severe than its predecessor.

The spectacle at times has been magnificent as well as terrifying, and though Apia, the capital of German Samoa, is about 60 miles away, the inhabitants, from the heights above the town, have at times been able to discern the black outpourings that covered as with a pall the skies above Savain, and more frequently they have seen at night the glow in the sky reflected from the molten lava that has been flowing in main and branch streams to or toward the northern coast.

Men who have seen the spectacle of the last few months say that the grandest sight of all has been the dropping of several of the lava streams into the sea. Some of them have fallen over steep cliffs 100 feet high into the ocean with a mighty splashing of the water and a deafening hiss as clouds of steam arise. The water penetrates through many crevasses to the heart of the molten mass, giving rise to the continual detonation of explosions which blow fragments of the lava high into the air.

COLOR CONSTANTLY CHANGING.

The color of the steam is constantly changing from white to black or yellow or a mixture of all three, according to the sulphurous or other mineral ingredients that are mingled with it. The surrounding waters are raised to boiling heat, hundreds of thousands of fish have been killed and the little coral animal has been destroyed for a long stretch along the shore. In places the advancing lava has pushed through the coral reefs and broken them down.

One of the observers says that the scene by night is far more imposing than by day. For hundreds of feet the lava mass rises above the water and looks like a red mass of iron, out of which jets of white flame are constantly emerging.

One of the lava streams in February made an average advance of 404 feet a day, and was twenty days in reaching the northeast cape of the island. Another stream flowed 3336 feet in six days, and was steadily approaching the coast at the latest advices.

The Samoan Zeitung reported that at the beginning of March there was more lava in motion than at any previous time, and it seemed as though there would be no end to the eruption. The volcanic activity, which began just a year ago, gradually subsided, and it was thought in November that the phenomena were practically at an end, for a time at least.

In December, however, the eruptions began again with redoubled fury, and there is no telling when peace and quiet will again bless the lonely island. Savaii is off the usual ocean routes, and communication with it is neither regular nor frequent, and so it happens that news only occasionally reaches us from the land that is now the victim of such troublous times.

Are not the births of these volcanoes alone sufficient to explain the disappearance of old islands and the appearance of new ones in the Pacific, without taking into account the subterranean activity which gave rise to the California shake up, and which must have seriously disturbed the bed of the Pacific?

GREAT CIRCLE OF FIRE.

The so-called "great circle of fire" around the Pacific Ocean is found to produce the largest number of recorded earthquakes. In Central California alone, there were observed between 1860 and 1897 no fewer than 1096 earthquakes at 113 epicenters. Owari, Japan, is much more frequently shaken, 3250 shocks being recorded at 48 epicenters, or an average frequency of 24.70. The mean average of frequency at Tokio, however, is 92.25, the highest average in the world. It should be remembered that these are seismologic observations, made of those shocks which were perceptible to the human senses without the aid of instruments.

The Central America and South Mexican seismic regions indicate a volcanic origin. These regions are famous for their volcanoes, which are more numerous and closely adjacent than anywhere else in the world. Throughout the 1500 miles of volcanic coast line earthquakes have always been abundant and often highly destructive. In 772 quakes of which records have been made it was found that their epicenters occurred in close proximity to the volcanoes, and never more than four or five miles from them. It is a remarkable fact that none of the notable quakes observed in this district suggests a tectonic origin.

The world may be startled by the discoveries which the government will make when it goes at the task of recharting the Pacific. Islands now on the map may have disappeared, and may have been succeeded by others.

Such discoveries will only be in keeping with the history of the earth. Gigantic and overwhelming have been the changes wrought in the earth's surface by convulsions from within. Before the authentic records of history had their beginning, legend and carved hieroglyph told of the fearful and awe-inspiring work of earthquakes and great natural catastrophes.

"Jealousy on the part of a woman is the best evidence of her love," declared Superior Judge Frank B. Ogden in Oakland in denying a divorce to either Dr. S. C. Horner or his wife.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all his different methods, and can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his method of treatment.

Ten years ago a reputable dentist of Virginia told me that a certain molar tooth could not be satisfactorily saved, and that it would probably not be of service for one year. Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others, and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process, and made only by us.

THE HOLY PEOPLE OF SHILOH, MAINE.

BY PROF. JAMES MAIN DIXON.

THE sufferings that are now undergone by the too trustful religionists who have built a home for themselves in Maine, attract general attention. Who are these people and what are their peculiar tenets? Some years ago, when summering in Maine, on the shores of Casco Bay, I learned of their existence and paid the place a visit. Having my camera with me, I was able to secure several good pictures; but the buildings were then incomplete. They have since been completed and are able to accommodate a large community.

The place is named Shiloh, or "Rest," and realizes the dreams of a quondam Baptist missionary named Sandford, who asserts that he has been endowed with special healing powers as an instrument of the Holy Ghost. He has the gift of making disciples, and in the month of August, 1899, he was able to gather around him, in a pine grove close to the site of Shiloh, a huge gathering of disciples and inquirers. Since then the place has been the home of the sect.

Shiloh is situated on a sandy eminence crowning the right bank of the River Androscoggin. It is this limpid stream which passes through the town Brunswick, famous for its college. Here Henry Wadsworth, Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne were students together eighty years ago; and it was during the early married life of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, when her husband was on the staff of the Bowdoin College, that she wrote her "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The "pines whisper" on the banks of this historic stream.

Sandford is a Maine man by birth and by education. He was born forty-four years ago in the township of Bowdoinham, on the left bank of the Androscoggin, and became an ardent Christian at the age of eighteen, that is, in the year 1880. He was, he tells us, "Consecrated some years later at a Young Men's Christian Association convention and sanctified at a Methodist camp meeting in 1887. Having gone up in the following year to Northfield to attend Mr. Moody's summer school, he there signed a statement that he was wiling to and desirous, God permitting, to become a foreign missionary. He prepared himself for pastoral work at the Free Baptist Seminary at Lewiston, Me., and thereafter served as minister of the Baptist Church at Sopsham, the eastern suburb of the town of Brunswick.

South of Portland, Me., is the town of Old Orchard, which of recent years has been a religious center. Sandford attended the meetings of a Dr. Simpson there, and heard a good deal about the speedy evangelization of the heathen. This led him to make a tour of the world, visiting Europe, the Holy Land, India, the Straits Settlements, China and Japan. What he saw in his travels convinced him that not the slightest hope could be cherished of evangelizing the globe, within a reasonably short period, were present missionary methods adhered to. He longed for the signs and wonders of apostolic days, by which alone he expected success. When he returned he gave up his pulpit and commenced itinerant work in the "back side of the desert," the name he gives to his native township in Maine.

At a convention held in New Hampshire in the summer of 1893 he formed with his friends an organization which they entitled "The World's Evangelization Crusade on Apostolic Principles." In the following year, on August 2, 1894, he "definitely received what was infinitely better than salvation, consecration, sanctification, or even power for service, 'The Personal Abiding Holy Ghost,' who moved into his temple, never more to depart, but from thence to send rivers of living water to all Israel and all nations."

A Bible school was opened shortly afterwards, to promote these ideas, and the disciples helped their teacher to erect a frame building, with a seven-storied turret, surmounted by a gilded crown. The architecture and handiwork are all their own. All who join the community are required to surrender their earthly belongings, and to devote themselves to prayer and labor. The tower, which is named "Jerusalem," is consecrated to perpetual prayer.

The extraordinary claims made by the elect of Shiloh that they can heal the sick have brought thither the maimed and the halt in crowds. According to the Sandfordites, the signs and wonders that accompanied the proclamation of the everlasting gospel in the first century have reappeared in our times in the "back side of the desert."

The people of the neighborhood show a disposition to scoff at these pretensions. The process of casting out the demons is so noisy as to disturb the slumbers of neighbors residing nearly a mile off. I picked up one of their hymn books and read therein this significant piece of doggerel:

"In His name demons we cast out
And set the captives free;
The devil we can always rout.
Resist him and he'll flee."

Patients who come for the faith cure, when they show signs of distrust, are told that they have a devil within them, and a tremendous "shouting and routing" results. The remedy is a drastic one, and no doubt helps to fill the overflowing cemetery.

Eight years ago Sandford again visited Jerusalem, accompanied by one of his lieutenants named Gleason. From the Holy City he sent a long paper dealing with the question of the lost ten tribes of Israel. The paper is remarkable for its complete absence of local color. The writer has gone to the Holy Land, not as a keen observer, nor as a historical student, but solely as a theorist. The centuries intervening since the destruction of Jerusalem might never have been so far as Mr. Sandford's outlook is concerned.

He is thoroughly convinced, from the careful reading of holy scriptures, that the English and American peoples are the lost ten tribes of Israel. The English he identifies with Ephraim, and the Americans with Manasseh, but fails to account for the other eight tribes. So confident is he in his belief that he has named one of the four towers which adorn his building "Ephraim," and another "Manasseh." Their appropriate flags are the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes.

According to Sandford's theology, the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob all descended to Joseph, to whom was promised the ascending over his sons, Ephraim and Manasseh. In Jacob's parting words to his family, the sons of Joseph are especially favored: "He (Manasseh) shall become a people and shall be great, but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations. And he blessed them, saying, God make thee as Ephraim and Manasseh." And the teaching at Shiloh is that the fulfillment of these wonderful blessings will be wrought out in this age, for we read that Jacob called unto his sons and said: "Gather yourselves together that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days."

Now, says Sandford, Israel was to be, first, a great nation; second, exceedingly multitudinous; third, irresistible in power; fourth, a royal nation among nations, princely in character as well as regal in power and influence; six, a nation possessing in the last days God's special favor and blessing in every respect, and, seven, signally blessed in population, power, nobility of character, for the one express purpose of acting for the Almighty as a world-wide herald of the gospel.

"What place do you think of as you read?" he triumphantly asks. "Especially what two nations are of the same blood, for Ephraim and Manasseh were brothers? The people we are seeking must be two nations, and yet one race. The requirement thrust aside every nation on the European and Asiatic continents. The United States is a great nation, England is a greater nation, ruling over sixty colonies and three hundred and fifty millions of people, is a great dominant power among the nations, and there too, the great and the greater nation are of the same blood and in every particular meet the sevenfold description of the text. No other two nations on the globe meet the description. These two do. Our search is ended. The lost is found"

This explains the prophets great interest in the Holy Land, and his frequent visit to it, made in his yacht. Indeed, this finding of the lost ten tribes of Israel bulks as largely as the Holy Ghost in his peculiar system of doctrine.

TRUE TYPHOID FEVER.

A More Complex Disease Than It Is Commonly Credited With Being.

A correspondent of the Chicago Chronicle, who signs himself "C. Mayo, physiological chemist," says the fact is, typhoid is a far more complex disease in its transmission than the average health officer dreams. German university students in 1878 made the foolhardy experiment of introducing fresh dejections from sufferers from true typhoid fever, in small quantities, such as would be likely to adhere to hands, unwashed vessels, etc., into their systems, with entirely negative results, proving, as in other disease, like cholera, where the same experiment was made, and that the fresh dejections do not give typhoid or cholera, that the germ has to pass, outside the human body, through a complex as yet utterly dark sequence of developments before it is fit to cause typhoid fever.

We know that the large "germ," or parasite trichina spiralis must undergo a journey through hogs before it can travel from man to man via hog; the tapeworm is four totally different things in perhaps two or three animals before it is implantable again in man. Similar in typhoid. The germs causing the present epidemic are the fertile descendants of ancestors which may have been in a man two or three years ago, have in the meanwhile traveled in the soil, in water, hundreds of miles and are now again adhering to vessles, hands or tools with which food comes in contact. In this food they go through a preparatory stage to ripen again in the human intestines. Their ptomaine, or specific poisonous product, the typhotoxicon, has been isolated, analyzed by Prof. Beyer of Berlin; it is the crystallized element which causes the headache, drowsiness, stupor; it can even be made artificially, as it is a relatively simple amyl-phenylamine derivative.

A typhoid epidemic once started in a region can only be cut short by persons eating and drinking absolutely no unboiled food or water, milk, fruits; the next epidemic, which will be due to the excrements from this one, can be prevented or very much reduced by destroying all offal. Unfortunately, well-proved cases of chronic typhoid exist, people who carry for years infected spots in their intestines without strikingly poor health, and they will always be foci of new epidemics. These chronic cases are difficult to diagnose and have only been found at autopsies. Hence, some typhoid will always be with us, but fresh peaches, apples, grapes picked with dirty hands having ripe germs on them, drinking vessels washed in contaminated water, can be avoided by careful people. Fortunately, typhoid is not really dangerous; only 5 per cent. die, 5 per cent. are made invalids, while 90 per cent. completely recover, while at the most one in 100 catches it, even in "infected" cities; one true attack immunizes the patient for ten years.

OWNERSHIP OF POLAR REGIONS.

NATIONALITY OF SPITZBERGEN TO BE ARBITRATED.

Archipelago Discovered to Contain Great Mineral Wealth—United States Also Interested Because of Our Alaskan Possessions and Questions About Hudson Bay Rights.

In obedience to popular sentiment in Norway, King Haakon has approached recently the various maritime powers of the world, through diplomatic channels, with the view to arriving at some international agreement on the subject of Spitzbergen and the various Polar regions, both Arctic and Antarctic, writes ex-Attaché in Baltimore American. Negotiations are in progress about the matter, and King Leopold is devoting a considerable amount of trouble towards securing the selection of Brussels as the rendezvous of the congress, now in progress of organization for the settlement of the question. For he realizes that since Belgium is not, strictly speaking, a maritime power, it would have no voice in a congress of that kind; whereas if it was to be held in his capital, and under his presidency, it would be difficult to exclude him from participating in the deliberations, or from the advantages accruing to the nations represented at the convention.

If Spitzbergen has become once again an international issue it is because of the recent discovery of vast mineral deposits in the archipelago, which are exciting the cupidity not merely of adventurous people in various parts of the world, but also of a number of the governments. It is to the whaling, the elderdown and the fur industry that the Spitzbergen archipelago has owed its importance for the last 300 years, and, at times, the rivalry in these trades has been keen enough to give rise to bloodshed and to international controversies in connection therewith. But the discovery of gold and silver mineral deposits is calculated to render the disputes for the possession of these islands much more acute, and, moreover, with the development of American, British and Russian interests within the Arctic Circle, there are grave political reasons why Spitzbergen and other polar territories should not be left at the disposal of any power that sees fit to take armed and commercial possession thereof, regardless of prior rights

It is this question of prior rights that the International Polar Congress will be called upon to determine. Those relating to the Spitzbergen archipelago are of a rather complicated character.

The archipelago has been successively claimed by Great Britain on the pretext that the islands were discovered by Sir Hugh Willoughby; by the Dutch as the result of the expedition of Barentz in 1596 and Henry Hudson in 1607; by the Russians on account of finding the archipelago abandoned in the early part of the eighteenth century, and by the Norwegians, who took possession after the Russians abandoned it after about a hundred years' occupancy. The Norwegians made the archipelago the center of their elderdown industry. So important did this trade become that by the middle of the last century the Spitzbergen trade had developed into the chief-source of prosperity of the Norwegian city of Hammerfest. Since then the entire Spitzbergen trade has been in the hands of the Norwegians, and, as the latter constitute the whole population, it is only natural that they should be anxious for the protection of their home government, and for the administration of its laws throughout the islands. But when a few years ago King Oscar of Sweden broached the subject of extending his Norwegian scepter over the archipelago, Russia and the Netherlands raised such a storm of protest, on the ground of their prior rights to the islands, that he was obliged to abandon his project.

The matter has remained in abeyance until last summer, when the discovery of all sorts of valuable mineral deposits on the islands, including peculiarly rich veins of gold, brought about a rush to Spitzbergen of such a crowd of people from various parts of the world, as to render absolutely necessary the immediate constitution of some form of government for the maintenance of law and order. That is why the question of the ownership of the islands will have to be settled without further delay by the international congress demanded by King Haakon, and which King Leopold insists should meet under his own presidency at Brussels. The congress will on the same occasion be called upon to agree upon some scheme for the delimitation of the various spheres of influence in the Arctic and Antarctic Oceans, so as to prevent the recurrence of such a controversy as that which was created by the raising of the German flag on Bear Island, some seven years ago.

America, for instance, cannot afford to have any foreign power taking possession of islands off the Arctic Coast of Alaska, even if beyond the three-mile limit. Russia, Denmark (which includes Greenland among her colonial dependencies,) Norway and, above all, Great Britain, with her long range of northern coast of the Dominion of Canada and the more or less adjacent islands, are similarly situated Great Britain, indeed, was considerably disturbed sometime back by the discovery of the fact that the American flag had been raised, not only on islands along the northern coast of Canada, but also on the islands of that great inland sea known as Hudson Bay.

Three years ago, indeed, it was actually found that the American flag had been raised on the mainland in the neighborhood of Portland Point, on the eastern shores of Hudson Bay, and that there were a number of American settlers in possession of certain harbors of the bay who refused to be amenable to Canadian law, on the ground that it had been No Man's Land until they had raised the Stars and Stripes there. The matter is still the subject of diplomatic negotiation between Great Britain and the United States, as is also the claim of England to regard Hudson Bay as a mere clausum and to exercise exclusive sovereignty over that huge 600,000 square miles of inland sea. The issue is in a fair way of being settled by means of a compromise, according to the terms of which England's sovereignty over Hudson Bay is recognized in return for special favors and advantages being conceded to American fishermen and settlers there. But the trouble, which might have developed into a serious crisis, would never have arisen had the two questions been decided which are now about to engage the attention of the International Polar Conference—namely, as to the operation of "squatter sovereignty" and loss of title through abandonment and failure to exercise sovereignty; and, secondly, the determination of spheres of influence and of the claims of powers to Arctic and Antarctic lands discovered for the first time by their subjects.

Dr. S. H. Frazer of Berkeley has invented a new language for universal use and has already submitted his theory of language to the savants, scholars and linguists of the university town. He has named it "Trinity" because it combines Greek, Latin and Anglo-Saxon features. It contains 34 letters of which 26 are English and 8 are Greek.

GEN. BELL, CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE U. S. ARMY, TELLS ABOUT ARMY LIFE AND HIS OWN CAREER, BEGUN IN RICE FIELD.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Oct. 15.—It was in the ashy blur of dawn. A colonel of the infantry, with the eager eye, the cunning [illegible] and the ready weapons of a scout, [illegible] riding along in advance of his [illegible].

[illegible] was a hurried but cautious [illegible] the jungle ahead. Then seven [illegible] insurgents, lean as panthers, [illegible] into the open. Turning a [illegible] in the way they vanished; [illegible] the glimmer of a brown viper in [illegible] and grass. [illegible] colonel galloped forward and [illegible] wild volley, into the earth and [illegible] head, as he swept around the [illegible]. He opened fire, ten bullets to [illegible], and a pistol in each hand.

GEN. FRANKLIN BELL, Chief of Staff.

[illegible] noise of his fusillade [illegible] shots in the terror of [illegible] and they fled, pinging [illegible] as they ran—all but [illegible] crimson and limp at [illegible] borrowed to safety in a [illegible].

[illegible] and two men, spitting [illegible] ridden down in a field [illegible] night. For this feat of [illegible] Franklin Bell was given [illegible].

[illegible] in the army that [illegible] fearless. He went to [illegible] captain of cavalry [illegible] brigadier-general. Today, as chief of [illegible] mainly the most powerful [illegible] Funston, the most [illegible] in America. [illegible] commanding general of the [illegible] his honors in the law, [illegible] removal or degradation [illegible] in his own skill and [illegible] contemptuous toward the [illegible] of the War Department, [illegible] a nuisance, with a [illegible] spiteful tongue in his [illegible] maneuvered him out [illegible] book and off of the face [illegible]. In his place there is a [illegible], who is chosen by and [illegible] lies wholly within the [illegible] President. He is the [illegible] of the nation. It was [illegible] spectacular leap from a [illegible] in 1898 to the chieftaincy [illegible] in 1906.

[illegible] Bell is an immensely im[illegible], not only at home, but [illegible] without any doubt an in[illegible]. How does it feel to be [illegible]? Is courage merely a spasm? And cowards, what of [illegible] Napoleon have run [illegible] charged into the jaws of a [illegible] Gatling guns? How many [illegible] are there in the United [illegible]. Moreover, there were other [illegible] Gen. Bell almost turned [illegible] and showed me his heels. [illegible] settled down, and a fierce[illegible] he was, as he sat at his [illegible] eyed me in polite antago[illegible]. "[illegible] promised you," he said, "and [illegible] my word, but this is the first [illegible] will be the last time that I [illegible] interviewed." It is said in [illegible] that Bell's heart is as bulky [illegible] feather bed, and just as warm.

"[illegible] was the photographers," he [illegible]. "They camped in my office [illegible] to yield to get rid of them. [illegible] are beginning to come from [illegible] and Philadelphia. If I [illegible] I should become a newspaper [illegible] I-I-I-" Whereat his round [illegible]—sometimes they are al[illegible]-blazed like a barrel of [illegible]. He stood up, all of five [illegible] nine inches, a seasoned cav[illegible] grown a little thick around [illegible] and then sat down again [illegible] energy and impatience. He [illegible] years old last January, was [illegible] Kentucky, and graduated [illegible] West Point. So all the elements [illegible] propitious for an outburst.

"[illegible] course, of course," I replied, [illegible] into smoother waters, "but [illegible] language understood by civil[illegible] what is the difference between [illegible] methods of fighting and those [illegible] for instance, during the War [illegible]?" This inquiry was an [illegible] the coffee; personal matters [illegible] from those which were [illegible] and there was no more [illegible] for some time.

"[illegible] a hard question to answer [illegible] words," Gen. Bell replied. "[illegible] causes for success or [illegible] battle are the same now as [illegible] Civil War. If the armies [illegible] equal size, approximately, the [illegible] who placed his troops in the [illegible] tactical position, having in [illegible] theater of war and matters [illegible], would win the fight. Even [illegible] would have to throw the bulk [illegible] against the key of the [illegible] at the right time. This was [illegible] and is now. Strategy has [illegible] but little. The means of ob[illegible] tactical advantages, however, [illegible] changed much and are due pri[illegible] improvement in firearms [illegible] artillery. Our old rifle was [illegible] caliber and low initial veloc[illegible] effective carrying distance [illegible] was not more, perhaps, [illegible] 800 yards. The same was [illegible] field artillery. Now we have [illegible] small caliber which is ef[illegible] from 2000 to 3000 yards, [illegible] field artillery is effec[illegible] three to five miles. [illegible] improvement in weapons [illegible] in modifying tactical dis[illegible] in doing away to a con[illegible] with the massing of [illegible] large bodies. It is now thought best to operate more generally in open, or skirmish order, than was done in the past. The principal difference, therefore, between modern and Civil War methods is the reliance placed on open-order fighting. Nowadays much depends on the personal initiative of the soldier and his individuality in action. In our army great attention is given to marksmanship and to developing soldiers as shots. The proportion of field artillery to an army is larger than in former times, yet it is doubtful, because of the increased distances at which it fights, if its actual destructiveness is any greater, considering the number of guns employed. Broadly speaking, battles will be won in the future, as in the past, by the preponderance of infantry fire."

"What do you suppose would have happened if Hannibal, Julius Caesar, or Napoleon had come face to face with three or four batteries of Gatling guns?"

"Their legions would have scattered to the four winds."

"What is the present size of the regular army?"

"In round numbers, 60,000 men. It is the policy of the United States to maintain an army no greater than is necessary to perform the functions of a national police force and to form a nucleus on which to build in the event of war. We have thirty regiments of infantry, fifteen of cavalry, what is the equivalent of thirteen regiments of artillery, three battalions of engineers, twelve companies of signal corps, a hospital corps, and other essential staff organizations. The President can increase this force to 100,000 if he thinks it to be necessary, but the appropriations made annually by Congress are for the minimum strength of 60,000 men."

"How many national guardsmen, or State soldiers, are there in the country?"

"About 115,000. Under the provisions of the Dick law, which extends considerable Federal assistance to State troops, it is believed the effectiveness of the militia will be materially increased. This year we had seven camps where the regular army was concentrated. Camps of instruction, I would call them. The organized militia of the various States was invited to these camps, and guardsmen from all parts of the country joined the regular troops in tent life, field work, and so on."

"What would be the fighting force of the nation, should there be a protracted war with a first-rate power?"

"Only a count, such as the Israelites made under Moses, would show how many men there are in the United States between the ages of 18 and 45. Mr. Roosevelt received about 7,600,000 votes in 1904, Judge Parker almost 5,100,000, and other candidates something like 800,000. The census of 1900, however, showed that there were 21,300,000 men of voting age in the country. These figures, possibly, might be used as a basis for a rough calculation, but I would not enter into such an undertaking. Of course, every man of military age could be drafted, but that will never be necessary."

"What was the object in creating a general staff for the army, and where did the idea originate?"

"The general staff policy has been adopted for all the armies of Europe. It was first advocated in this country by the late Col. Emory Upton, after a visit of inspection to Europe in the early '70s. Mr. Root, while Secretary of War, convinced Congress that a general staff was necessary, and the law for its establishment was passed. The President signed it in February, 1903. The duties of the staff include the preparation of plans for the national defense and for the mobilization of troops in time of war; the investigation of all questions affecting the efficiency of the army and its readiness for military operations; the rendering of professional assistance to the Secretary of War and to general officers of the army, and the performance of such other service as may be prescribed by the President."

"Is the army a good place for a young man, either as an officer or a private?"

"It is. The training which a commissioned officer or a private gets is excellent. It develops character, self-reliance, self-control, regularity of habit, cleanliness and self-respect. The education, ability and talent which are necessary to make a good army officer would bring him success in business and elsewhere. The experience gained by the average soldier after five or ten years of service is of great value to him. He learns to do things for himself, to be orderly in his way of living, to be clean in his dress and person, and to make the best use of what he knows. So he goes back to civil life a broader and more capable man."

"What is the pay of a soldier, from private to major-general, and what does he receive on retirement?"

"The lieutenant-general gets $11,000 a year. The pay of a major-general is $7500; of a brigadier-general, $5500; of a colonel, $3500; of a lieutenant-colonel, $3000; of a major, $2500; of a captain, mounted, $2000; of a captain, not mounted, $1800; of a first lieutenant, mounted, $1600; of a first lieutenant, not mounted, $1500; of a second lieutenant, mounted, $1500; of a second lieutenant, not mounted, $1400, and of a private $13 a month, or $156 a year. The pay is increased, from colonel downward, as the length of service increases. The retirement pay of officers is three-fourths of the pay received while in active duty."

"Has a private soldier a likely chance of becoming an officer?"

"Any soldier in the army, after two years' service by passing the required examination, can become an officer. That is the law of the land. Each year enlisted men do qualify and are made second lieutenants. There is a school for them at Fort Leavenworth, Kan."

"A recruiting officer at the South recently said that cigarette smoking disqualified a large number of young men in that region for service in the army?"

"I can only answer that question in a general way. Excessive cigarette smoking, long continued, would probably disqualify young men for passing the rigid physical examination for enlistment. It is well known that the immoderate use of cigarettes causes extreme nervousness and is often followed by loss of flesh and an ill-nourished physical system. Men in that condition are not fit material for soldiers."

"Is it true that West Point graduates have a prejudice against officers who have not been educated in the Military Academy?"

"Officers in the army come from West Point, from civil life and from the ranks of the enlisted men. After he is once commissioned as a second lieutenant—and all officers begin in that grade—each man stands on his own feet and is judged thereafter, not by his antecedent history, but by his personality and achievement. In all my years of service I have never known of prejudice against an officer because he had served as a soldier, nor do I believe that officers from the ranks ever feel such a prejudice against them."

"As a man of courage—" but I got no further.

"Here!" Gen. Bell roared. "Stop that, stop that! There are things which make me tired, and that is one of them. Whenever a soldier fires his pistol or gun some fellow bobs up and calls him an intrepid general, or an intrepid colonel, or an intrepid major, or an intrepid captain, or an intrepid lieutenant. That word is an abomination to the English language. It has been worked to death. Once it meant something decent, I suppose, but now it is senile and disreputable. If I pick up a newspaper I am sure to see it hobbling up one column and down another and looking meaner than the devil. Why can't the newspapers let a man alone? Notoriety is more deadly to a soldier than bullets. Do you know that? But if something must be said about me, for God's sake don't describe me as being intrepid."

When the north wind was out of the cloud I changed the form of the question and asked: "From your observation, is courage in battle a normal state of the mind or is it the result of the excitement and tonic of the occasion?"

"Both," Gen. Bell replied, the word leaving its muzzle like a rifle shot. "Men vary; so does the quality of courage."

"How do cowards perform when under fire?"

"They become terror-stricken and lose self-control and all sense of shame. Once I found a miserable wretch hiding in a hole in the ground. It took three of us to pry him out. At another time, in the Philippines, I saw a boy going to the rear supported by two men. He was moaning and crying, but he wasn't a coward.

"'What is the matter?' I asked.

"'I am dead,' he groaned. 'Been shot through the heart. Here's the hole in my breast.'

"I got off my horse, opened the boy's shirt, and found the imprint of a bullet right under his left nipple. You see, it was a spent ball, and had made a red mark. In the meantime he was bellowing as hard as he could.

"'The bullet didn't go through you,' I said. 'Look and you will find it in your trousers.'

"The boy was doubtful, but he stopped crying and in a minute had the ball in his hand.

"'Well, I'll be damned,' he said, and then, turning about, full of spirit, but showing some chagrin, exclaimed: 'I'll go back and try 'em again.'"

Other memories came into Gen. Bell's mind; I could see them in his eyes, now almost black and gleaming like coals of fire in the night. "Do you know," he asked, "that no excitement in the world equals the hunting of a man who has a gun on his arm and is out to kill you? I shall not call it sport, because many good people wouldn't understand; but shooting tigers isn't to be compared with it for a moment. I know. I led scouts in the Philippines. It was our business to beat the bush and be shot at, that we might locate the enemy and hunt him down. If I could safely do so, I should say such duty was incomparable as a sport. But then I should be called bloodthirsty, when I am not."

"And now tell me about your medal of honor," I asked.

"Talk about myself? Never."

"But I want the facts. I have seen it stated that you slaughtered a lot of men with your sword"—a fiction, or, rather, a rowdy skirmish line thrown forward to draw out the truth.

"That is a fantastic lie. All that I did was to hit a poor devil in the arm. I am tired of being described as a butcher. But I'll set you straight, I'll set you straight, and then I'll never say another word on the subject. I was going along early in the morning in advance of my men. An officer and seven insurgents—maybe there were only six—dodged around a corner. I went on to see where they had gone. They began firing at me. I fired back with my pistols—Mausers—ten cartridges in each making a tearing noise like Gatling guns. My string of bullets rattled the ruffians and they shot too high, or too low, or both. I rode at them and chased the officer and two of his men into a rice field. They were scared to death and surrendered. I tell you it was nothing; but the paint has been daubed on so thickly that the whole incident has become positively wearisome to me."

Just the same, the act stands out singular and splendid in the annals of the American army.

Novel Naval Signs.

A correspondent sends us the following hypothetical excerpt from a proposed "new Oyster Bay Signal code:"

Admiral Brownson: "R-U-2-B at the spelin B 2 nite?"

Admiral Evans: "2 bel with the BBB; mind your PPP and QQQ."

This recalls to our correspondent a story told on Capt. "Dick" Davenport of the old navy. He had been entertaining a number of officers of his squadron on shipboard and, in the course of conversation, was led to say that "he had always prided himself upon his power of sarcasm."

Later in the day, at target practice, while Davenport's ship was firing, one of the vessels on the flank, well placed to observe the fall of the shots, on the first fire ran up the letter "S." "Elevate," called out the gallant Dick; "that shot has fallen short." Again, the letter "A" goes up. "Too much! too much!" exclaims the captain. A third shot—and "to the right"—up goes the letter "R." The fourth shot is a puzzler, for now, with glass in hand, the director of practice can, as he says, only make out something that looks like "C." "Go on! go on! try another—'A,' above; 'S,' short; 'M.'"

"'M,' what's that for?" asks the captain. And, according to the story, a youthful "middy" at this point "saw a great light" and had the temerity to suggest that Capt. Davenport should consider the sequence of letters signaled as a whole. What followed is not recorded.—[Army and Navy Journal.

IS GREAT POLE CLOSE-FISTED?

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WARSAW, Oct. 1.—Proud as the Poles are of the author of "Quo Vadis," Sienkiewicz, the man is not well beloved in his native land. He has the reputation of being close-fisted, and his compatriots like an open hand. The following incident greatly amused his friends at the time it occurred.

Sienkiewicz has a very pretty daughter by his first wife, a fair-haired girl with a bright complexion. Her life is rather dull, and one winter she determined to enliven its monotony by giving an evening party on her name's-day—that is, the day dedicated to the saint after whom she was christened. These "names-days" are kept as birthdays in Poland, when girls get presents of flowers, sweets, etc., from their friends and relatives.

At first, Sienkiewicz declared that he would not give any party at all, as the strikes had begun and several people who had attempted to entertain received threatening letters from the Socialists. But the daughter prevailed and invitations were sent out for "a small and early." Those who were lucky enough to be invited looked forward to the party with expectation, for they knew but little of the Sienkiewicz interior, and who is not interested in the furniture and table appointments of a famous man? But alas! A day or two before the great event, Miss Sienkiewicz wrote to her friends, cancelling the invitation with many apologies, for her father had received a letter saying that if he gave the party, his windows would be broken as well as those of the carriages which conveyed his guests to his doors.

The letter was supposed to be signed by a prominent Socialistic Society, and is said to have ended with an admonition to the author of "Quo Vadis" to set a better example to the Polish people than to give dances when hundreds of men were on strike and had not as much as a crust of bread to give their starving families. The tone of the whole thing was very much exaggerated, as, though the situation was grave, the strikers had full pay for the time they were locked out and the only people who suffered at this stage of the revolution were their employers. But the desired effect was produced. Everybody laughed, and those who had not been invited laughed loudest of all.

The poor daughter was very disappointed and she and her brother afterward hinted that they suspected a disappointed acquaintance had played them this trick. But, knowing the great man's aversion to spending money upon frivolities, many people were malicious enough to suggest that Sienkiewicz had written the letter to himself and shown it to his daughter in order to save the expense of having people in his house. It is a significant fact that the latter explanation of the affair soon gained credence in the Polish capital.

During the general strike, which took place in the autumn of 1905, the working classes in Warsaw suffered considerably, as many factories were closed for good, and the owners of those which were still open refused to pay for the whole of the time spent in strikes. The price of bread—owing to the bakers' strikes—had risen by leaps and bounds, and hundreds of families were starving. Relief committees were formed and Sienkiewicz was asked to lend his name as president of one, the guardians assuring him that he would not have to be prominently active or attend meetings.

Nearly everybody who could possibly do so, sent subscriptions. People went without little daily luxuries in order to be able to help their poorer brethren. Peasants who had no money to give contributed in kind. Every village for miles around sent cabbages, barley and potatoes, till the square by the general postoffice was crowded with their long, narrow carts. And still it was not enough. The cold weather had begun and the people had not the wherewithal to buy coal. Indeed, most of them had pawned their boots and sheepskins. It was necessary to find some quick way of raising money before the hard frost set in, and to institute a poor fund which would last through the worst part of the winter.

Henry Sienkiewicz, in a moving speech, delivered before a large audience, pleaded the cause of the workingman and, after dwelling upon the duties of the rich citizens, suggested that everybody in Warsaw, who rented a flat, should pay a uniform tax of one rouble for each window which looked out upon the street. This seemed fair enough, as only the well-to-do rent flats looking onto the street; the poorer ones have to be content with a view of the courtyard.

People with a dozen windows or more coming under Sienkiewicz's category, looked a little aghast, as they had already given freely to the poor. But as the great man was to set the example, the others said they would willingly follow it. But the worst of it was, that the great man himself declined to practice what he had preached. The day after making his moving speech he left Warsaw, and those who had begun the work of levying the tax, which was called by his name, learned that he had gone abroad for an indefinite period. Neither did he send the committee the tax for his windows.

People with sufficient sense of humor laughed, and paid their share. But the others, a much larger proportion, said they would wait until Sienkiewicz made a move. They are still waiting.

A TREMENDOUS SHIP.

The New Mauretania of the Cunard Line, Built by the Aid of the British Government.

The recent launching of the newest Cunard steamship Mauretania is an interesting event in maritime circles. She is the companion of the Lusitania, and is intended to be the fastest ship in the world, as well as the largest passenger ship. For their construction the British government advanced to the Cunard company a loan of £2,600,000 at 2¾ per cent. interest, and at the same time a yearly subsidy of £150,000. Of the size of the Mauretania, the London Express says:

"The vast size of a modern ocean liner will perhaps be more easily grasped by one or two simple comparisons. For instance, the passenger who is fond of exercise and wishing to have a long walk before dinner can easily satisfy his energy by walking twelve times around the promenade of the Mauretania. When he has done this he will have had a five-mile constitutional.

"Most people have been impressed by the great length of long-distance express trains. One of the longest trains is the Cunard "special," which runs from Euston to the station at the Liverpool landing stage. But this train, with its engine and tender, its two luggage vans, two dining cars and eight coaches, is about 100 feet shorter than the leviathan which is to be launched today.

"Supposing vessels like the Caronia and Carmania were placed in a wide business thoroughfare, they would overtop an eight-story building. If their funnels were taken into the measure an American fourteen-story skyscraper would not reach their tops.

"Again, supposing one of these funnels were placed on the ground in a horizontal position, two trains could pass through it at once side by side. But perhaps an illustration that will bring the colossal dimensions of the 'aristocrats of the Atlantic' to every mind in an easy manner is to be found in the height of the masts. Were the Mauretania at the base of the Shakespeare Cliff at Dover, her mast would reach within twenty-four feet of that 'beetling brow.'"

An Electric Tree.

William Kronenberg, an eccentric scientist living in the mountains near Brunt Cabin, Pa., is making experiments with a new variety of tree that he calls the electric light plant.

Noticing the phosphorescent light he found around decayed tree stumps, he conceived the idea of using it for the benefit of mankind. Taking an ordinary wild grape vine at several stumps, he was gratified, after several years' culture, to see the fruit emit a rich white glow.

Mr. Kronenberg has one plant which gives off sufficient light to read by, and he is wiring his log cabin with the grape vine. He says if he can develop the electric light plant sufficiently it will come into general use on account of its cheapness and safety.

New Way to Make Salt.

Official announcement is made by President Fuller of the International Salt Company that the corporation has acquired a new process from foreign interests for the manufacture of salt and that the company has decided upon the erection of eight plants, which will be equipped with the new apparatus. Of these eight plants three now are being constructed. Two are to operate in the western part of New York State and one in Kansas. As the result of this process the International Salt Company, according to Mr. Fuller, will be in a position to turn out salt at a much lower cost of production.

THE OPEN SHOP—Labor Trust Thwarts Business Development of Oakland

CURRENT COMMENT.

HON. JOHN P. IRISH, in a communication to the Oakland Tribune, correctly defines the present attitude of organized labor when he declares that "as union labor under the direction of Mr. Gompers has now organized itself into a separate political party in the United States, the policy of the labor monopoly amounts to this, that no American citizen shall be permitted to work unless he belongs to that political party, and that no American employer shall be permitted to hire any man belonging to any other political party, under penalty of ruin of his business and destruction of his property." This is precisely what the entrance of unionism into politics means, in conjunction with the closed shop demands which unionists are everywhere making. It is precisely what young Mr. Bell, the candidate of the Union Labor party for Governor of California, stands for. He accepts the Union Labor candidacy. He stands upon the Union Labor platform. The creed of the Union Labor party demands that no man shall be allowed to work in any trade unless he belongs to that party, and that no employer shall give employment to workmen not belonging to the Union Labor party.

How would it be if the Republican party, the Democratic party, or any other political party, should put forth a demand so monstrous, so inadmissible? The people would literally wipe out of existence a political party that would put forward such a demand. This is what will happen to the Union Labor party as a political factor. There are a few things in the country which it cannot have, although it covets and demands about everything worth having. When the people of the United States get ready to abandon the republican form of government, they may install walking delegates, business agents and other jawsmiths in places of power, but not before. The ideas which underlie the candidacy of Mr. Bell are subversive of the fundamental principles of free, autonomous government.

The unions of San Francisco are greatly retarding the upbuilding of that city. If they are allowed to pursue their present tactics, it may take twenty years or more to repair the damage inflicted by the great calamity. They are determined to prevent, so far as they are able, the employment of outside workmen in the work of reconstruction. In several instances employers who have advertised for help in newspapers outside of San Francisco have been told that they "must" stop all such advertising or suffer a boycott. The San Francisco employer almost invariably obeys the commands of his employés (when made through a union.) He is abjectly afraid to act independently, or to attempt to run his own business. So there is a great dearth of workmen in the city, wages are exorbitant, and the work of reconstruction goes on slowly, expensively and unsatisfactorily.

San Francisco employers are themselves chiefly responsible for this disgraceful state of affairs. They could put down this galling despotism of ignorance and greed if they had the backbone to stand together and fight it out to a finish. If San Francisco had done this long ago, it would not now be tied fast in the fetters of a disgusting bondage.

The California Christian Advocate, published in San Francisco, "speaks right out in meeting" in denunciation of the lawlessness and the official incompetency which are the curse of that city: "There is no protection," it declares, "to any soul in San Francisco. It is the paradise of the bully. A man is as safe in the heart of Africa as he is in San Francisco. The police make comparatively few arrests. Thugs and thieves swarm through the streets day and night. . . . . The conditions in San Francisco are absolutely anarchistic. Nothing but Gen. Funston and the soldiers saved the city during the great fire. Never was a city cursed with such a pusillanimous government." There is a great deal more in the same vigorous vein, but the above will suffice to show the sentiments which are entertained by people such as those who support the Christian Advocate. If the daily papers of the city would talk as plainly as does this religious journal, they could soon make San Francisco a safe and fit place for human habitation.

As noted in The Times of October 17, the Founders' and Employers' Association of Los Angeles has adopted a "declaration of independence," by unanimous vote, and has determined that hereafter, in their establishments (which employ, altogether, about five thousand men) only non-union men shall be employed. The places have heretofore been operated as open shops, in which no discrimination was made on account of race, color or union servitude. The employers were willing to continue this policy until they found that those of their employés who belonged to unions persisted in taking advantage of their presence in the shops to spread discontent among the other employés, and to urge them to join the union, for the purpose of bringing on a strike. The employers, in self-protection, were forced to shut their doors against these agitators. It was with reluctance that they decided to take this course, for they felt that discrimination of this kind would not be justifiable under ordinary circumstances. But the illiberal and pig-headed policy of unionists made it necessary, and the plan will be adhered to indefinitely.

No doubt some of the unionists who are thus forced to choose between loyalty to their employers and loyalty to the union will complain that they have been treated unfairly. But is it any less fair for an employer to say that he will not employ union men than it is for an employé to declare that he will not work in an open shop? Surely, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

One of the characteristics of unionists which goes far to make them disliked and distrusted everywhere, is their unwillingness to allow other men to have "a square deal." They are not willing to "live and let live." Their insatiable greed carries them to illimitable lengths of hoggishness and crime, causing them to lose all proper sense of right and justice, all regard for the rights of other men, and all adequate conceptions of equitable relations between man and man. The time will surely come, unless the unions make some radical changes in their policies and actions, when employers in general will prefer non-union to union labor to such an extent that they will be willing to pay much higher wages to the free worker than to the shackled unionist, and in many cases will refuse to employ the latter at all, as the Founders' and Employers' Association in Los Angeles has already done. Men who systematically try to deprive other men of employment have no ground for complaint when they are forced to take their own medicine.

Labor-unionism in Great Britain, as in the United States, is infected with socialism and anarchism. The labor party in the House of Commons is divided into two sections—the Liberal section, under the leadership of John Burns, and the Socialistic section, led by James Keir-Hardie—and both of these sections are striving for control of the party. At a meeting of the Federation of Miners, held recently in Swansea, a decision was reached by ballot not to join the Hardie section. Simultaneously, a conference of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was held at Cardiff, and after long and bitter debate it was decided to adhere to the Hardie section, although their leader, Richard Bell, M. P., was strongly opposed to socialistic domination. There is little doubt that in the end socialism will gain control of the party, for the teachings and the ideals of unionism all tend in that direction.

Labor-union devilment and injustice threatens to drive the entire plate-glass industry out of Chicago. For a whole year the plate-glass workers have been on strike, and those manufacturers who have not already moved their factories out of the city are preparing to do so as soon as possible. In the gentle art of killing the goose that lays the golden eggs the totemite is an acknowledged expert.

WOOD HARDENING PROCESS.

A Vulcanizing Scheme That Will Make Porous Wood Available for Railroad Ties.

Capt. D. G. Purse, former president of the Savannah (Ga.) Board of Trade and one of the most conservative business men of that city, says that a new process for vulcanizing wood has been discovered and will very soon be made public by a demonstration at New York. The process will be of great interest to lumbermen over the entire country, as well as railroad and street railway men, car manufacturers, manufacturers of agricultural implements, barrel and stave manufacturers, and, in fact, all others interested in the preservation of wood.

Capt. Purse, who is heart and soul in the project, in speaking of the method of wood vulcanizing, said that the process had passed through the experimental stage and that the results attained were simply astonishing. "At a cost of five cents," said he, a railroad tie with an average life of four years at the most could be treated and the average life extended to from fifteen to twenty years. A revolution of the lumber industry of the South is evident, since through the process of wood vulcanizing the product of the swamp lands, tupela, black gum, cypress and other soft woods can be converted into material fully as good as the hard woods now in use in many industries, and it will also bring short leaf or black pine back into popular confidence."

Capt. Purse is positive in his statement that through this process the scarcity of timber will be solved, and he is authority for the claim that swamp timber land will rapidly enhance in values. In fact, he said yesterday that the South would soon awake to the fact that the timber of the swamps, which is now considered almost valueless, can become almost worth its weight in gold.

Capt. Purse said further that there are annually over 100,000,000 cross-ties used by the railroads of the country, with an average life of four years. By the new process, in which "loblolly" pine can be utilized, the life of the tie can be extended fifteen to twenty years, at an annual saving of millions of dollars.

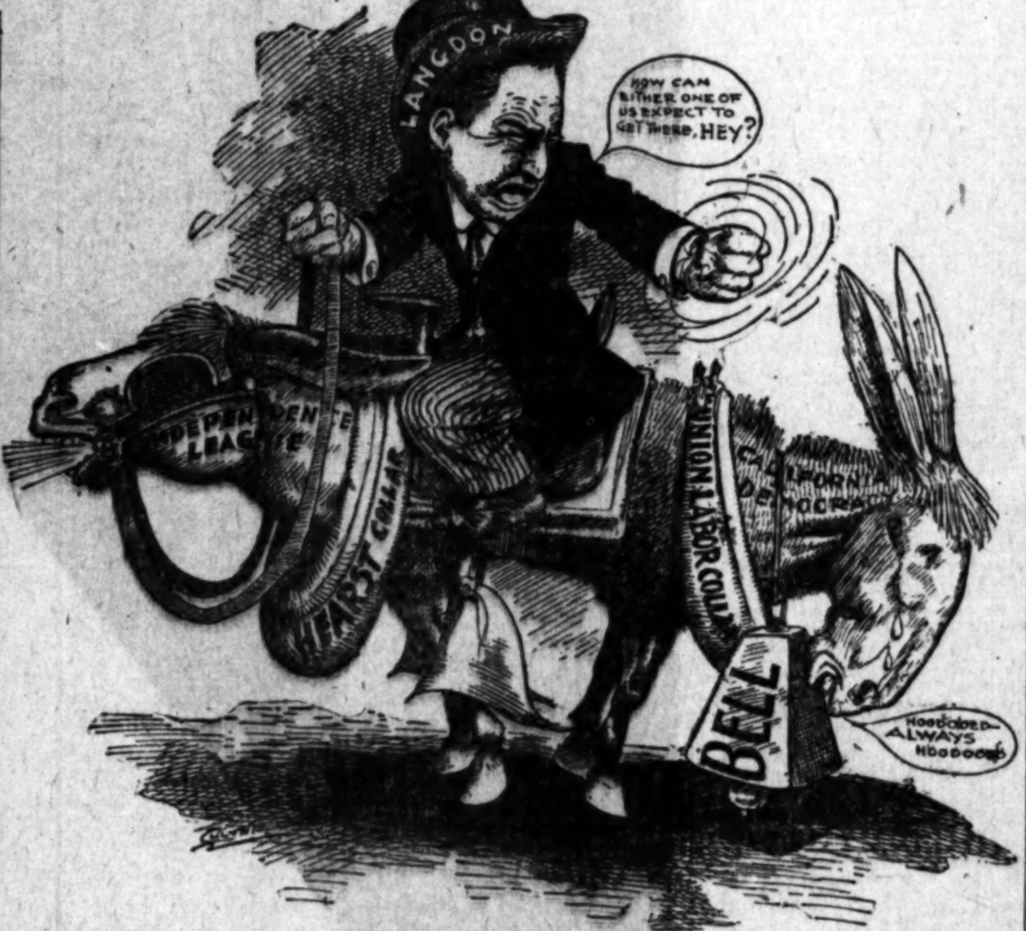
An Open Shop.

Columbia Typographical Union of Washington has voted to expel seventy members who refused longer to pay an assessment levied for strike benefits on account of the strike against employing printers in the District of Columbia, which has been on since last January. The dismissed members are all employed in the Government Printing Office, and it is said that the number expelled may reach 250 before the matter ends.

The action taken may lead to no end of trouble in the government office. Public Printer Stillings has given it out flat that no man shall be molested in his work on account of the fact that he does not belong to a union. The President recognized the open shop. The union's action makes the government office in fact what it has been in name, an open shop.

The feeling shown at the meeting of Columbia Typographical Union, toward the expelled members was intense, and it is predicted that there will be frequent clashes between those expelled and the union printers who voted to expel them.

HOPELESS AND IMPOTENT.



PROTEST FROM STRONG VOICE.

John P. Irish on Labor Union Despotism.

Gives Reasons for Increased Cost of Building.

Unions Claim Higher Power Than Government.

An article by Hon. John P. Irish, published in the Oakland Tribune of October 6, deals in the writer's usual fearless and vigorous style with labor conditions in San Francisco and the bay cities. Following is the article in its entirety:

The labor situation, in Oakland and and San Francisco, gives rise to some reflections which may perhaps be studied with advantage. The fire in San Francisco induced a great change in the location of many lines of business.

Several hundred firms and houses in different lines of trade, appreciating the desirability of keeping commerce around San Francisco Bay instead of locating it in other Pacific Coast points, located in Oakland, and were followed by a very large addition to our population.

These business institutions and these people were made welcome. The merchants already located and long in trade in Oakland, instead of imposing obstacles in the way of the newcomers, made them welcome.

BARRIERS RAISED.

These changes of trade and population made necessary an enormous activity in the building trades, and all lines of industry. Labor, skilled and unskilled, from the outside, supposed that it could find employment in this city, and that no obstacles would be raised to prevent it; but they have been raised. Realizing the value of a labor trust in maintaining a monopoly, the unions have imposed every possible obstacle.

They have raised the barriers against both union and non-union labor from outside. Union plumbers and other union workmen from the outside have been forbidden the right to work at their respective callings in Oakland. It should not be necessary to say, that it is the essence of civil liberty that any man in the United States shall enjoy the right to work, anywhere, in a lawful way in any lawful occupation, and that he and his employer shall be free to contract and that the workingman shall be free to enjoy the advantage of his superior skill and industry.

POWER OF BOYCOTT.

The government of the United States cannot forbid to any man the right to work in this way in Oakland or anywhere else, but the unions forbid it, and their policy in that respect is subversive of civil liberty. Using the sinister power of the boycott, they threaten the employer with destruction of his business if he attempt to break the power of this monopoly by advertising for and securing labor from the outside.

As evidence of this, I submit the following communication:

"Local No. 104 Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance.

"San Francisco, Sept. 24, 1906. Send reply to this communication to W. J. Forbes, 165 Noe street.

"Messrs. ———, City:

"Dear Sirs—At the last regular meeting of this union a motion was passed that any employer who was advertising in any outside paper for help, and who did not remove it in one week after being notified, would be declared unfair by this organization.

"This is to notify you that on or before October 5, 1906, all said notices must cease to exist or said action will be taken.

"Hoping our relations may be more harmonious than in the past and that a friendly feeling will still exist between you and members of this organization, I remain,

"Respectfully yours,

[Signed] "W. J. FORBES,

"Rec. and Cor. Sec., 104."

It will be noticed in the above communication that the imperative mood is used, "said notices must cease." No government on earth, and especially not ours, can serve such a notice and execute its sentence upon any man. But the unions serve it and can execute it.

GARBAGE QUESTION.

From this it appears that civil liberty is denied not only to the workingman, but to the employer as well, and that we have here a government within our civil government that is stronger than that within which it exists. In the city of Oakland we are not living under the municipal laws and ordinances. In most important particulars we derive no rights from them and get no protection under the ordinances of the city.

The removal of garbage and house waste from our houses is required and enforced. If the householder permit its accumulation upon the premises, he is subject to punishment for a misdemeanor. The scavengers who remove this material are organized into a labor union, affiliated with the central monopoly.

These scavengers, a majority of whom are not citizens of the United States, in many instances remove such proportions of the house waste as they choose, leaving the rest upon the premises and subjecting the owner of the premises to arrest and punishment for misdemeanor.

When such scavengers were told by householders that they would employ other teamsters to remove the material, the answer was, "You can't do it; we belong to de union and no teamster dare haul it away."

Upon inquiry of the Board of Health it was found that complaints of this condition were numerous, but the board professed, and I believe truthfully, that they were powerless in the matter.

We pay taxes to the city of Oakland in return for the protection which its ordinances give to our rights of person and property, but it seems that in sanitation, the matter of first importance, we have no protection at all; our taxes are thrown away.

We live under the laws and ordinances of the central labor monopoly, which has no legal responsibility whatever, and plays with our rights as it pleases.

Building construction is of vast importance just now in Oakland. Rents are affected and rise in proportion to the scarcity of buildings, and the enhanced cost of their construction. It has pleased the labor monopoly to lay the increase at the door of the dealers in building materials.

The cost of such material has considerably advanced, but let any man analyze the elements of cost in building construction and he will be surprised at the proportion of the increase that is caused by the various organizations of the central labor monopoly.

All of this increase is not represented by the actual rise in wages, but by the limitation of output. If employers got eight hours of honest work per day, the artificial rise in wages would be more tolerable, but the output in the eight-hour day is limited by every possible device and enters into the enhanced cost of construction, the whole system working out in a necessary advance in rents.

Such advance is immediately pleaded by the monopoly which causes it, as a reason for further advance in wages. I don't think that any reasonable man pretends that these results and the policy which produces them are caused by any legitimate labor-union policy.

They are caused by a feeling that labor has privileges above those of the general community, which it has the right to enforce in defiance of economic and statute law.

As union labor under the dictation of Mr. Gompers has now organized itself into a separate political party in the United States, the policy of the labor monopoly amounts to this, that no American citizen shall be permitted to work unless he belong to that political party and that no American employer shall be permitted to hire any man belonging to any other political party under penalty of ruin of his business and destruction of his property.

If the Democratic or Republican party declared such purposes, how long would it take the American people to dispose of it? Very truly,

JNO. P. IRISH.

TRADES SCHOOLS ARE NECESSARY.

RIGHT OF EVERY BOY TO LEARN A TRADE.

The Evils of Union Restrictions on Apprenticeship—Room for Trades Schools in All the States—Proper Education of the American Boy. England's Shortsightedness.

In the olden days, before the advent of modern unionism, very pleasant relations existed between the master and the apprentice, but through the mistaken policy pursued by the labor leaders of today, the situation has been entirely changed. The apprentice no longer eats at the master's table, nor is he as formerly, practically a member of his family, receiving the care, interest and concern he formerly did. The change, to a great measure, has been brought about by the apprentice restriction rulings of the union. Many of them will take no apprentices at all, while others will allow only one apprentice to eight journeymen. It is very probable that each of these eight journeymen have at least two boys who should learn the trade of the father. This would be sixteen boys, but under the ruling only one of the sixteen may learn the trade. The other fifteen are outlawed. Unless some other occupation be found for them, they become outcasts and criminals and are a charge upon the taxpayers, instead of self-respecting and self-supporting American citizens. The leaders generally deny the existence of these rules, but the fact that they do exist may be easily demonstrated by an attempt to apprentice a boy in any shop in this or any other city. If the leaders consent to talk on the subject at all, they will generally say that there are too many mechanics already. Those who are engaged in the manufacturing business, however, know from experience that this is untrue, and that the real object of enforcing this rule is to build up a labor trust that will enable the leaders not only to control prices, but on account of the scarcity of labor to control the workings of the shop itself.

Already the results of this ruling, which has been in force some years, are being felt all over America, and prompt and decisive steps must be taken by the employers of this country to grow good mechanics, or make good mechanics, of our American boy. It is estimated that every foreign workman, unskilled though he may be, is worth $1000 to this country. What, then, should be the value of every experienced and thoroughly skilled native-born workman that could be added to our population?

The apprentice question has become a serious problem, and there have been many suggestions made as to the proper remedy for the conditions that exist. Several trades schools have been established in various places and are doing good work, but their capacity is small, while the demand for skilled labor is rapidly growing. America is turning out no thorough mechanics, but she must do it or she will lose her proud position of importance in the commercial world.

Prior to the great fire in San Francisco, a few of the prominent citizens of California organized an association for the establishment of trades schools along lines that would make it, in a way, a model for other States to follow. An option was secured on a large tract of land on which it was proposed to erect the necessary buildings, so that practically all of the prominent trades could be properly taught. It was proposed to make it a manufacturing school, where any boy with ambition to better his condition might enter and earn with his own hands an education and proficiency in any trade that he might select. Many of the employers in various lines agreed to take scholarships, which would be placed at a nominal figure, say $300 per year, for tuition and board. This low price was to extend also to any boy, whether he or his family had the money to pay for it or not, and the boy could earn his own board and tuition by work at the bench after class hours. The money necessary to start the school was to be subscribed by employers in the various trades, and then some philanthropist was to be asked for an endowment that would make up the shortages until such time as the school could be made self-supporting. It was agreed among the employers that concerted action would be made toward teaching as many apprentices as possible in their own shops, while encouraging in every manner the school, where, they figured, boys could be brought to proficiency much quicker because they were under the tutelage of experienced men and had nothing to do or think of except to avail themselves of their opportunity; while in many shops the boys were expected to do the chores, drive the wagons, and have their attention otherwise distracted, as well as to have to combat the antagonism of the journeymen.

While the fire has set the matter back considerably, the promoters are still determined upon the establishment of the school, and it is felt generally that much good will result from it.

Statistics show that in New York City alone there are more than 15,000 boys between the ages of 16 and 20 that have never learned a trade, have no visible means of support, and are merely loafers and paraites, while they might have been valuable citizens had they been given a chance. Out of the 8,000,000 children born in America each year, it has been shown that less than 100,000 of them succeed in securing a college education. The other 7,900,000 are turned loose upon the world with hardly any preparation for their future. So it can readily be seen that there is room for trades schools not only in all of the States, but in all of the large cities of America. The citizens of this country who are vitally interested in this subject, and almost all of them are, must take off their coats and go to work on this problem of the proper education of the American boy; for the time will come, within a very few years, when, for instance, a bricklayer, at the present rate of increase in wages, will be able to demand a dollar a minute for his work. He is already getting a dollar an hour in many places, while another pernicious ruling of the unions limits the output. Bricklayers receive $8 per day for eight hours' work in San Francisco, but instead of giving the employer a fair day's work, which would be 3000 to 3500 bricks, they limit the amount that any one workman shall lay to 1400 in one day.

We take the case of the b as an illustration becau is a prominent trade; but the conditions exit practically in all lines.

where the cranberry variously known as the bog, from the fact that low land arranged with of sluices similar to those irrigation of arid land and patience to prepare a bog, and the man who puts his capital in the venture deserves a fair return for his product. It costs not less than $300 and as high as $500 an acre to get the bog ready. Then five years must escape before there is any crop sufficient to give a return. But after this it is all profit, for the shrubs live and bear endlessly, getting better all the time.

Nothing could be simpler than planting cranberry bushes. A small handful of twigs is twisted together, and thrust deeply into the sand. They need no tending, but take root at once, and within a year send out runners. The planting is done in rows eight or ten inches apart. Gradually the space between the rows fills up, and soon the whole bog is one field of growing cranberries.

Flooding the bog answers the dual purpose of giving the cranberry the moisture which is an essential part of its life, and protecting it from frosts of early autumn.

There are two ways of picking the berries. One is the old-fashioned, the other the new.

In the primitive method all that is needed is a picker with nimble fingers. He or she sits or kneels in the moist sand, plunges both hands, with fingers slightly spread, till the hands become a sort of rake, into the green vines, and with a quick movement strips the berries from the vine, and tosses them into a pan. When the pan is filled it is emptied into a larger measure containing a third of a bushel. The size is uniform, and the picker is paid by the pail.

This old-time method of picking is gradually being abandoned in the larger bogs in favor of the new "rocker scoops."

The scoop looks like a rake, with a box attached, and is made of hickory. It has long teeth, and the operator pushes it along through the vines, having it carefully adjusted so that it does not tear the vines or miss any of the berries. As the scoop picks the berries from the stems it empties them into a box, and the method is so quick that one man can pick twenty-five times as many berries in a day as was possible under the old hand system.

Machinery also helps when the time comes to take the berries indoors, remove the leafy waste, and grade them according to size and quality.

There are to each bog several convenient buildings, so placed as to reduce to a minimum the need of carrying the crop from place to place.

The genius that does the work is a mill or grader, a two-story machine run by hand and the force of gravitation.

The berries are received by the hopper as they come from the bog. The stems are mostly caught by the screen, and the finer rubbish is blown out by a revolving fan. Now the berries fall on a long table having a succession of slots and grooves under the strong pieces. The grooves are opened all their length at the bottom, the space between their sides widening by degrees, making four changes. The berries dropped on the table roll promptly into the longitudinal grooves. The pea-shaped ones are disposed of first, and land in the first bin. These are only fit for the dye pot or the canning factory.

The grooves widen, and gradually the "seconds," "standards" and "fancies" are disposed of, the latter class being, of course, the big red luscious berries that command the highest prices.

Nor is the test confined to size. Berries of a given size all roll down the chute together, but at the bottom their paths separate. The sound ones, with a strong rebound, jump over the bar into the bin, but the soft, wormy ones have no such resilience, and fall short, rolling ignominiously into the waste box beneath. Should one by accident manage to make the spring, a lynx-eyed girl stands ready to banish it into outer darkness. This process of elimination picks out the right size and quality for the market.

With careful weeding and watering, an acre will yield more than one hundred barrels of cranberries, and it has been calculated that in eight years an acre ought to pay back in full the entire cost, leaving all that follows as clear profit.

The earliest cranberries come from Cape Cod. There picking begins early in September and lasts till severe frost sets in. In the Middle States and the West the crop is not so early.

Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa are cranberry States. But the West is not able to produce all the cranberries it needs. The western output and a large percentage of the eastern growth are required to dispense the proper Thanksgiving cheer.

One city alone, New York, uses 300,000 busheds of cranberries every year. For these the producer averages a minimum price of $5 per barrel. The consumer pays from five to ten cents a quart. Somewhere between the field and the Thanksgiving dinner table someone has made a big profit, but when it is remembered how long the producer had to wait for his cash, all is forgiven.

The flavor that the red berry adds to the turkey is in itself excuse for anything.

The Peanut Industry.

"Few people who buy a bag of peanuts on the street for 5 cents realize the extent of the peanut industry," said A. P. Bryan of Norfolk, Va. "It is a fact that the total sales of peanuts amount annually to between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000, and some salesmen sell as high as 1,000,000 bushels each year.

"The seeds of the peanut are planted like beans, and when the vines have come up the nuts are ready for harvesting. The farmer takes a cultivator especially made for that purpose and starts down the long rows. On either side of this cultivator are two long knives which sink into the ground sufficiently to cut the tap root of the vine. The same process is gone through with on the other side of the vine. The main root being thus severed and the ground loosened the vines are lifted into shocks like corn. They are cured by allowing them to stand in the sun for about ten days, when colored women and children are sent into the field to pick the nuts from the vines. An average picker will pick about five bushels a day, for which he is paid at the rate of 10 cents a bushel.

May Raise Cotton Here.

A private commission sent by the Lancashire cotton spinners to examine the methods of the production of cotton business in the Southern United States has issued a report, which recommends that the spinners themselves acquire suitable land in the cotton belt and raise their own supplies.

The committee believes that now is an exceptionally favorable opportunity for such an undertaking. It points out how a great yield can be obtained and the economies that can be effected, and quotes one authority as stating that the crop on the present acreage could be doubled in eight years merely by seed selection.

The report remarks that the wave of unexampled prosperity that is sweeping over the Southern States, the immense wealth accumulated by the planters, and the constant efforts of various associations to control the production and prices have set England a problem the solutions of which demands the greatest care.

Women Have to Husk Corn.

A Bloomington dispatch to the Chicago Daily News says Illinois needs 25,000 men to assist in harvesting the corn crop. Shucking time is at hand, but from every county come reports of the lack of help. Farmers are paying 2½ to 3 cents a bushel with board and lodging, but there is no demand for the work, and if there is no relief the women and girls will have to pitch in to help their husbands and brothers. The itinerant farm hand who comes North each fall to aid in gathering the golden ears is usually a Kentuckian. The Blue Grass State is said to supply more men for this work than any other.

Railroads find their force of section hands reduced when corn shucking time rolls around. Tamping ties on a rocky roadbed at $1.50 a day is not to be campared to husking corn for $2 to $3 a day, according to the skill and speed of the operator.

GREAT ACTIVITY IN RAILROADS.

The Large Increase Made in Year 1905.

A Million and a Third Persons Employed.

Tremendous Orders Placed for New Equipment.

The railway statistics recently made public by the Interstate Commerce Commission are interesting as showing how much of an increased demand the railroads of the country made upon the labor supply. The number of persons in the employ of the railroads of the country for the year ending June 30, 1905, was 1,382,196, a vast army when one stops to consider how large a crowd a million and a third of people would make. But apart from this aggregate, the increased number over that of 1904 was 86,075 employés, still a large-sized army, and equal to 26 employés for every 100 miles of line. This was the number the railroads of the country were themselves employing, but indirectly there was a large additional force at work for them. During the year there were added to the equipment of the railroads 1614 locomotives and 44,310 cars, and it is estimated that during the year closing June 30, 1906, all these figures were largely increased, while the present year will show the largest figures ever made public. During the first 29 weeks of the present year the railroads of the country have placed orders for 218,298 freight cars, thus breaking all records, but the demands of traffic have increased in proportion.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company, it is reported, has ordered 2000 box, 400 furniture, 300 flat, 650 coal dump and 100 part convertible ballast cars, 250 stock and 250 coal cars and 50 cabooses; the Hudson companies, 50 steel passenger cars; the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad Company, 20 to 25 passenger cars; miscellaneous concerns, 2309 cars of various types. The New York Central lines, 46 passenger cars; the Boston and Maine Railroad Company, 50 first-class passenger coaches and 8 first-class dining cars. It is reported that the Pere Marquette Railroad Company has ordered or is about to order 2000 cars. The Seaboard Air Line Railway Company is in the market for 1000 box cars and 1000 gondola cars. The Canadian Pacific Railway Company is buying material for 5000 additional box cars; the company has ordered to be built at its Angus shops 1118 30-ton box cars, 84 30-ton flat cars, 14 30-ton stock cars, 10 40-ton stock cars and 10 40-ton convertible ballast cars. The St. Louis Southwestern Railway Company contemplates the construction of about 450 cars at its shops at Pine Bluffs, Ark. The Bessemer and Lake Erie Railroad Company has ordered 250 steel hopper cars. The Northern Pacific Railway Company, it is said, is in the market for about 160 passenger cars. It is rumored that the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Company has ordered a large number of freight cars. The Hudson companies will shortly place an additional order for 150 cars. The New York Central lines, 200 locomotives; the Denver, Northwestern and Pacific Railroad Company, two simple consolidation locomotives. It is said that the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway Company has ordered some heavy locomotives for freight and passenger service.

These figures merely show how the orders for new equipment are distributed throughout the country.

Under the circumstances the following statistics showing the equipment of the railroads of the country June 30, 1905, with the number of employés and the amount of business done, are interesting:

The total railroad mileage was 218,101.04, or 4196.70 miles more than at the end of the previous year. The aggregate length of railway tracks, including sidings and second, third and fourth tracks, was 306,796.74 miles, which is an increase of 9723.40 miles. Of this, 3,449.21 miles, or 35.48 per cent., represented the extension of yard track and sidings.

On June 30, 1905, there were 48,357 locomotives, an increase of 1614. These were assigned to different classes of service as follows: [illegible] passenger, 27,869 freight, and 7023 switching. The total number of cars of all classes was 1,842,871, or 44,310 more than for the year 1904. These were divided as follows: Passenger, 40,713 cars; freight, 1,731,409 cars; company's service, 70,749 cars. The average number of locomotives per 1000 miles of line was 223, and the average number of cars per 1000 miles of line was 8494.

The number of employés on the railways in the United States on June 30, 1905, was 1,382,196, which is equivalent to an average of 63 employés per 100 miles of line. This is an increase over 1904 of 86,075 employés, or 26 per 100 miles of line. Of the employés, 54,817 were enginemen, 57,892 firemen, 41,061 conductors, and 111,405 were other trainmen.

The passengers carried during the year numbered 738,834,667, this being 23,414,985 more than for the year ending June 30, 1904. The number of tons of freight transported was 1,427,731,905, which exceeds the tonnage of the year 1904 by 117,832,740 tons. The average revenue per passenger per mile was 1.962 cents; for the preceding year it was 2.006 cents. The average revenue per ton per mile was 0.766 cent; for the preceding year it was 0.780 cent. The figures show a slight increase in the average cost of running a train one mile. The ratio of operating expenses to earnings for the year 1905 was 66.78 per cent. For 1904 this ratio was 67.79 per cent.

The gross earnings of the railways in the United States from the operation of 216,973.61 miles of line were, for the year ending June 30, 1905, $2,082,482,406, being $107,308,215 greater than for the year 1904. The operating expenses were: For maintenance of way and structures, $275,046,036; maintenance of equipment, $288,441,273; conducting transportation, $771,228,666; general expenses, $55,319,805; undistributed, $566,372. Operating expenses averaged $6409 per mile of line, this average showing an increase of $101 per mile in comparison with the year 1904.

THE STRUGGLING STUDENT.

Multifarious Ways in Which He Earned His Expenses While in College.

[Washington Post:] It was on the steps of the library that I met the self-supporting student. He was reading from a volume of Xenophon which he held in his right hand, while with his left he sold socks, suspenders, and collar buttons to the passing undergraduates.

"Is it true," I inquired, "that the impecunious student must needs struggle for his education at Princeton?"

"Utterly false," said the S.S.S., pausing between a pronoun and a transitive verb. "Before I came to college I looked up the word 'student' and found that it was derived from the Sanskrit, stu, 'a stew,' and the French dent, 'a tooth,' meaning that the student is one who must needs eat to learn. I have been in Princeton now for three years, during which time I have made my living almost without effort by putting into practice a few accomplishments which I have picked up from time to time.

"In the morning, from 5 to 7, I wash dishes in a university eating club; from 7 till 9 I work as a chiropodist, cut hair and tutor in Goethe and Schiller. From 9 till 12 I drive a grocery team and, during the luncheon hour, wait on table. My afternoons are devoted to giving lessons in dancing and painting, filling teeth, and sawing wood, and in the evening I play a 'cello in a local orchestra. My spare time, of course, is given up to study, recreation, and devotional exercises."

"What do you do with your vacations?" I asked, charged with the idyllic simplicity of his life.

"The vacations," he said, "were, at first, a problem. I found myself provided for during the university year with comparatively little effort on my part. But the question came up in my freshman year, how to get the most profit out of my summer vacations. A lucky coincidence solved the riddle very happily for me.

"You see, it has long been a student custom, now crystallized into a sacred tradition, for the students to attend every circus that comes to town, not so much for the purpose of enjoying the miraculous midair marvels as to confuse the clown and 'horse' the performers. They pay for general admission at the door, collect in a mob, and suddenly, with an inspiring yell, rush upon the reserved seats and hold them in defiance of the angry 'Hey, Rube,' from an army of stakemen and roustabouts.

"On a spring day, during one of my many idle hours, I went with a hundred freshmen to see one of these circuses. We teased the lion, captured the clown, and were about to kidnap Mme. Celeste, the talented spinster equestrienne, when—but the fight that ensued is alien to my story. It suffices to say that the afternoon's recreation gave me a valuable suggestion. Next day I applied to the manager of the circus for a position, was successful, and since then have been traveling with the show during summer months, feeding the baby elephant and acting as understudy for the tattooed man."

"Will you continue your—er—professional career during the coming summer vacation?" I asked the self-supporting.

"I'm not sure, but I think not," he replied. "I am expecting to go on the stump to indorse Woodrow Wilson as Democratic nominee for President."

"But——"

"Slush," quoth the S.S.S. "Isn't Woodrow safe and sane and isn't Grover one of our trustees? Grover will tell him how to do it, and when Woodrow is nominated he will have a cinch—every State in the Union divided into yelling sections and every college man in each State going like a steam siren. His platform will be 'Onward and Upward,' low tariff on athletic goods, football reform, and university extension lectures in the Philippine Islands."

A "Water Jump" in Irrigation Work.

In connection with extensive irrigation enterprise along the Yellowstone River at Huntley, Mont., which involves some difficult work, such as tunnels and carrying a stream over the canal, the engineers have undertaken the novel work of making the water jump over a hill. At a point called Ballentine there is a depressed bench of land succeeded by a higher bench. How to get the water across the worthless bench to the higher bench beyond was the perplexing problem. Finally, it was figured that by dropping the water thirty-five feet to the lowest bench, enough force could be obtained, with the aid of a small pumping plant, to raise the water fifty-seven feet on the other side. The water will run through a turbine, having a vertical shaft, on which is a centrifugal pump, fed from a pressure pipe. The pump, which is thus practically run by the fall of the water, lifts the water to the high line canal and covers the lands between Ballentine and Pryor Creek, adding nearly 3000 acres to the reclaimed lands. The action of the pump is nearly automatic.

REDWOOD

Use Redwood When You Build Your House

BECAUSE---As a foundation it lasts like cement; used on the outside, sun can't crack it, rain don't rot it, and it is almost as hard to set on fire as asbestos.

BECAUSE---For sheathing and underflooring IT IS CHEAPER AND BETTER THAN PINE.

It Holds Paint Four Times as long as any other wood

War ON DENTAL PRICES

ONLY 15 DAYS

FULL SET OF TEETH; fit guaranteed; others charge $8.00 to $10.00 .... $3.50

ALL OTHER WORK WE WILL DO .... Free
And simply charge a little more than actual cost of material used.

EXAMINATION, ADVICE, CLEANING AND PAINLESS EXTRACTION FREE

All work painless and guaranteed to be the very best that can be done.

WE SAVE YOU PAIN, MONEY AND TIME

But in these last days the phenomenal ... of Christian Science, the wonderful increase in ... of the Mormon doctrines, and the spectacular ... of the city of Zion by Alexander Dowie, all ... from the standpoint of mere temporal success ... that Christianity has to boast of during the ... years after the crucifixion. ... turn from the success of the Christian religion in winning to its standard the most intellectual races of the world in all the ages since the gospel was first promulgated and look to its effects upon the character, the morals of its followers, there is here again left a good deal to desire that has never been accomplished. It has taken 2000 years for the human mind to begin to grasp with any degree of comprehension or any kind of real sympathy the true and fundamental doctrines of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The professors of religion in the ages that are past, even the distinguished leaders among them, would in innumerable instances fail to pass muster in the matter of decent morals at the present day. The Christian heroes who fought the Crusades for the cause of Christ and many monarchs who bore the title of Most Christian King, were little better than a band of half-civilized savages, armed for predatory purposes upon the rest of mankind. The sharpest arrows that the scoffer, agnostic or unbeliever hurls at his Christian opponents is lack of genuine Christian living among the professors of Christianity.

There remains one argument for Christianity which time will not change, but which will ever remain absolutely unanswerable. The whole argument is exceedingly simple. There is no difficulty in reaching it. It is all contained in the few pages that recite the fourfold story of the life of Christ known as the Four Gospels. Here we get nearer to the genuine teaching of the gentle Rabbi of Bethlehem and nearer to the spirit which animated His life than we do in any writings of His followers, not excepting the accepted inspired apostles. In the gospels we have to a considerable degree the exact precepts of Christ, and probably more or less in his exact language. The teachings of these gospels furnish an absolutely unanswerable argument for the right of Christianity to an exceedingly prominent place in the civilization of our day. To the spiritually-minded this argument will irresistibly appeal always as an indisputable proof of the divine origin of the moral system contained in these writings.

The scoffer and unbeliever may point to the unchristian lives of professors of Christianity. Gibbon may sneer to his heart's content, and indulge in the basest insinuations as to the possible relations between St. Athanasius and Hypatia. Hierarchs of the church, from the highest to the lowest in the ministry of the gospel, from the time of St. Peter, who denied his Lord, to the most recent pulpiteer who disgraces his calling, offer vulnerable spots for these arrows, whose poison must wound wherever they strike. But there is one antidote to the poison, one balm which will heal the deepest wounds such shafts can make. Peter might deny Christ and indulge in blasphemy in the denial; St. Paul might have good reason for calling himself the chief of sinners; Pope Julius II may have appealed too often to the sword rather than to the doctrine of brotherly love; reprobate preachers may mount the scaffold and sing "Just as I am without one plea," while their hands are dyed with the blood of wife murder; but when all these spiritual wrecks that strew the history of the Christian church are gathered together and all summed up in one great and distressing argument against Christianity, the disciple of Jesus Christ may still turn to the teachings of his Master and appeal to them as founded upon absolute truth, upon a purity and a justice for which there may well be claimed a divine origin. No other human mind than that of Jesus of Nazareth ever evolved a code of morals comparable to that laid down in the four gospels.

The Christian world may to too lamentable a degree live unchristian lives. The professors of this religion may live the life of heathens. A bishop may be a debauchee; a pope may be an ambitious worldly sovereign; a preacher's life may prove him to be an unworthy wearer of the cloth; the Christian world may be lamentably unchristian in sentiment and act; but there still remains the absolutely unanswerable argument that if all the world were guided in its domestic life, in its business affairs, and in its relations of nation with nation, by the precepts of the gospel, the world would be absolutely a heaven upon earth. Whatever may be the life of the average Christian, however far he may fall in performance below his profession, the high plane of morality built by the gospels for men to live upon, still remains as high as it was in the days when the Sermon on the Mount was delivered by the Sea of Galilee. Take that one short discourse, and who will deny that if the relations of man with man the world over in all that goes to make up daily life were laid down parallel with the teachings of that wonderful sermon, we would have the world over in every moment of the lives of every human being a veritable millennium. The axiom on which the doctrines of the gospels are made to rest is that the man is frail, that sin exists in the human heart. The purpose for which this gospel was promulgated was to elevate man above the sin that was eating his heart out, to strengthen his soul against the temptations besetting him in his everyday life, and to make him what he ought to be. To the student who learns exactly what the teaching of the gospel is and what the effect of following its precepts by mankind universally would be, the superiority of the Christian code of morals will need no further argument, no further course of reasoning to lean upon. They are their own best reasons for being.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

BE WHAT YOU ARE.

WHAT, is this a startling proposition? "Why," we hear some exclaim, "is it not customary to urge men to become other than they are? Are we not ever exhorted to change our nature from what we are to what we ought to be? How then would you have a liar, a thief, an imposter or other evil-bent mind stay what it is? How else can we be what we are?"

Ah, but are you, you, that other deeper, truer self of yours, with which you may hardly as yet be acquainted—black, tarnished to the core? True, men and women who have fallen into evil ways have been thinking this perhaps—are thinking it now, and are acting accordingly! Then face about, and think the other way! There is a best self in the worst, as there is a least even in the greatest soul. Think this, feel it, hug to your bosom the hope of discovering the "other being" within you, created in the image of the Most High, and never be turned aside by the host of dull mutterings, sounding in your ears: "Fool, fool, it's all a fond delusion; there is nothing good in you; you're a thief, a liar, a reprobate, a vagabond—yes, that is what the world says of you—so keep your shape, or else you'll not fit the mould."

But listen to something that sounds truer than all this: The soul of your soul is clean; the heart of your heart pure, if you could only get down into it, casting the obstructions from you long enough to let the light shine that you may see.

The thief, is he always a thief, and never anything but a thief? Moreover, is there not "honor even among thieves?" Has he never a generous instinct, that is, the desire to give as well as to take? Ah, yes, you are reminded of Robin Hood, of noble robbers, who have never molested the poor; or those whose besetting sin has never made them guilty of the shedding of blood. Now what was that which prevented the highwayman from taking from the poor? What was it that saved him from the red-handed crime of murder even though he sank to the felon's lot by depriving people of their money and property?

That was the unobstructed portion of the soul left free from criminal intent to assert itself in its native strength and purity; that was his best self, his true self, the self that he really was, and not what he seemed to be—calling out, Stop! But what you are—you are a hater of homicide; you are a friend of the poor, you must neither kill the rich nor take away their little from those who are wanting much.

Be what you are! Be what you are in your sanest moments, be what you are when moved by noblest impulses, for that is what you really are—and the base, inhuman creature is what you are not—neither by divine intent, nor by natural necessity.

Rid the mind but once completely of the savage-making notion of a "doom" or "destiny" to be a criminal or social outcast—and the overhanging cloud that keeps you from knowing the latent possibilities of your own soul will be rent apart. Hark what is said here by the revealer of the nature of mankind: "This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune (often the surfeit of our own behavior), we make guilty of our own disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars; as if we were villains by necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves and treachers by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars and adulterers by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in by a divine thrusting on."

The "thrusting on" humanity of the hideous forms of evil is not divinely done, but a formation whose growth is fostered by our own wish and will.

Every self of us is at once a unit and a multiple. A vast assemblage of tendencies, instincts and desires find in each of us a meeting point as they travel down the ages. Each one of us is a beginning and an end. How shall we begin; how end?

As the very cells of our body are constantly doing battle to obtain dominance one over another, so our instincts, our impulses, our inherited traits and acquired tendencies are always or most of the time in conflict, each attempting, as it were, to unseat the other from its place of power. And we—where are we all this time? Vigilant, with stringent measures and guarding care, lest the worst and most deleterious of these striving elements gain the upper hand? Or, like a sleepy watchman, or slothful mistress, let happen what will while we are napping; and let the household run riot while we are idle.

"Eternal vigilance" is the price not only of a nation's liberty, but the price that must be paid for freedom by every individual.

It is said the insolence of some guests will drive away the host. We have let our evil deeds dominate so long that we imagine they are we, whereas, the soul has been driven out or obstructed from view by this wrangling, thieving, lying, treacherous horde of interlopers until we no longer know who and what we are. Then out with this rabble tribe of usurpers, and take possession of your high estate, the inmost value of your own soul! Thus shall you learn that every indulgence in things that make for wrong is defeat; and every act that is incontestably right, victory! Man was made master of circumstance, creator of good. That is what you are—be what you are!

Our Chinese at Panama. By Frank G. Carpenter.

UNCLE SAM'S COOLIES.

HOW THE TWENTY-FIVE HUNDRED OF THEM WILL BE CHOSEN.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Within a few months Uncle Sam will have 2500 Chinese coolies working on the Panama Canal. They will be brought across the ocean by contract and will be subject to rigid medical inspection before leaving China for Panama. While at Panama their health will be carefully watched, their sanitary conditions will be better than at home, and the probability is that they will solve the labor problem there. Chinese coolies were imported during the building of the Panama Railroad, but no regard was paid to their health, and in the malarious conditions which then prevailed they died by hundreds. At one time an epidemic of suicide broke out among them, and so many killed themselves at one place along the road that the station there got the name of Matachin, which means "dead Chinaman." It has that name to this day.

Secretary Taft is anxious to throw all safeguards about the Chinese and to protect them in every possible way not only as to their health, but as to impositions of any kind. The conditions of introduction will be about the same as those now employed in bringing coolies from China to South Africa to satisfy the labor famine which exists there. The gold mines of the Rand have long been short of workmen. The East Indians who were imported are not a success, and the Kaffirs, who have done a great deal of work up to this time, are growing more and more unreliable from year to year. They will work only when they are hungry, and, as their wants are few, they can get enough to satisfy them by laboring from one-third to one-half the time. The result is they are idle from six to eight months every year, and the operators of the mines never know when a gang will leave in a body.

It was in 1904 that the Transvaal began to import Chinese coolies. It has now brought in thirty or more shiploads, containing altogether about 50,000 Chinese. Of these more than two-thirds have been taken from North China, of which less than one in 100 has died from sickness.

Choosing Coolies for Panama.

Our coolies will be secured after the same method that the British used to get coolies for South Africa. The South African Chinese were gathered by the English mercantile firms in China, who received certain sums for every sound, healthy coolie delivered at the port of embarkation. We shall have to make arrangements with the government at Peking, and our coolies will be carefully examined by doctors again and again before they are shipped. Their first examination will be made by the American medical missionary nearest home, and the others by the doctors at the ports. Barracks will probably be built at the place of embarkation to store the coolies until the ships are ready to take them, and the men will be gone over again and again by the doctors. Their eyesight and hearing will be inspected and a rigid physical examination made. Before the latter, each coolie will be thoroughly scrubbed with soap and warm water, and after the examination he will be vaccinated, photographed and tagged with a card corresponding to his letter of identification. Before he signs a contract he will be made to understand just what that contract is, and that he signs it only of his own volition. In this he will be protected by the Chinese government officials, who will ask him all sorts of questions to see that he knows just what he is doing. Here are some of the questions which will be put to him:

"Where are you going? How long will it take you to reach Panama? What will you do when you arrive there? What kind of work can you do? What wages will you get? Can you leave money in China for your family? How much will you leave? How many hours a day will you work? Do you go of your own free will?" etc., etc.

If the Chinese coolie answers these questions so that the government official knows that he understands his contract, he will be passed on into the gang and registered for embarkation, but before he will be allowed to go the official will say:

"Now if there is any coolie here who regrets having come, let him step to the front. Any man who does not wish to go to Panama is still at perfect liberty to go home, if he so chooses, and there will be no punishment for him and no money to pay for having changed his mind. The only requirement is that he leave this port within twenty-four hours."

Tagged With Lead Disks.

At the final inspection each Chinese will receive a lead disk stamped with the number of his identification card and contract. This he will carry with him to Panama, and it will be probably used by him from day to day in collecting his wages. Before he goes on board ship, however, he will have to pass a final medical examination. For this several hundred coolies will be brought into a large hall at a time, and each must then be clad only in a piece of string and his paper tag. The men will be taken one by one into an adjoining room to be examined by the doctors and by Chinese clerks, who will see whether their physical appearance corresponds with their identification tags. If they are found correct the men will pass on into a third room, where there is a tank of warm water in which he must wash off the last dust of China from his body. He will then go on into a dressing-room to put on new, clean clothes and perhaps a uniform furnished by the contractors of the Panama Canal. It is here that the coolie changes his paper tag for a lead disk, and here he gets his first payment of a month's wages, perhaps in advance, so that he may settle his last bills in China before saying good-by to his family and goig on board.

The Wages of the Chinese.

The Chinese coolies who have gone to Africa are getting from 37 to 62 cents a day and food; and it is hardly probable that those who come to Panama will be paid less than $1 per day, although they will probably feed themselves. They will get more and more as the work goes on; for, as I shall show farther on in this letter, they understand union methods, and will be able to raise their wages to the highest notch.

A dollar a day, however, is a big thing for a coolie fresh from China. It is ten times as much as he could make at home. If our common laborer, who is now receiving $1.50 or $2 a day, had a similar increase, he would be getting from $15 to $20 a day. While I was in the city of Fuchow, in China, some time ago, I was told that the daily wages of masons were 18 cents, and that the best carpenters received 20 cents. Skilled Chinese masons and carpenters on the Panama Canal will eventually get from ten to fifteen times these sums, and they will be not half as well paid for their ten hours' work as our eight-hour men who do similar business here.

Women tea pickers in China get something like [illegible] cents a day, and those engaged in making grass cloth, a beautiful goods much like silk, receive about 3 cents from daylight to dark. An old missionary told me that he could get ten men to work a whole day for him for a dollar, and out of that sum 10 per cent. would be given to the man who did the hiring. In some parts of China ordinary field hands get 3 or 4 cents a day with food, and skilled workmen less than 10 cents. This is, of course, in the interior, where wages have not been affected by the modern progress movements.

Professional men are paid similarly low wages. In almost any Chinese city you can get thirty theatrical actors to play forty-eight hours for 30 simoleons, and in the backwoods of China a doctor will charge you 20 cents a visit and think himself well paid.

In the factories wages are very low. There are about 20,000 silk hands in the mills at Shanghai, and among them are children who work for 3 cents a day and women weavers who get 5 cents. I went through a large factory employing hundreds of females, and the highest paid woman in the whole establishment got [illegible] cents for a thirteen-hour day. I also went through the cotton mills which are now springing up in various parts of China and asked as to the wages. The [illegible] girls at Shanghai were then receiving on the average about 14 cents of our money a day, and the poorest paid did not get more than 5 cents. The hours were from 6 until 6, with thirty minutes at noon for lunch. These girls were about the best paid in that part of China, and they thought themselves lucky to get the job.

Chinese Unions at Panama.

The coolies will probably organize their own unions at Panama, and that soon after their arrival. There is no country of the world more honeycombed with trade unions than theirs, and when they go abroad they will carry their union rules with them. This is the case with the Chinese in the Philippines, at Singapore, in Hawaii and in almost every foreign settlement, and it is bound to be so at Panama. The labor unions in China are almost as important as are our unions here. During my stay in Tientsin some years ago Li Hung Chang was the viceroy of Pechili, and as such he was interested in bringing the Shanhaikwan Railroad into Tientsin. He was able to get it only to the banks of the Peiho River, opposite that city. He started to build a bridge, when the boatmen's union objected, and he had to put his station on the other side. The boatmen are among the lowest of the Chinese coolies, and Li Hung Chang was the strongest official the Celestial empire has ever had; but Li did not dare to antagonize the boatmen.

Another strong union is that of the wheelbarrow men. They do the freighting of the empire, carting goods and passengers on rude barrows, pushed by hand. There are 5000 such men in Shanghai, and when they struck not long ago against an increase of license there was as much distress in that city as there was in Chicago at the time of the teamsters' strike.

Another strong union is that of the slop carriers, the men who bring the dish water and other offensive [illegible] out of the houses and carry it away to be saved for manure. There are no sewers or modern conveniences in most Chinese cities, and these men form one of the most important parts of the laboring element. Not long ago all those employed in the city of Nanking struck on account of the unjust arrest of one of their members. They refused to carry out the slops, and at the end of three days the city stank to such a degree that the people rose and insisted that their demands be granted.

HIS MISSION TO THE WARLIKE WATAITA IN EAST AFRICA.

By William Edgar Geil, F.R.G.S.

IN my journey across the Dark Continent I came upon, in British East Africa, a very remarkable man, Maynard the Lion Hunter. His work among the violent and unconquered Wataita has been marvelously successful, as a memorable Sunday I spent with him in the mountains proved. It was one of those days which stand out from the others of a man's life. Such was the day when I saw the massing of the savage mountaineers to hear the preaching of the great chief.

Religiously the Wataita people believe in Mlungu, a supreme being about whom they have a very vague idea. They do nothing worshipful except in seasons of distress. Then a sheep or goat is slain to propitiate Mlungu and probably to influence their ancestors. There are certain indications that ancestral worship exists among them. They also believe in charms as granting immunity from dangers, and have a superstitious dread of eating or even touching the meat of certain animals. Some Protestant missionaries, men and women, are working among them, as are some Catholic priests.

Much might be said about these interesting mountaineers. Once they were robbers, and even in recent years expeditions have been sent by the government to their lofty villages to kill and destroy. Now all is peaceful, and the few white people find it unnecessary to close and fasten their doors.

LION HUNTER MAYNARD AND SOME OF HIS FOLLOWERS.

August 9 dawned on the Dabida Mountains bright and clear, still and cool, a perfect Sabbath. Over the deep valley to the left of the rising sun, white clouds rolled lightly and lazily as if loath to disappear into still thinner vapor. Above the milk-white mist the magnificent peak Kasegao towered in gigantic splendor. A great stillness pervaded everything, save only the sound of river water rushing over brown rocks in the valley below.

As the morning advanced, the sun shone warmer, a slight breeze sprang up, and the silence was broken by the missionary ringing the bell which bore this inscription: "Holiness unto the Lord." This was the first signal for the assembling of the people. I went out to look. Toward the south, beyond the deep green Mondugu Valley, I saw a string of savages filing down the side of the massive Mwawada Mountain; beyond this, and more than two miles distant, single figures strolled along the narrow track on lofty Ushumbu; others were moving toward the place of worship down the steep side of Mgocho; they came along brown Terini and down the Marangeni Road; groups and long lines passed quickly over the brow of Mogo across the Msungi; and others from the northwest climbed the Saga Hill.

These mountaineers, ex-robbers, fierce clansmen, carrying their steel-tipped spears and arrows soaked in Giriama poison, filed along the crooked mountain tracks, down the well-worn clay ditches, and converged at Mbale. Such a sight might well recall the fierce highlanders of Scott; but here

> The bell had summoned to the glen
> Ere long a full nine hundred men.
> The Mountaineer cast glance of pride
> Along Dabida's living side.

As they passed my tent I watched them: oily dudes with shell-shaped metal bells on their ankles and circles of wire above the calf of the leg; others with necklaces; still others wearing huge earrings four inches in diameter; one youth with a feather in his hair and a few with red turbans; women satisfied to wear skirts two feet in length and 200 yards of beads about the neck, and babies fastened to their backs—large and small, old and young, of various shades from coal black through maroon to peanut color. Mostly they had skin bags containing some plantains to be roasted for the day's food. One boy carried a solitary yam. With such simple diet these gathering mountaineers are satisfied.

I fell in with a group and passed to the place of worship half an hour before the service. There is no church building for this great crowd; the mustering of the men of the mountains for morning worship is under the dome of heaven. Is not such a temple better than

> "Rich windows that exclude the light
> And passages that lead to nothing?"

The Great Chief was there; having fastened his huge spear in front of the crowd, he took his seat where his influence would be most pronounced. I noticed boys with stomachs expanded to twice their natural size; one man with twenty-eight rings on the fingers of his two hands; still another wore some thirty earrings in his lobes. One of the congregation stopped to show me a jigger he had taken out of his foot. Indeed, this was a feature of the congregation; between prayers jiggers were removed with clumsy knives whetted to a sharp point.

Thirty minutes later, still they come in long lines down the mountain paths, up from the valleys, climbing the steep, precipitous sides of the mountain on which the mission stands. Here come the wildest of the highlanders. They have descended from 6000 feet, above the sea. They carry swords, bows and arrows, knives, and curious little pouches containing snuff, which they place between the lips and teeth. These wild men hang their skin food-sacks on the limbs of trees, and one of them stops carefully to examine the preacher's three black cats. Here and there is seen a stonemason or other skilled workman dressed in clean, white, loose garments and wearing a tarboosh. There comes a man with a chunk of wood an inch in width and four inches long in each of his ears.

The service is about to begin, and still they come in long strings up and down precipitous inclines fit only for goats and mountaineers. Many are heavily armed, but all are well-behaved. Women with shaved heads and men with hair done up in 500 little knots, and others with their hair daubed with red clay and oil.

Let this crowd be actuated by revenge, and what havoc they would wreak on their unfortunate enemies, for these are unconquered tribesmen. Even the warlike Masai failed to storm and take their utmost fastnesses. In this congregation are spearmen who down lions with sharp sticks and stab a leopard with a sharp knife. They are attending worship with Mdomoka bows and Muyama arrows, at their sides iron-pointed spears standing upright, and knives dangling from their shoulders.

Not many moons ago these valleys heard a savage yell, saw a wild rush followed by a bloody massacre; now, after only two years of missionary work, they gather this Sunday morning 900 strong. Sometimes 1500, and even 1800, have at one service on this mountainside heard the gospel. The chiefs are here; the head men have come; the young men; the warriors; the hunters; the wives; dusky maidens and children, a real gathering of the clans. In all the region there is not a sound of work, no shouting of the chase. It is Sabbath in the mountains.

They are packed in closely, sitting on the ground as one imagines the multitudes sat on the shores of Galilee when He who gave the bread of life ministered unto the people. There is cheerful talking till the service opens, when all is quiet and attention. Old, familiar hymns are sung in the language of these mountaineers, which is rightly spoken by only three white men in all the world. Then the service of the Church of England is conducted by the missionary. The swarthy audience kneels during prayer. They may not comprehend the full meaning of all this, but who shall say there is no real worship on the Dabida range this quiet Sabbath morning?

Santiago de Chile.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS IN THE OLD ANDEAN CITY.

By a Special Contributor.

SANTIAGO is the oldest and at the same time the most characteristic of the great South American capitals. Both Buenos Aires and Rio outrank it in size, but the former is more Italian than Argentine, while the list of the latter is all to Portuguese; Santiago is distinctively Chilean, the most so, in fact, of all the cities of that country. Contrary to the usual South American rule this condition is rather in favor of Santiago than otherwise. To say that a city is characteristically Brazilian, or Argentine, or Colombian, will, if you are believed, be responsible for conjuring up some very unpleasant pictures in the imagination of one who knows those countries. This is not true of Chile, the people of which country stand out quite alone in South America as hewing most closely to that line of precept and example laid down as the standard of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Santiago was founded early in the sixteenth century by that dashing swashbuckler, Pedro de Valdivia, a character familiar to those who know Prescott's "Conquest of Peru." It is amusing to read in the early history of the manner in which Valdivia came riding up the valley of the Mapocho with an image of the sainted Virgin of the Succors on the horn of his saddle and the somewhat less saintly Doña Inez de Suarez, his lady love, on the crupper. Back among the cavalcade he had two or three more images of the Virgin of Succors, and back in Peru and Spain he nad two or three other lady loves. One of the latter, in fact, was his wife.

As soon as Valdivia got Santiago founded he built a hermitage for his images of the Virgins of the Succors and a convent for the fair Doña Inez. The images gave him little trouble, but, although carefully guarded, Doña Inez eloped on two separate occasions with two equally distinct captains of the guard. On each occasion she was retrieved and it is recorded that she lived to a green old age in which "her pious devotion became as remarkable as the record of her youthful exploits." Strange, isn't it, how many people confine their really serious pursuit of religion to the two extremities of childhood and old age? And what a strange anomaly it is that feet that toddle and knees that totter usually bear their owners down the straightest paths.

Military considerations were paramount in determining the site of the original city of Santiago, the chief of these being the ease with which a high hill, rising as abruptly from the plain as an island from the sea, could be defended from the attacks of the Indians. This hill is the present Cerro de Santa Lucia, one of the most unique and beautiful parks possessed by any city in the world. The Indian name for this hill was a word meaning "distress," which, as the aboriginal inhabitants of Northern Chile were very weak and lazy, may be due to the feeling engendered in them by climbing it. Now the ascent may be made on a miniature railway or by cab, while if mounted on foot, tired bones may be rested against smooth-backed benches at an average of every ten paces. No wonder our modern nomenclature is less fanciful than that of the Indians; we have less to stir our imagination.

The beautification of Santa Lucia was conceived by a master mind and I believe the credit is almost entirely due to the brilliant and kindly Benjamin Vicuña Mackenna, a Chilean historian and patriot of the last generation. Contrary to the usual system of parking, nature has been assisted rather than restrained, and the walks, drives and buildings have done little to mar the rugged beauty of the original hill. There is scarcely a point upon the whole hill where a dozen steps in one direction will not lead you into a grotto or down a "blind" pathway where you have to feel your way with your hands, and where half a dozen steps in another direction will not place you where the heliographic flashes from a snowy peak a hundred miles away make you blink and shake your head like a suddenly-awakened owl.

Being a park of the people, Santa Lucia must necessarily cater to all sorts and conditions, and most nobly does it fulfill its destiny. If you are sentimental you can dream in a cool bower among the fronded ferns, while if your dream comes true, and you are loved and loving, you can find fitting environment in the little stone seat at the end of one of the leafy pathways. If you are esthetic you will ask for no more than to gaze at the periphery of snowy peaks that rim the valley; if sordid, take out a paper and pencil and figure up the rents in the four blocks that abut the Plaza de Armas; if you are religious, pace about the old shrine on the summit, where, if you are penitent, may be found several square yards of most beautifully sharp little stones to mortify the soul via the knees.

If you are romantic, turn your fancy loose before the statue of Pedro de Valdivia; if melancholy, pause and ponder at the spot where lie buried all the foreigners who died in Santiago from 1820 to 1872, the "Expatriados del cielo y de la tierra."

Santiago is one of the most beautifully located capitals in the world. A soulful countrywoman of ours from Philadelphia, who has written prettily and appreciatively of Chile, calls it the "Andean city of the snow-white crown," and goes on to say that: "Like a queen in the giant castle that nature has given her, with walls of the imperishable granite of the Cordilleras, and towers reaching to the skies, she seems created for the homage of those who gaze upon her. Her face is turned toward the sunset, as if in expectation of the high destiny that awaits this land of promise in the golden west of South America. And from the snowy peaks behind her, marked clear against the blue sky, to the farthest limits westward bordered by the boundless Pacific, there is no alien territory to limit the prospect of her fair domain. Her jewels, rare and resplendent, are the rich emerald of Andean valleys, the matchless sapphire of Andean skies, the pure diamond of Andean streams. Her royal robes are woven of the marvelous purple and gold of Andean sunsets, unrivaled in brilliancy, and imparting to her gracious beauty the glow of infinite loveliness, as they envelop her utterly, catching even the snowy peaks of her sovereign diadem in their magic folds."

This description is very beautiful and I think it is all true, but for the benefit of those who are not blessed with pinions sufficiently feathered to fan the ether at this height I will take the liberty of quoting a friend of mine on the same subject. He was a young Australian whom I knew in Sydney a year or so ago and chance had again thrown us together in Santiago. A common acquaintance of ours had a little chalet or shooting lodge up on the side of the Cordilleras, at an altitude of about 10,000 feet, and thither a little party of half a dozen of us journeyed one Saturday in the customary week-end search for rest and recreation. We made most of the journey on mules, but the last half mile was a heart-breaking climb on foot over frozen snow, and when our destination was reached, the major portion of the party tumbled into bunks without any preliminaries whatever.

Not so, however, the young antipodean. He knew from the time that the sun must be setting over the valley of the Mapocho and, summoning his energies for a final effort, he crawled to the top of a precipitous but not very lofty ridge that cut off the chalet from a view of the city more than a mile and a half below. Presently we knew he had reached his vantage point, for we heard him calling for us, first peremptorily, then pleadingly, and, finally, angrily and disgustedly, interlarding his adjurations with picturesque larrikin and bushranger oaths. In the silence that followed we heard him come scrambling down and enter the cabin. Then there was a clink of glasses, the sound of a drawn cork and the tinkle of poured liquid, following which we were all, in turn, yanked by the collars from our bunks to confront the frowning muzzles of a half dozen half-filled tumblers of brandy that threatened us from the table. After standing over us until these were consumed our indefatigable companion rounded us up into a bunch and drove us unresistingly to the summit of the ridge.

We brought up at the crest of the ridge, breathless and speechless, the one from exertion, the other from surprise. The sun had just disappeared behind the peak to the west and all the world, from the valley floor to the mountain tops, was one wild welter of vivid color. And the wonderful thing of it was that the valley, which should properly have been in darkness, stood out as under calcium in an all-suffusing light that came streaming down from the western mountains, almost as palpable as a poured liquid. The houses of Santiago showed as clear as if the sun were shining upon them, yet they cast no shadows; the wonderful radiance seemed to assail them from all sides. Save our host none of us had seen the sunset from the high Cordillera before and the sight was an experience of a lifetime.

Finally the Australian, who had restrained himself as long as he could, broke the silence that held us. "Why don't you jackaroos say something?" he cried impatiently. "Haven't you any imagination? Don't you see anything remarkable? What d'ye think I brought you up here for? To see the sunset?" (This in answer to a timid suggestion to that effect.) "No fear. Sunset's responsible but not the main item by a long ways. Don't see it yet? Then you haven't any more imagination than a bunch of wombats. Follow me close now, and I'll let you in; I saw it as soon as I came up here.

"This whole bally layout is a punch bowl; the valley's the bottom, the mountains are the sides, and these white peaks the fancy work around the rim. The blooming red light is the punch and those yellow domes down there are lemons that have been cut up in it. Santa Lucia, with all that white cement work, is a big piece of ice with a sharp corner floating above the surface, and those blue and green roofs are flat pieces of ice that are floating submerged. Those red-tile roofs are candied cherries and all the rest of everything is the sugar and the dregs that have sunk to the bottom. There's a ladle, too. The end of its handle is that slender peak that stands out so far beyond the rim of the bowl, and the rest of the handle is that dark ridge that runs down into the punch. That blur of Cousiño Park is the ladle proper. No, it doesn't lie quite in line with the handle, but that is due to the refraction of the punch." I am setting down this homely comparison for the use of those who do not feel equal to the first one I quoted.

Santiago has been likened to Rome, in which comparison the hill of Santa Lucia is supposed to correspond to that of the Quirinal and the Alameda de las Delicias to the Appian Way. Here the comparison has to stop, for Santiago would need six more hills to make up the seven that Rome sat on while there is only the little Mapocho to correspond to the yellow Tiber. Also there are architectural features of the ancient city of the Caesars that could hardly find counterpart in the Chilean capital.

But whether she is a second Rome or not, Santiago stands quite steadily enough on her own legs. Nearly all of the South American countries have some bright and glorious spots in their histories, some of them many, but in all of them except Chile the pages are pretty indiscriminately mottled with black and white. Among all her sister republics the history of Chile alone is the only one I can conceive a people can take an honest pride in and care to have taught to its younger generation in its schools. She is the only one of these countries that has never repudiated her debts abroad, and her record of internal and foreign wars is quite as creditable as that of the United States, and far more so than that of any other republic in the western hemisphere. Much of the story of this honorable past is told in the bronze and marble statues erected by Chile to her heroes in the Alameda de las Delicias and the manner of recording them is worthy of the deeds commemorated.

The Alameda leads from Santiago's only railway station to the base of Santa Lucia in the very heart of the city, a distance of about three miles. It has a width of 350 feet, and is lined continuously with residences, business blocks and churches. The outer 100 feet on each side are devoted to cobble-paved streets and the tramways; the 150 feet in the middle are reserved for those on foot and contain several rows of fine old trees, ditches of running water and the best statuary to be found in Chile. The Alameda is the only means of approach and departure to and from the capital and the impression it makes on the stranger fully warrants the money and pains lavished upon it.

One of the first things that strikes a new-comer studying Chilean history as recorded in the Alameda is that the nation must have been made by a band of soldiers of fortune, for if four names occur oftener than others it is those of O'Higgins, Prat, Cochrane and Mackenna. On inquiry, however, you learn that only Admiral Lord Cochrane, temporarily discredited in England, and fighting in Chile for the love of it, can be thus characterized. The others were of English descent but native-born and the staunchest of patriots. O'Higgins was the most striking figure of the War of Independence, Prat was the naval hero of the War of the Pacific, waged between Chile and Peru, while Mackenna was a historian and philanthropist.

The Santiaguenos are very proud of their open-air gallery, and in a very considerable amount of sanguinary strife that has swept up and down the Alameda at one time or another they have very carefully restrained themselves from venting their wrath on the statuary. There has been one exception to this rule, but it pleases me to believe that the thing occurred because the Chilean roto has a sense of humor as well as artistic discrimination. The term roto is one applied in a general way to all of the lower class of laborers; [illegible] reproach is implied in it, but a Chilean laborer resents it in much the same way that "nigger" and "dago" are resented by negroes and Italians.

About a year ago there was a very general and very serious strike of the rotos in Santiago, and, among others, the cab drivers were out. Now in the Alameda, about midway between the railroad station and Santa Lucia, there is a little rock-walled lake of water and in the middle of the lake a big double or triple life-size group in Portland cement of Neptune and his chariot. It is a cheap, flashy piece of work, and not at all in keeping with the "Hall of Fame" atmosphere of the Alameda. On gala occasions it is provided with colored side lights, while an ingenious arrangement of pipes is so laid as to churn up the water and give the effect of motion. It would go all right with chutes, hurdy-gurdies, elephants and pink lemonade, but is quite out of place among the monuments to a nation's hallowed dead.

There was considerable fighting incident to this strike and many of the strikers were killed before they were finally dislodged from the positions they had endeavored to hold along the Alameda. When the troops came to take possession they found, as usual, the statues of the nation's heroes without a scratch, but poor old Neptune was short his whiphand, while all the [illegible] prancing forelegs had been battered off his three horses. Of course the strikers were promptly branded as iconoclasts, and the sheep-like course of public opinion was actually beginning to run strongly against them when a lone cabby came out with the declaration that he had smashed up Neptune's rig because the latter was driving a public carriage when a strike was on. A laugh rang out all over the city when the people heard this, and a laugh at a crisis is a mighty good thing for the man that raises it. Public opinion halted and wavered in the balance, but when another cabby came out and said that he had stood firm while his comrades fell about him, wounded and dying, but when he looked at the Neptune statue his courage had all run out of his finger tips at the sight, the public laughed and tumbled over itself in its hurry to tender its sympathy to the strikers, which latter, as a result, forced their fight to a successful conclusion.

Neptune and his "rig" still stand just as the outraged cabby left them, but his sidelights and the churn pipes are operated no more. The Alcalde, who I am told, is one of those who believes Santiago [illegible], is in favor of restoration, but the art-loving public—and the rotos—are making a strong stand for [illegible] the monument to paving stones.

The roto has his points; he is a magnificent man physically, he makes one of the best and bravest soldiers in the world, and, under normal conditions, is a first-class worker. Normal conditions for him usually exist during five days of the week, from Tuesday morning to Saturday night. Sunday he is not expected to work and Monday he is unable to. His dislike for water, both for external and internal use, is the roto's worst fault; he is too much devoted to his chicha and too lukewarm in his affection for his wash basin. An uncharitable person might say that he is drunken and dirty, but he is far too fine a fellow to be thus stigmatized. He steadfastly refuses to learn the truth, however, that dirt and drunkenness are luxuries to be indulged in only by the very rich, and he pays the penalty of his persistence by remaining always poor.

Saturday is pay day for the roto, and on that evening, after—or before—paying the week's bills, he enters upon a career of song and dance that may terminate any time before Monday morning. The song and dance is liberally punctuated with drink, mainly chicha and aguardiente, and any time after—or before—Sunday noon, the fighting begins. From that time on, the police stations begin to fill, the influx continuing till Monday morning and being limited only by the standing-room capacity of the stations and the ability of the police

Drink is a far greater national curse in Chile than in the States—greater, even, than in England—but the habit is so deeply rooted in all classes that for a family to have one or more habitual drunkards, except as its earning ability is impaired, is by no means such a mis- disgrace, I would almost say tragedy, as with Anglo-Saxons. To one who chanced upon it for the first time one of these Monday morning gatherings of the relief parties is more like the meeting of friends at family reunion than the sweeping up of the remnants of a hundred drunken orgies. There are few tears, and to see some of the women embrace their husbands would make you think they were the only survivors of railroad wreck. After the absurdly small fine has been paid, the reunited families scatter gaily to their homes like returning picnickers, chatting merrily, comparing recollections of what happened and, no doubt, planning the details of their next week-end party.

Santiago, as the capital and vortex of the Chilean political pot, has to bear a not entirely deserved odium on account of some very unsavory messes that are cooked in this same pot. Chilean national politics are no worse than those of any other South American republic; in fact they are distinctly better than most of them. Unfortunately this is not saying a great deal, for one needs a deep-sea lead rather than a balloon to reach the average level of South American politics. The ways, methods and general modes of procedure followed in Chilean politics are, I should say, best comparable to those in vogue in the worst of our municipal rings, only here the organization is less complete than in the States, and the clank of the machinery grates a bit harshly upon the ear.

The great trouble in Chile is the professional politician; there are far too many of him. In the most notorious instances in the States where money has been used to obtain a seat in the Senate, those doing so have invariably been rich men who desired the seat to round out in orthodox fashion a more or less unorthodox career. After the seats have been once obtained there has been nothing to show that their occupants have ever been anything but the very souls of virtue. Not so in Chile. Here every election shows numerous instances of comparatively poor men spending fifteen or twenty times the salary attached to a certain office in order to be elected to it—and at the end of their terms they retire rich. It is supposed to be unlawful to hold conversation with a prospective voter within fifty meters of the polls, yet at the last Presidential election I saw two eager missionaries go unchallenged in following, money in hand, a wavering citizen to the very door of the booth. The clink of coin is the commonest sound to be heard on election day in Chile.

In most of its details the government of Chile, like that of the majority of the other South American republics, very closely parallels that of the United States. They will tell you that it is a more centralized power. The working of the inner wheels is such that at the expiration of his first term, a President, although he is not permitted to succeed himself, can come pretty near designating whom his successor shall be. Then the latter, at the end of his five years, provided he keeps faith, can do a great deal toward putting his predecessor into office again. Perhaps this is what they mean by the term "rotation." This "endless chain" system, after an uninterrupted run of several terms, met, in the defeat of Lascano by Montt in the elections of last June, a most decided check.

The two principal political parties of Chile may be roughly designated as the Liberals and Conservatives. The latter include most of the large land holders; they cling tenaciously to the old order of things, and aim to maintain the union of the church and state. The Liberals are progressive and are trying to divorce the church and the state. In this object they were so far successful when last in power, several terms back, as to have brought about the desecularization of marriages. Nothing you can have a priest marry you if you wish, but if you want to launch the matrimonial bark it needs only a shove from a registrar, the proceeding is quite regular. There is also another party called the Balmacedista, which takes its name from the ill-fated President who committed suicide shortly after the overthrow of his government in the revolution of '91. This party is composed almost entirely of professional office seekers, and, often holding the balance of power, it is occasionally able to make good terms for its influence.

As the time for the election of last June drew near, it began to dawn upon the Chilean people that the Conservative line of Presidents bade fair to become a dynasty. Riesco, the incumbent, had been railroaded into office by a predecessor to whom he was closely related, while Laszcano, nominated to succeed him, was a member of his family by marriage. The Conservative administrations had been disgracefully corrupt, prices had doubled, and all indications were for worse times. This crisis proved the opportunity the Liberals needed, and they seized it by placing in nomination for the Presidency Don Pedro Montt, a gentleman with a clean past, a patriot and the descendant of patriots, and a one-time Chilean Minister in Washington. Of course it was necessary to fight the devil with fire, and a bumper campaign fund was needed, but the English and American interests in Chile rallied to the standard of Montt and purity, and before long there was money enough to have brought voters in from Argentina had it proved necessary.

The election itself was one of the finest rough-and-tumble, catch-as-catch-can affairs of which I have recollection. By liberal promises the Conservatives drew the purchasable Balamecedistas inside their lines, and the church came boldly out with special masses for the success of the same party. Against this imposing array the Liberals advanced backed by only their virtue and unlimited credit. The virtue was kept constantly on parade in the van, while the credit worked silently and industriously in the background. I have not seen so many gratuities in circulation since those good old days up in Montana when Clark and Daly settled their private differences in public.

When the balances were settled up, it became apparent that Montt had been elected by a majority of over a million dollars, which handsome margain worked out in the electoral college at something like two votes for Montt for every one that was cast for Laszcano.

Not long ago, I, with several other Americans, had the honor of being presented to President-elect Montt in Antofagasta, on which occasion he assured us that it was his ambition to make Chile as much like the United States as possible. Thinking of the election, we all assured him that he had completely eclipsed us already.

Why Is a Woman?

THE SUBJECT DISCUSSED BY THE WIDOW AND THE BACHELOR.

By a Special Contributor.

"WHY is a woman?" snapped the bachelor, flinging himself into the big armchair opposite the widow with a challenging glance.

"Why—why, because," stammered the widow, startled at his sudden appearance.

"I knew it!" said the bachelor with conviction.

"And there are lots of other reasons, Mr. Travers."

"But they aren't reasonable," declared the bachelor doggedly.

The widow closed her book with a sigh and laid it on the table beside her.

"Who said they were?" she asked witheringly. "Neither is a woman. Being reasonable is so stupid. It's worse than being suitable or sensible, or—or proper."

The bachelor lifted his eyebrows in mild astonishment.

"I thought those were virtues," he protested.

"They are, Mr. Travers," returned the widow crushingly, "and that's why they're so uninteresting. You might as well ask why is music, or painting, or pate de foie gras, or champagne, or ice cream, or anything else charming and delicious——"

"And utterly useless."

"Of course," agreed the widow, leaning back and thoughtfully twisting the bit of lace she called a handkerchief. "It's the utterly useless things that make the world attractive and pleasant to live in—like flowers and bonbons and politics and love——"

"And tobacco," added the bachelor reflectively.

"Woman is the dessert to the feast," went on the widow, "the trimmings on the garment of life, the spice in the pudding. Of course, a man can eat his dinner without dessert or champagne and live his life without kisses or a woman—but somehow he never does."

"And that's just where he gets into trouble," retorted the bachelor promptly. "If you could only tell," he went on pathetically, "what any one of them was going to do or why she was going to do it, or——'

"Then it isn't 'Why is a woman?' but 'Why does a woman?' that you wanted to know," interrupted the widow, helpfully.

"That's it!" cried the bachelor, "why does she get off a car backward? Why does she wear a skirt four yards long and then get furious if you step on it? Why does she make a solemn and important engagement without the slightest intention of keeping it? Why does she put on open-work stockings and gaudy shoes and hold her frock as high as she dares—and then annihilate you if you stare at her? Why does she use everything as it was not intended to be used—a hairpin to pick a lock, a buttonhook to open a can, a hair brush to hammer a nail, a hatpin to rob a letter box, a razor to sharpen a pencil and a cup and saucer to decorate the mantelpiece? Why does she gush over the woman she hates worst and snub the man she is dying to marry? Why does she lick all the glue off a postage stamp and then try to make it stick? Why does she cry at a wedding and act frivolous at a funeral? Why does she put a new feather on her hat and a new kink in her hair, and expect a man to notice it as quickly and be as astonished as he would if she had shaved her head or lost a limb? Why does she seem offended if you don't make love to her, and then get angry if you do? Why does she act kittenish when she's big and dignified, when she's little and old, when she's young and silly, when she's old? And why, oh, why, did you inveigle me into coming down to this miserable pink-and-white house party with the hope of being near you and then utterly ignore me and spend your time flirting with Bobby Taylor, while I sulk about like a lost sheep or run errands——"

"For Miss Manners?' suggested the widow cuttingly.

"Miss Manners!" exclaimed the bachelor scornfully.

"You once thought her very beautiful, Mr. Travers."

"That's just it!' retorted the bachelor. "Why didn't you let me go on thinking her beautiful——"

"'As delicate as a sea shell,' wasn't it?"

"Yes," snapped the bachelor, "and as—hollow!"

The widow smiled enigmatically.

"Tell me," she said sympathetically, "what she has done to you."

"Well, for one thing," complained the bachelor, "she coaxed me out on the piazza last night in the moonlight, and then, when she had talked sentiment for half an hour and lured me to a dark spot and simply goaded me into taking her hand——"

The widow sat up straight.

"But you didn't do it, Billy Travers!"

"Of course I did. It seemed almost an insult not to. And what did she do? She jerked it away, flung herself from me, rose like an outraged queen, turned on me with that 'I-thought-you-were-a-gentleman' air, and said——"

The widow lay back in her chair and laughed.

"Oh, mercy!" she said, wiping the tears from her eyes when she was able. "Excuse me, but—but—how did she look when she did it?"

"Well," confessed the bachelor, "she did look rather stunning."

"That's why she did it," explained the widow between laughs; "a woman's reason for doing most things is because she thinks she will look well doing them."

"Or because she thinks you will look surprised if she does them."

"Or because she wants to attract your attention."

"Or to make you feel uncomfortable."

"Or to astonish you or amuse your——"

"Work on your sensibilities, or get on your nerves, or play on your sympathies. But," he went on growing wroth at the recollection, "the idea of a little chit like that—and that isn't the worst. This morning she dragged me out of bed at half past 5 to go fishing. Fishing! At this season! I never saw a girl so crazy for fish in my life; and when we had walked four miles to find the right spot and she had been silent long enough for me to feel a nibble at the bait and had helped me with all her might and main to haul in that blessed little fish, do you know what she did?

The widow looked up questioningly.

"She cried because I wanted to bring it home, and made me throw it back into the water. That's what she did!"

The widow sat up straight, with horrified eyes.

"Well, of course she did!" she exclaimed heatedly. "She only asked you to catch the fish, didn't she—not to kill it?"

The bachelor stared at her for a moment without speaking. Then he got up silently and walked over to the window.

"I suppose," he remarked after a long pause, apparently addressing the front lawn or the blue heavens, "that it's that same sort of logic that incites a woman to play for a man until she catches him—and then throw him overboard. O Lord," he continued glancing at the sky devoutly, "why couldn't you have made them nice and sensible?"

The widow took up her book with disdain.

"Nice and sensible!" she repeated witheringly. "Just think how it would feel to be called 'nice and sensible!' I wish," she added, turning to her novel with an air of boredom, "that you would go and—talk to Ethel Manners."

The bachelor eyed her narrowly.

"I guess I will," he said finally. "She seems more interesting—now that you've explained her."

The widow stopped in the middle of a paragraph and looked up.

"And by Jove!" went on the bachelor reminiscently, turning to the window again, "she did look dreamy in a sunbonnet and that little short skirt this morning. She has adorable feet, you know."

The widow closed her book with a sharp snap, keeping her fingers between the pages.

"I know, Mr. Travers; but how did you know?"

"I looked at them," confessed the bachelor frankly, "and her ankle——"

The widow's mouth closed in a straight line.

"I'm afraid, Mr. Travers," she remarked frigidly, "that you are not a fit companion for a young girl like Ethel."

"I'm not equal to her," grinned the bachelor.

"No, you're not. She's a nice, sensible girl and——"

"Do you hate her very much?"

"Hate her?" The widow's eyes opened with astonishment.

"You called her 'nice and sensible.'"

"Bobby Taylor's looking for you, Marion," called Miss Manners, glancing in at the door suddenly.

Well, good-by. I'm off," said the bachelor, following the swish of Miss Manners's skirts with his eyes, as she hurried away down the hall.

"Sit down, Mr. Travers!" commanded the widow in an awful tone.

At that moment a buoyant young man poked his head in at the door.

"Go away, Bobby," said the widow. "Mr. Travers and I are discussing—er—psychology."

"Ugh!" remarked Bobby, dutifully withdrawing, "why do you do it, if it hurts?"

The bachelor looked up at the widow under the tail of his eyelid.

"Does it hurt?" he asked.

But the widow's underlip was curled into a distinct pout, and her eyes met his reproachfully. She dabbed them effectively with the end of her lace handkerchief.

"Of c-course it does," she said with a little choke in her voice, "when you have been here three whole days and have never noticed me, and have spent every minute of your time trailing around after that—that—little——"

"But wasn't that what you invited me for?" exclaimed the bachelor helplessly.

"Of course it was," acknowledged the widow, "but—but I didn't think you'd do it."

The bachelor gazed at her a moment in blank amazement. Then a gleam of enlightenment came into his eyes and he leaned over and caught her fingers.

"Look here, Marion," he said gently, "you invited me down here to fling that girl at my head. If you didn't want me to fall in love with her, what did you want?"

"I wanted you to get enough of her!" explained the widow, smiling through her lace handkerchief.

"Well—I have. I've got too much!" vowed the bachelor fervently.

The widow laughed softly and complacently.

"That's just what I knew would happen," she said, closing her novel and flinging it onto the couch.

Then she added, looking up quizzically:

"A woman always has a reason—if you can only find out what it is."

HELEN ROWLAND.

Beyond the Seas.

WAYSIDE WANDERINGS IN LAND OF THE DON.

By a Special Contributor.

WHAT joy to sail the sunny waters of the Mediterranean, and to ramble care-free and unrestrained through all those enchanted lands beyond the summer seas!

'Tis there by the ancient "Pillars of Hercules" that the Occident and Orient meet and intermingle; and there that the hurry and bustle of the western world and the twentieth century are left far behind us as we wander, enraptured, through the dim and lovely cloisters of ancient monasteries, through Arabian palaces of indescribable splendor; hand in hand with romance and the legendary history of the days of chivalry.

On the one hand lies Africa, with her hot sands, her boundless wastes and her white-walled cities, and that ever-fascinating, half-barbaric splendor of the lands of Islam. On the other, Spain, with her thirty centuries of marvelous history; her wondrous castles and palaces, and the subdued glory of her dim cathedral aisles; her towering mountain ranges, clothed in royal purple and crowned with eternal snows, her valleys of unrivaled richness, filled with the green and gold of the orange groves, the silver gray of the vast olive orchards and the shadowy splendor of her great cork forests; the greatest in all the world.

It is the land of the Cid, and of Don Quixote; the land of Ferdinand and Isabella, and of Roderick and Goth; but above all, the land of Tarik the One-eyed, and of that grim old warrior, Muley Abd'Allah el Zagal, and the splendor loving Caliph Abd er Rhaman; the land where the art and civilization of the Saracens reached the zenith of its glory.

Among all the romantic cities of the Orient, Bagdad, Mecca, Damascus, Constantinople, Tunis, Fez, and even Cairo, the wondrous city of the Khalifs, none has ever attained the architectural splendor of these three great Moorish capitals of Spain: Cordova, the lovely "Pearl of the Saracens;" Seville, beloved "Queen of Andalusia," and "Granada the Beautiful," where the glory of Arab art reached its culmination in the Alhambra; and whose gates closed forever upon Moorish dominion in Spain over 400 years ago.

Glories of the Alhambra.

Books innumerable have been written in vain attempts to describe the glories of the Alhambra, but none have ever given more than a hint of the fairy-like grace, the indescribable fragile loveliness of this gem of Arab art. It remains today as it has been for nearly 700 years, the joy and the despair alike of poets, artists and writers, one of the most rapturously lovely things that human hands have ever fashioned.

The infinite variety of mosaic and arabesque ornamentation is almost beyond belief. The gorgeous stalactite ceilings glitter with all the coloring of the rainbow, and the sunlight, filtering through jeweled windows and lovely marble lattice work, is like sifted gold. Throughout all the vast extent of this fairy palace there is an indescribable atmosphere of the farthest east, awakening in our minds vague, romantic memories and enchanted legends of that dim, far-distant age of Haroun al Rashid and the "Arabian Nights."

It is more than a sentiment which pervades the art of the Arabs. It is the fervent expression of an intense faith; and in the intricate design of each lovely arabesque, and throughout the lace-like traceries of every splendid frieze, we find the graceful Arabic characters spelling the battle cry of that strange religion which now dominates one-third of the world's people

"Allahu Akbar!
Allahu Akbar!"

"God is great! There is no God but God, and Mohammed is the Prophet of God!"

It is like awakening in Paradise to ramble through the dreamy passages and splendid courts of this loveliest of all Arabian palaces, and yet the Alhambra has been the scene of many terrible tragedies and bloody episodes. Langorous dark-eyed beauties of the harem have disappeared mysteriously without leaving a trace behind them. Princes of the blood royal have been strangled and beheaded within these lovely walls, and, terrible as it may seem, often at the order of their own fathers or brothers.

In the beautiful Hall of the Abencerrages, one of the most exquisite chambers ever fashioned by the hand of man, the natives of Granada to this day point out the red veins in the marble pavement which they confidently believe to be the blood of those unfortunate Arab princes whose heads were here chopped off over a fountain of alabaster by order of Boabdil, the last Caliph of Granada.

Cordova the Magnificent.

Cordova, the first great capital of the Saracen empire of the west, was originally a Roman city, and here the great philosopher Seneca was born. The city is rich in structures of great historic interest, possessing numerous monuments of Roman and Arabian antiquity, among them being several ancient city gates in the massive walls and a most picturesque old bridge across the Guadalquivir River, constructed by the Romans in the time of Augustus Caesar and rebuilt a thousand years later by the Arabs, under the Caliph Abd er Rhaman. There are also ruined Roman towers and embattled walls and an ancient Roman bath, and many quaint old houses whose rich architecture dates back to the times of the Arab khalifs, but the crowning glory of Cordova is the "Alhama," that glorious mosque which, in the days of Saracen Spain, rivalled even the great mosque of Mecca in its grandeur, where to this Moslem shrine upon the banks of the Guadalquivir, gathered multitudes of the faithful from the four corners of the known world—from Tunis, Cairo, Alexandria, Fez, Bagdad, Delhi, Damascus, and all the mysterious cities of the farthest east—to prostrate themselves before the marvelous Mirab of Abd er Rhaman's splendid Mosque of a Thousand Columns.

The entrance to the mosque is through a lovely patio filled with orange and cypress trees, palms and blooming flowers; with a plashing fountain, where, in the days of Islam, the faithful were wont to perform their ablutions before entering the house of Allah. The Mosque of Cordova is, after the Mosque of Omar at Jerusalem, the most beautiful Musselman temple in the world; the Mosque of Santa Sophia, at Constantinople, being, properly speaking, a Christian church of the Byzantine epoch. It is, by universal consent, one of the most wondrous structures in the world, although its grandeur has suffered greatly from the alterations of the Christian conquerors.

The first effect as we enter the mosque from the Court of Oranges is bewildering in the extreme; a great forest of polished marble columns of every conceivable color extending away in every direction, forming long and imposing avenues of glittering pillars, ending in exquisite vistas of stucco and iridescent mosaics. These columns are of porphyry, jasper and precious marbles of every exquisite hue, brought from the ancient ruins of Africa, Asia and Southern Europe, and they originally numbered 1400. The 900 columns which still remain are sufficient to give us some impression of the ancient grandeur of this great Moslem shrine in the golden days of the Caliphate of Spain, when the shadows of these fifty splendid naves were dispelled by the light of 400 silver lamps burning perfumed oil and swung from the ceiling by silver chains.

The Mirab, or Prayer Niche, is one of the most marvelous creations of Arab art in existence. In this niche, according to the Mohammedan belief, the spirit of God rested; and here the Koran, encased in purest gold and studded with pearls, was deposited in such a position that all worshipers praying toward it would be compelled to face the holy city of Mecca, in Arabia.

The Mirab of Cordova is one dazzling gleam of crystals and splendid mosaic, a bewildering riot of arabesques, a dizzy transport of color, and a maze of intricate designs of daintiest embroidery worked in gl jewels; a thing so radiant and beautiful that our minds are quite powerless to either wholly grasp or retain the exquisite details of this true miracle of Arab art. Amid the labyrinth of splendid columns in the center of the Mosque is a Christian church, erected by Charles V; a structure which, except for the magnificent carved woodwork of the pulpits and choir stalls, compares unfavorably in every way with the more graceful and delicate work of the Moors. This entire splendid structure is now known to the world as the Cathedral of Cordova, but it is in reality a Christian church within a Mohammedan mosque.

The most striking feature of modern Cordova, architecturally, is the patio, a most delightful little courtyard, around which houses of the better class are built. These patios are surrounded by colonnades of classic columns, paved with marble, decorated with mosaics and statuary and open to the sky, or covered at the level of the roof by awnings. They are filled with palms and flowers and singing birds, and each, as a rule, has a plashing fountain in its center. Here, during the warm summer months, the Spanish family lives, and the glimpses which we catch through the open Moorish doorways are very charming indeed, while the dark-eyed señoritas smile out at us from among the flowers, and the perfume of roses and orange blossoms fill the soft Andalusian air.

The women of Andalusia wear no head covering, with the exception of the graceful mantilla; but more often even this is dispensed with, and their raven tresses are adorned only by a red rose or other flower. From the lady of quality to the gypsy women of Granada and the cigarette girls of Seville, all wear coquettish and altogether charming red roses in their hair.

Seville was also a Roman city, and gave two emperors to Rome, both Trajan and Hadrian having been born here in the camps of the Roman legions, a thousand years before Christians and Moors battled for the supremacy over these fair fields of Andalusia.

The supreme points of interest in the charming city are the Giralda; the Cathedral, with its matchless Moorish tower; the splendid Arab palace known as the Alcazar, and the National Art Galleries, filled with treasures from the brush of the great Murillo. The Cathedral of Seville is an enormous structure, standing alone in the middle of an immense square, and dates from 1401. It is recorded that its builders, in planning its mighty proportions, expressed their ambition in these words:

"Let us erect such a monument that posterity will say we were madmen!"

The exterior of the cathedral is fortress-like in appearance, and lacks the glorious Gothic lines of Milan and Cologne, but the interior of the mighty church is fully as awe-inspiring in its immensity and majestic splendor as either of those famous cathedrals. The glorious ceilings of the cathedral are of Moorish stone fretwork, and at their great height above the marble floor resemble frozen lacework; while the forest of mighty columns are stupendous masses of masonry rivalling those of Cologne.

A procession of priests, in robes of purple and black and white, attended by acolytes in scarlet, swinging smoking censers and bearing richly-decorated banners as they pass among the stately columns with a flood of colored light pouring upon them through the glorious stained-glass windows, is a most wonderfully impressive and solemn sight.

The world-famed Giralda Tower, now used as a campanile, or bell tower, for the Cathedral of Seville, is an ancient Arabian tower built nearly a thousand years ago and originally used by the Moors as an astronomical observatory. The Christian conquerors, not knowing its original use, utilized it as a bell tower and built their cathedral adjoining it for that reason. Its beautiful rose color and its graceful Arabic decorations give it an appearance of airiness and dainty gracefulness quite out of keeping with its immense size.

We ascend to the top by means of an inclined plane along the interior walls of the tower, after the manner of the ill-fated Campanile of St. Mark's in Venice. Up this incline one of the conquering kings of [illegible] rode his horse to the summit of the tower.

The view from the top is one of the loveliest panoramas that ever smiled upon the eye of man; embracing the entire city of Seville, lying far below us like a city of dolls, encircled by beautiful gardens and vineyards, with the delicious Valley of the Guadalquivir and the plains of the sunny Andalusia spreading away to the hazy blue of the distant mountains, and the shining river, with its shipping and bridges, mirroring in its surface the ancient Tower of Gold, a historic structure said to date from the time of the Roman empire. Below us are the dark turreted walls of the Alcazar, with their thrilling memories of the Moorish occupation, while in the distance a glimpse of the great bull ring puts us in touch with modern Spain.

The Alcazar is an ancient palace of the Moorish kings and is only less beautiful than the Alhambra of Granada. Having been almost continuously occupied by the royalty of Spain since the conquest, the Alcazar is in no sense a ruin, as is a large part of the Alhambra, but for that very reason it lacks much of the charm of antiquity with which Granada's peerless palace enthralls us. Three dynasties of kings have dwelt within these lovely walls, and some of the darkest crimes of Spanish history have cast their shadows upon these scenes of beauty. The splendor of the Arab court seems to be conjured up before us as we pass from the gorgeous "Hall of the Ambassadors;" the marvel is for the instant changed to enchantment! Beautiful and dark-eyed odalisques seem to peer at us from the lattices of the lovely little windows, and the restless spirits of Maria de Padilla and the murdered Don Fadrique, Charles the Fifth, Philip the Second and Pedro the Cruel are conjured from the long-forgotten past to people anew the splendid halls of this Arabian palace where once they dwelt.

Americans in Cuba.

TWENTY-NINE COLONIES FOUNDED SINCE CLOSE OF THE WAR.

By a Special Contributor.

THE Americanization of Cuba has gone on so quietly and yet so rapidly that it was not until the present internal difficulties arose that most persons came to realize the size of the American stake in the island republic. From a financial point of view, it may be said that our interests in Cuba are almost as great as those of the Cubans themselves. American trade, American financial interests, the American monetary system, American machinery and American enterprise are all to the fore in Cuba, and it is for this reason that most of those familiar with actual conditions in Cuba believe that the ultimate acquisition of the island by the United States is inevitable.

When the war with Spain ended, Cuba was a commercial, industrial, financial and political wreck. The output of sugar, her chief crop and the most important index of her prosperity, had fallen from 1,004,000 tons in 1895 to the insignificant proportions of 212,051 tons in 1897; while tobacco, the next most important crop, which had reached a value of $11,727,000 in 1893, dropped to $4,277,000 in the same two years. Two months ago, when the leaders of the Cuban Liberal party were arrested at the instigation of President Palma, the island had reached a state of prosperity never before known in its history, while immigration and capital were setting to its shores in a strong and ever-increasing tide. By 1905 the sugar crop had reached 1,200,000 tons, the largest proportions ever known, valued in its raw state at about $75,000,000; while the production of tobaco had reached a value of $26,758,000—more than double that of the record year 1893.

It is doubtful if anywhere else in the world there is an equal extent of territory with equally great and varied resources. About the same size as John Bull's tight little island, somewhat smaller than the State of Pennsylvania, and with only a small proportion of land under cultivation, Cuba has within this limited area a natural monopoly of the best tobacco in the world; the greatest sugar supply, produced from not more than 400,000 acres of land; coffee of the highest grade; an infinite variety of fruits and vegetables, unexcelled pasture lands, an abundant supply of valuable timbers, and a wealth of mineral resources.

There is scarcely an enterprise or industry in Cuba today in which American capital is not heavily interested, if not in actual control. In fact, many of the enterprises in which foreign capital has the largest share are controlled in New York. In many of these Canadians are interested heavily, and herein England sees a line of cleavage which may widen to a gulf between her and her once important possession in North America.

In the three great agricultural industries of Cuba, sugar, tobacco, and cattle lands and cattle, there are said to be nearly or quite $100,000,000 of American capital invested. A single tobacco estate in the famous Vuelto Abajo district of Pinar del Rio embraces 225,000 acres under the control of Americans, and in the eastern end of the island the Chaparra Sugar Company, another American corporation, controls a sugar estate of almost equal extent. The thirty American sugar plantations in the island are capable of producing one-third of the total output of the republic. There are also hundreds of Americans who have gone into Cuba as fruit and cocoanut farmers. Nothing like a satisfactory estimate of the value of these small holdings can be obtained, but they are believed to very nearly or quite equal in the aggregate the larger individual investments in the railroad, tobacco and sugar corporations.

American capital controls absolutely the electric traction of the island, the telephone and telegraph service, practically all of the railroads in the eastern half of Cuba, about half of the tobacco industry, and a quarter of the sugar output, besides having something over $10,000,000 invested in real estate and unimproved lands, with a total holding of over 4,000,000 acres. Twenty-nine American colonies have been established in Cuba since the close of the war. In the extreme western province of Pinar del Rio there are eight of these colonies; in Havana province, one; in Matanzas, two; in Santa Clara, one; in Puerto Principe, five; in Santiago de Cuba, ten; in the Isle of Pines, one.

The most important single enterprise, however, is that of the Cuba Company, a New Jersey corporation, at the head of which is Sir William Van Horne, a native of Illinois, who was knighted by Queen Victoria in recognition of his work in building the Canadian Pacific Railroad. This company alone owns about half a million acres of land, and has invested some $18,000,000 in a trunk line railroad, which, with its various connections, extends from one end of the island to the other. The road affords communication between Havana, the chief northwestern port, and Santiago, the chief southwestern port, thirteen hours instead of the many days formerly required to make the journey half around the island by steamer.

The entire eastern end of Cuba is controlled industrially by Americans, but it is in Havana that the results of American influence are most immediately and conspicuously apparent to the casual tourist, and it was in Havana, naturally, that these influences were first felt. First and most important among them was the reform in the financial and currency systems of the country, which made it possible for foreign capital to find a safe and profitable investment there. When the American occupation began, the currency of the island, in addition to some $20,000,000 in Spanish paper, only very inadequately secured by deposits of silver, consisted of Spanish, American and Mexican coins, which circulated with equal freedom and to the great confusion of strangers.

American and British gold and paper were at a premium above Spanish gold, and at a still greater premium above the silver, while paper money had a different and still lower value. There were only two chartered banking institutions in the island, one of them, the Spanish Bank of Cuba, an agency of the Bank of Spain in Madrid, which had headquarters in Havana and branches in all the larger cities, had also the exclusive right to issue public notes, and was collecting agent for the Spanish government for all internal revenue, for which service it received a commission of 5 per cent. on all bills presented, whether collection was accomplished or not. Spanish gold was the basis of all transactions except in retail business and the payment of wages, in which Spanish silver was used. The familiar use of checks and pass books was unknown, and checks for amounts of less than $50 could not be drawn.

The Trust Company of America, a New York banking institution, was appointed fiscal agent of the United States government, and immediately set about a reform. Gold was made the standard of value, and several millions in Spanish coin were sent to the United States for recoinage or to be exchanged for American money. The banking system was so thoroughly and successfully revised and brought up to date that nearly $5,000,000 of American capital has since found investment in the island in banking enterprises, and the amount is steadily increasing. Within the past few months, New York interests have organized the Banco de la Havana, with a capitalization of $5,000,000. One-fourth of the amount has already been paid in by American investors, and the remaining three-fourths are Cuban, French and English, but the control is entirely from New York.

The next most important of the primary causes of Cuba's prosperity were the work of repaving Havana's streets, the work of sanitation to which Col. George E. Waring sacrificed his life, and the eradication of yellow fever from the city of Havana, where, for a century and a half, by actual record, the disease had never failed to appear annually. When that was accomplished, Havana, already the Paris of America, the gayest and most quaintly beautiful of Spanish-American cities, took on a fresh dash of color. It is said that not fewer than 25,000 Americans registered in Havana last winter, besides thousands of foreigners from other parts of the world, who find in the sunny climate and equable temperature of the island no mean rivals to the blue Italian skies. It seems likely that the season of 1906-7, with its dash of military splendor and excitement, due to the presence of American troops and ships-of-war, will be an especially brilliant one.

THE SOCIABLE SIWASHES.

Once a mightier village, the population of Fort Rupert at present consists of some twenty or more families of the tribe of Indians known as the Fort Ruperts. They are a short, squat, stockily built people, of an olive color and features indicating their supposed Mongolian origin. Dressed in Japanese clothing the disguise would be complete. As it is, they mostly affect the white man's clothes, though in many cases in an abbreviated form; for instance, a gaudy pair of drawers quite often suffices a man for the trousers which seem so essential to us, while some of the older people still cling to the blanket as their sole apparel.

A diet consisting mainly of fish is varied by venison in the families of the more energetic, who care to hunt for the countless deer that abound in the wilderness of woods on all hands. And yet more fortunate is the occasional family which possesses a hunter of sufficient prowess to fetch home a fat wapiti (elk) from the mountain fastnesses of the interior.

The family home is an unique affair of roughly split slabs and slats, spread over a massive framework of huge fir trees, felled nearby, and as a rule strangely carved and wrought after the fashion of the family totem-pole, which guards the only opening in the house, a small, rude doorway, always facing the beach. The structure thus formed is an oblong building of proportions suggesting a meeting-house rather than the shelter of a single family. Mother Earth furnishes the mosaic for the floor, in the center of which the fire, which serves at once for cooking and heating, is kindled. A hole in the roof relieves in a measure the atmosphere of smoke, and lets in the only daylight they enjoy indoors. Suspended from the huge rafters overhead hang hundreds of fish, sun-cured in part, receiving their final curing in the dense smoke near the roof. They are hospitable people, these Siwashes, and benches for the seating of the guests at their potlatches, or feasts, run round the four walls of every home; in fact, the houses are built rather for feast purposes than to meet the mere requirements of a dwelling. At these potlatches there often gather within a single house the entire population of several villages, so the buildings must needs be large.—[D. W. and A. S. Iddings, in October Recreation.

TUNES ON WHIPS.

"The French," said the sailor, "have whip crackers' competitions. A French cabby or trucker is as proud of his whip crackin' ability as a young man is of his drinkin' powers.

"There ain't no driver livin' what can crack a whip like a Frenchman. Walkin' along the streets of Paris is like walkin' through a battle—on every side, bang, crack, biff! go the whips. The thing makes you mad. It scares you. It's as if a gun was continually bein' shot off alongside of your ear.

"But at the competitions it ain't only the loud cracks that count. They have artists there, men what can play a toon on a whip. Yes, sir, a toon. I've heerd 'em.

"I've heerd the 'Mar-slays' and 'Hiawatha' and 'Foller On' played with whip cracks, and played as delicate and sweet and lovely as the ear could wish to hear."

In the Cagayan Valley.

A LAND WHERE WOMEN AND CHILDREN SMOKE HUGE CIGARS.

By a Special Contributor.

IF, IN the great Cagayan Valley of Northern Luzon, you want a native farmer to do some work for you, you call upon his wife. She is the master of the household. She keeps all the money in a secret bamboo pole; she pays all the household expenses and doles out every cent that the "old man" gets. In other words, like many better educated daughters of Eve, she keeps his nose on the grindstone. Sometimes, by the way, heirs dig around a deceased man's home, hunting for hidden treasure. Near Tuguegarao they found 20,000 pesos ($10,000) that a native had hidden, amassed from a "lucky strike," in one of these bamboo tubes. Often in building their homes some secret bamboo joist or beam is made a depository for money. Houses have been torn apart to disclose concealed treasure.

Almost everybody smokes in the Cagayan Valley—men, women and children, from two and a half years old up to the grave. The women alone, however, smoke these huge cigars, from thirty inches to three feet in length and big around as a man's wrist. A cigar of this size is called a "Tabaco Grande." Sometimes even larger cigars are smoked. These latter are so huge that they cannot be conveniently handled, and so they are suspended by a string in their middle from the dwelling-room ceiling. They are called "Tabacos de Familias," or family cigars, and are puffed by members of the family, mostly the women and children, at intervals for a couple of days until they are all smoked up. A Tabaco Grande, though, lasts a matron of the Cagayan Valley for about a day and a half to two days. I never saw a man smoking these great cigars. The reason is, probably, that the men are more particular about what they smoke, and these Grandes are but carelessly rolled up by the women themselves, who doubtless find it a saving of time to have a smoke that will last for so much longer than the puerile cigar of their men folks. Your good matron puffs her huge cigar most of the time when she is unoccupied, sticking it around in odd places when her work prevents, as one does a "cud" of tutti-frutti gum.

Back of all this smoking of big cigars by the women, and the puffing of some kind of toacco by everybody, lies the story of the first government industrial monopoly, which indeed was a gigantic affair at the time. For a period of 101 years, from 1781 until 1882, the production of tobacco in the Cagayan was a monopoly of the Spanish government. It was then that the natives learned to smoke from the agents of the government. These local officials were a bad lot, it seems. They oppressed the people terribly. Often they only paid the natives 20 per cent. of the value of their crop, and then it was in a depreciated scrip. The natives furnished their own carabao or work oxen, and owned their own lands. But the unscrupulous agents and padres were fattening on them. Finally, the abuses on the natives became so great that the Spanish government gave ear to their complaints, and the monopoly was abolished.

But for the student of economics there is one fact of tremendous interest. It is this: that under this great paternal government these Malay people produced a better grade of tobacco than they since have. Under the direction of the monopoly officials, their tobacco sold in Europe for 75 cents a pound. They raised often 3000 pounds to the acre. Now their tobacco only brings 15 cents a pound, and they produce only from 1000 to 1300 pounds to the acre. Under the intelligent direction of white men, these Cagayanes did well. To produce good results they needed somebody to direct them. But the government monopoly overreached its mark because it strained the tobacco industry to the breaking point. Speculators of the lowest type used to scour the Cagayan Valley to buy up at enormous discount the treasury scrip issued to the natives for their tobacco. "The misery of the natives was so distressing, the distrust of the Spanish government so radicate, and the want of means of existence so urgent, that they were wont to yield their claims for an insignificant specie value," says an old Spanish writer. "The speculators held the bonds for realization some day. Consequences were appalling. Once the treasury was so hard pressed that tobacco ready in Manila for shipment to Spain had to be sold on the spot. It was eagerly bought up by representatives of London firms and caused a tremendous shortage in the factories in Spain."

Though the Spanish had taught the Cagayans how to smoke, yet it cost a native a big fine sometimes to do it. A Spanish historian, says a letter to El Liberal, Madrid, in 1880 thus described the situation: "The planter was only allowed to smoke tobacco of his own crops inside the aërating sheds which were usually erected on the fields under tithes. If he happened to be caught by a carbineer only a few steps outside the shed with a cigar in his mouth, he was fined $2—if a cigarette, 50 cents—and adding to these sums the cost of the conviction, a cigar of his own crop came to cost him $7.33½ and a cigarette $1.87½." "From sunrise to sunset the native grower was subject to search for concealed tobacco, his trunks, furniture and every [illegible] and corner of his dwelling was ransacked for the precious pelf. He and all his family, wife and daughters, were personally examined; and often an irate husband, father or brother goaded to indignation by the [illegible] humiliation of his kinswoman, would lay hands on his bolo knife and bring matters to a bloody crisis with his wanton persecutors."

The monopoly grew to be a vast affair. It wallowed in its own fat. At its abolition, it was paying half of the enormous expenses of the insular government besides contributing large tithes to the church. Since the abolition of the monopoly, the tobacco industry as a whole has gradually declined. A number of large companies were, however, inaugurated, possessing to a limited degree modern methods, and their tobacco is better than that raised by the poor natives who cannot afford agricultural implements the way we are taxing them.

The first company to be organized was the General Tobacco Company of Madrid, which though possessing little actual capital, grew with such enormous [illegible] that today it is the largest corporation doing business in the Philippines whose revenues have been derived in the islands. The General Tobacco Company now has an agency in almost every town of importance in the Philippines. It owns nine or ten modern coastwise [illegible] and has a controlling interest in a line running between the Philippnes and Spain. It is capitalized at [illegible] pounds sterling, and has a large gold reserve [illegible] said to be untouched. Its huge warehouses in the Cagayan store hundreds of thousands of piculs of [illegible]. Besides the General Tobacco Company there are [illegible] six other companies operating in the Cagayan [illegible]. Of course, almost the largest portion of the [illegible] done by the natives.

There is only one American company in the Cagayan Valley, but this company is composed of hustling, [illegible] awake Americans, who quietly secured an immense estate of 44,000 acres at Calabacao during the close of the insurrection, when everybody was sleeping, and property could be picked up at a reasonable figure. Now they are going ahead with all sorts of modern machinery and modern curing-houses, something never known before in the Cagayan Valley, and the natives are beginning to open their eyes, and learn and imitate, for they see "how the Americano does things," and, of course, it is infinitely better than their slipshod way of doing.

Not many people know about the huge Cagayan Valley of Luzon, where centers the tobacco industry of the Philippines. Even in Manila, the majority of men [illegible] it is way up in the north, but outside of the tobacco buyers and commercial men, few of them have [illegible] there. Its people were pacificos during the insurrection

Even with fresh trade it would take years before sufficient tobacco of good grade could be raised in the Philippines to permit it to be regarded as even a factor in the United States markets.

As against the 150,000,000 cigars annually manufactured in Manila, 800,000,000 cigars are annually consumed in the United States. We import from foreign Cuba over 17,000 times as much tobacco as we do from the Philippines. HAMILTON WRIGHT.

Out for Ducks.

OPENING OF HUNTING SEASON, DEVOTEES OF THE GAME.

By a Special Contributor.

HUNTING had been in the air for weeks before the opening of the season, on October 15 at the little lakeside city.

The prospective sportsmen had arrived daily in wagons, automobiles and by rail, housing themselves in hotels, cottages, or tents, according as their pocketbooks influenced their inclinations. There they cleaned their guns, trained their dogs, and exchanged endless stories of the prowess of former years.

The day before the opening of the season, the incoming coaches were filled with "yellow-legged" Nimrods, while the baggage cars were made interesting by a struggling, tugging mass of blooded canines, at whom the long-suffering baggage master swore circumspectly. It was not down on the books that he was to have a day off with a gun at his shoulder, and his cup was full.

Even the flat cars of the long accommodation train were piled with the paraphernalia of camping and hunting, and upon each heap sat an excited man, whose hand kept track of his gun, even at the risk of losing the rest of his "stuff," for unpreëmpted guns, at that particular stage of the game, were as scarce as hen's teeth.

These fellows in the faded, greasy overalls, would kill the bulk of the game, while the fellows in the coaches, with all the toggery of the sportsman, with their $200 guns conspicuously swung about them, were liable to slip around in the shadows of some nightfall to buy a string of ducks to "send to the folks."

At 4 o'clock, on that momentous morning, lights were aglint in every direction—hotels, cottages and tents—at the whirr of an unaccustomed alarm clock had sprung into light and life. If there were an able-bodied, footloose, so-called man in the valley who did not shoulder a gun that morning, he lay low, fearing the righteous contempt of his fellows.

With the glint of the lights and the clinking of the shells, the dogs began the tugging at their chains, begging and barking. The oldest canine inhabitant, long since given over to corpulency, the mange, and harboring a $50,000 collection of fleas, crawled from his hole in the haystack, and scratched at the back door, where his master was struggling at his early fire building.

Horses whinnied, surprised at the early feeding, and cows, drowsily chewing their cuds, clambered unwillingly to their feet, marveling at the early milking.

It was a poor day for the local meat man, who might keep his beeves and hams and sausages until the novelty of wild game wore off—which wouldn't be long.

Before sun-up, guns were going off in the foothills, and on the lake shore, with the regularity of well-seasoned corn in the popper over a hot fire—and the season was on.

It was a wonderful morning. At 4 o'clock there was no sign of fog in the valley, not even over the lake, which lay dark and mystic under the shadow of the mountains; at 5 a feathery mist rose over the water, and, gradually lifting, spread over the valleys and foothills and enwrapped the mountains—not the dense, heavy fog of the coast; but the feathery, misty, shifting fog of the interior valleys, the fog that is as the changing of a shifting dream, unreal and wonderful. Now it closes around you, and you are alone in a world of your own; now it shifts, and you are one with your fellows. So thin, so frail, so ethereal a veil was never before, it seems, spread over the face of Nature. The touch of dampness in the air revives every fragrance of the hillsides, and the odor of tarweeds, of sage and of buckwheat come to you with the call of the quail across the slopes.

You find yourself one with those others who attracted and amused you yesterday as they had talked and planned and worked toward this moment.

You are one with the man who has but this one week of all the year, for his own; who steps but from his emancipation to his office prison again; whose ears are filled with the click of a typewriter, whose eye, above the sight of his gun, sees, to his confusion, not only the topknot of the quail, but long arrays of dollars and cents. You are brother with the man of means who hunts at his leisure and pleasure without much ado; with the sport, who shoulders his gun because it is a part of the outfit—if you please—and goes with the becoming hunting coat and cap and the be-leggined legs, and who must needs borrow his neighbor's game bag in the evening that he may be photographed with its contents, so that the picture may be sent to that particular admiring friend. Your heart goes out to the genuine sport, gotten up in any old rig that will stand the brush and tramping, but who is picturesque notwithstanding, and who hunts indefatigably, stalking through the cactus and brush hour after hour, day after day, eager at night for the coming of the morrow. Almost you are one with the market hunter, the jingle of coin in whose pockets does not interfere with the joy in his swift blood. And the small boy who steals away with a crick in his neck because of the continual turn of his head backward toward his lowering roof-tree, makes you yourself a boy again, so that you can't get rid of the feeling that there is to be a time of settlement for you along about nightfall.

You have long outdistanced the consumptive, who drags out a little way, coughing and weak on his legs, compelled to desist before he gets a shot, because of his shortness of breath, wishing to God he had taken these foothill walks the year before, when just then, perhaps, they might have been his physical salvation. You avoid him if you can, for you are a coward, and today of all days he carries in his eyes the knowledge of his ultimate fate. Before the sun is warm on his back he has dragged back to the hotel, and sits hunched in the sun, his head on his hand. He is one of the pictures in the fog, and you put the memory of him from you. Then there is the woman who shares with her husband the joys of the hills, tramping pluckily for a day or two, her enthusiasm gradually dwindling until finally she merely does the exclaiming when he returns with the full bag which some way (but she doesn't acknowledge it) he couldn't seem to be able to get before.

Then there is that other woman who can really fire a gun, and who bags an occasional rabbit, or a quail that will sit still while she hunts out a hairpin to help the extractor. She carries her shells in her shirt-waist front, and loops up her obtrusive and altogether-in-the-way skirt for a game bag, if by any chance she happens to need one; and she hides her eyes in her hands at a wounded thing, cowering in the brush under the nose of a waiting dog. But altogether she had as good a time as her big brother, who has started for the hills at a most uncanny hour, and her cheeks are rosier and her form prettier for the early tramp, and her appetite, so she says, is simply immense. She sees the white flash of a vanishing rabbit tail and stops short with her gun tight under arm to say: "Did you ever!" and "Now just look at that!" She pushes on a bit and waits trustingly for Mollie Cottontail to sit down under a bush and allow her to take a good aim, "a little under the sight and held to the left." It disgusts her terribly —I repeat it on excellent authority—never to see hide nor hair of Mollie again. It adds to her disgust to have her kid brother—along with his old nigger shooter—jeer at her when she descends into the gully to search for Mollie.

"Gee!" says that red-headed, freckled-faced, contemptuous party, "she's lookin' in the gully fer 'im! Didn't father never tell yuh, when yuh was a kid, that a rabbit allus runs up a hill?" And he ups with his old 5-cent nigger shooter and brings down a bird as big as his two thumbs, at twenty yards.

All of these people are before or behind or with you, and with the shifting of the fog they are yours for the moment and gone.

You try to collect your truant thoughts and concentrate on a search for game.

The sun is now up and the fog shimmers with the brilliancy of innumerable diamonds; it lifts from the lake, it enwraps the long hogback, and scurries across the foothills. You tramp miles and miles and miles through the sand and brush, pausing now and then to listen to the elusive voice of the quail, as he calls across the valley to his mate. You bag a few quail. A cottontail crosses your trail, and you drop him; a jackrabbit bounds through the brush—as you view his "remains," you are doubtful about packing him home; but he helps out the looks of your bag. A coyote stretches his gaunt length before you, well out of the reach of your bird shot. You are dead tired, but pluckily decide to go to the lake and try for a duck.

Blinds along the shore loom up with the regularity of haycocks on a grain field in a good year. Man after man glares at you as you tug out your tumbleweeds, make your blind, and cramp down and wait. You wait and wait and wait. Ten thousand ducks brush their wings over the water in a low flight, or quack in contented conversation in great bunches a mile out.

The morning is too quiet for much hunting from the shore. The man with a sneak boat, by the sweat of not only his brow by any means, and at the expense of his back, gets a good bag after miles and miles of sneaking. He starts the ducks to flight and thus gives you and your neighbor a shot or two. Your time of real sport will come with the rising of the wind, at which time the sneak boat hunter is done for the day.

Presently the shore shooting begins; the sun is in your eyes, you are wet and cramped, but this is what you have been seeing in your dreams for the past year, and you stick it out, as does your no less patient neighbor.

You note and surmise about the particular peculiarity of your fellows, which are accentuated by the curious devices they rig up from which to shoot.

Each fellow is for himself, and as the wind increases and the ducks begin to fly, coldness and wetness and cramped legs are forgotten, and it isn't until a half hour after sunset that the last Nimrod has packed up and started for home, his hunting coat bulging or not, according to—let us charitably say—luck.

To unwonted hours the village is astir, for the game is to be cared for; good or bad luck stories are to be exchanged and your women folks are to be talked into a good humor. For, from a pleasurable expectancy in the result of the day's hunt, they grow tired from the long waiting; suppers grow cold and spoil on the stove and it is finally with an extreme listlessness and a high degree of crossness that they hear of the luck of the day.

So it goes for a week, and then the enthusiasm dies out slowly; you tire of quail in a week, of duck a trifle sooner, and grow to brighten when they bring in a cottontail—and, say! you can shoot rabbits all the year 'round!

Legend of Chocorua.

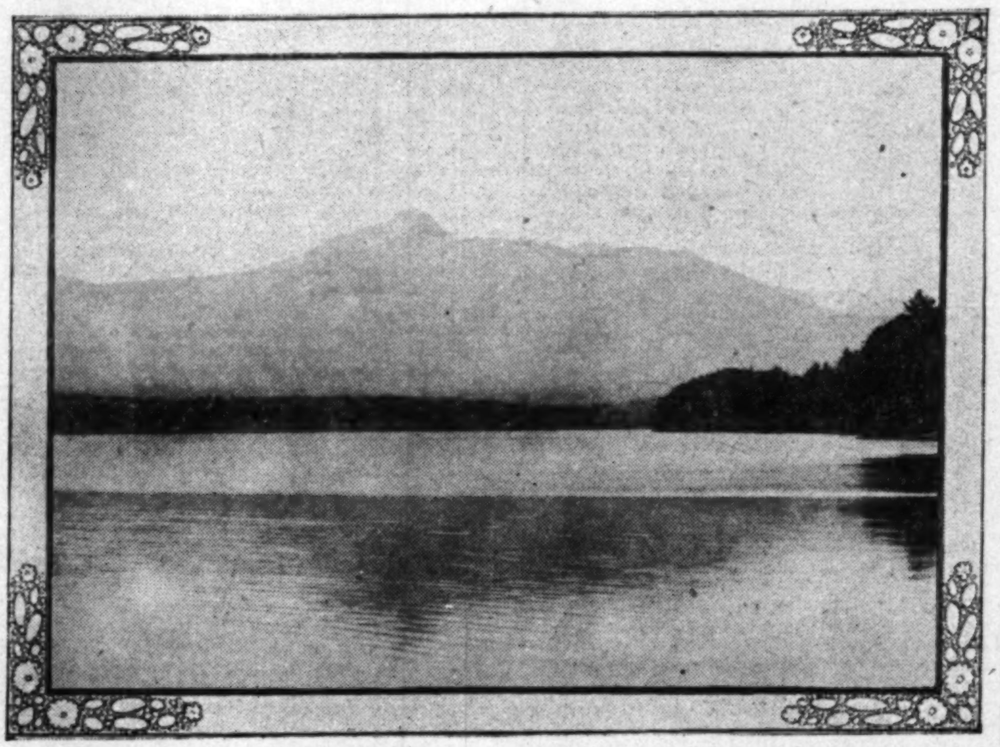
INDIAN TALE OF NEW ENGLAND'S MOST BEAUTIFUL MOUNTAIN.

By a Special Contributor.

SOME distance south from the main group of the White Mountains, in New Hampshire, there rises a peak with a marked individuality, and one which, once seen, will never be forgotten. Ticknor says of it that "it is probably the most picturesque and beautiful of the mountains of New England." While it is not, perhaps, safe to use superlatives in judgments wherein personal tastes figure largely, and some might claim with good reason that other mountains of that section have equal claims to beauty and picturesqueness; few will dispute the assertion that no peak in all the White Mountain region is of more striking appearance than Mt. Chocorua, nor will any who have seen it deny that it has an equally striking beauty that is peculiarly its own.

Chocorua is not impressive because of its height, for its extreme elevation is only about 3600 feet, but those who have seen it lifting its jagged crowning peak up through the forests that clothe its lower slopes, who have seen the marvelous reflection of that peak in the beautiful lake, of the same name, lying at its base, a faultless mirror in the calm of the morning or evening, understand why Starr King wrote concerning it: "No mountain of New Hampshire has interested our best artists more. It is everything a New Hampshire mountain should be." And they understand the perfect realism of Whittier's words when he writes, in his charming poem "Among the Hills," describing the breaking and passing of a storm:

> "And once again Chocorua's horn
> Of shadow pierced the water."



Could the old mountain but speak, it could probably tell us of a time when it raised heavenward a loftier head and a more massive frame than it boasts now, but ages ago it stood in the immediate path of those rivers of ice that swept with well-nigh irresistible force over the American continent, and that fierce conflict robbed it of its more magnificent proportions, so that we now see what is probably "but the dwarfed remnant of the colossal spire which stood here before the glacial currents swept and ground it away."

And while its scarred sides give mute testimony concerning this elemental strife waged ere man had begun to write history, legend and story have invested this mountain with a peculiar interest to those whose tastes lead them to the study of the early history of the White Mountain region.

The name by which we know this mountain was borne by an Indian chief who was killed on or near its summit by white men. The story of his death and the events leading up to it are told in somewhat varying forms, but all have the same issue, the violent death of the old chief at the hands of the whites. Here are the two principal versions:

Chocorua was of the Pequawkets. Under the stress of continued conflicts with the white men, suffering severe losses from these battles, the survivors of the tribe took their way to Canada. But with old Chocorua the ties of the land were stronger than the tribal bonds, and he refused to separate himself from the ancestral seats and the ashes of his fathers. The race hostility that had obtained so generally between the men of his blood and those who were slowly but so surely dispossessing them of their former domain, seems to have been forgotten, and he was reckoned a friend to the white man.

There was one settler in particular with whom he was on friendly, and possibly intimate, terms, Campbell by name, and Chocorua and his son frequently found themselves within the walls of the former's home. This son was Chocorua's one child, and the stoical Indian nature exhausted itself in love for this one branch of the parent stock.

Separated though the old chief was from the remainder of the tribe, relations between them were not altogether severed, and it became necessary for him to go to Canada to meet with them. The journey was certain to be an arduous one, and whether because the boy was really too young to undertake it or because paternal love was too strong for the Indian habit of mind, Chocorua did not want to expose him to the certain hardships of the trip, and he left him behind in the care of Campbell.

"White man and brother," he said, "my lands are gone, my people are departed; my son is my all; keep him as one of your own till I make the long journey, sit once more in council with the Pequawkets, and return;" and the boy was accordingly received into the home of Campbell as one of the family until his father's return.

One day, however, long before the chief's extended journey had been completed, the boy, with the insatiable curiosity characteristic of his age, had been rummaging about the Campbell home and found a bottle of poison that had been prepared for a marauding fox. Ignorant of the nature of the contents, he drank a portion, and in a short time was dead. With real grief Campbell buried the body and sadly awaited Chocorua's return.

To the old chief, stricken and dazed by this sudden and unexpected bereavement, the story of the manner of his son's death seemed at once improbable and untrue. Through the long reaches of his forest journey his heart had been cheered by the thought of meeting his boy once more, and the disappointment of this anticipation rendered his grief doubly bitter. All the native Indian ferocity seemed to leap forth at once, and the notable friendship he had hitherto borne to his white neighbors was instantly changed to bitter hatred. Angrily reproaching Campbell with responsibility for the death of his son, he left the presence of the former vowing a dire vengeance for his loss.

Campbell regarded the threat only as the outburst of a heart overwhelmed with grief, and would not believe that his friend, even though that friend was an Indian, would become his enemy because of this accident, grievous though it was in its results. But that the threat was not a vain one he soon learned to his sorrow, when, upon returning to his home one day, he found the dead and mutilated bodies of his wife and children, victims of the rage and vengeance of Chocorua.

Campbell, in his turn, became an avenger of personal wrongs, and struck out in immediate pursuit of the murderer of his family. He struck Chocorua's trail and found it leading to and up the mountain that now bears the name of the chief. Enraged beyond measure at the unjust reprisal of the Indian, he pursued him hotly to the very crest of the mountain, and shot him there.

The second account of the manner of the Indian's death makes it a mere incident in the war of extermination so long and bitterly waged between the settlers and the Indians. During one of the campaigns that were carried on almost periodically between the settlers and the red men, the province of Massachusetts, which included considerably more territory than the present State of that name embraces, offered quite a large reward, some say as much as 100 pounds sterling, for every Indian scalp brought to Boston. This bounty was sufficiently large to cause the friendly attitude of Chocorua to be overlooked by those who entered into the campaign, if, indeed, it was was known to them, and he was pursued up the mountain to his death.

But whatever the difference between the accounts of the circumstances leading up to his death, they agree in the incident that gave rise to the legend of "Chocorua's Curse." While we have spoken of his hands of the white men, he really took his Driven to the summit of the mountain that his name, and grievously wounded, or death at the hands of his pursuers awaited chief proudly chose self-destruction rather the revenge or cupidity of his assailants.

Driven to bay, he looked over the which he had viewed many times before, was now looking upon for the last time. scene was only those who have looked ize. Mountain and lake, valley and stream, broken forest and beautiful intervales of glints of silver in stretches of emerald affords no finer picture than that which He remembered the time when he and his been undisputed masters of it all. It had to hunt undisturbed in the forests, to skim unmolested. Little by little they had been their hereditary rights, and now he, the last tive of his people in the home land, was the relentless hate or greed.

But a clear title to this fair domain he give, and even in the throes of death he and cursed his pursuers. "A curse upon ye, May the Great Spirit curse ye when He clouds, and His words are fire! Chocorua and ye killed him while the sky looked bright ning blast your crops! Winds and fire dwellings! The Evil Spirit breathe death cattle! Your graves lie in the warpath of the Panthers howl and wolves fatten over Chocorua goes to the Great Spirit—his curse the white men!"

Even as he spoke the last words of his acy of misfortune, the old chief summoned his ing strength and sprang over the precipice, edge of which he had stayed his flight for and sheer down for hundreds of feet he fell, of his own life in its last moments.

Strangely enough, this curse of the dying to be possessed of a kind of power, for years the cattle in the immediate vicinity with a strange disease, that the superstitious to ascribe to the curse—which had crystallized local tradition. Creature after creature died without apparent cause. "It is Chocorua's they whispered awefully, in a time when were hospitable to such ideas, and questioned dered how that spell might be dissolved.

little tale recalls another. In the death scene "Camille," Marguerite, her eyes already glazing, ex "I see a face!" referring to Armand's. Sara wretched house that night (her only thin one of trip), and so, gazing seemingly into the unknown, marvelous voice, realistically woeful for the instant, in deep pathos: "I see faces—faces—but not many

And again American courtesy (plus American ignorance of the lady's native tongue!) burst into applause!

Humor Plus Eccentricity.

When last the diva was in London she gave a characteristic example of her love of fun—as well as of her wondrous vitality. It was of a Sunday morning, and she found herself with an hour and more on her hands between trains. She must do something to occupy the time ("of course!") so with Mrs. "Pat" Campbell and a few other friends (gowned in light gray, with a great bunch of carnations, the gift of an admirer at the railway station,) she started off for an impromptu visit to a certain Wardour-street "wiggery." Presided over by a genius, in whose art Sara had such confidence that she never creates a new character without his "hairy" assistance, the shop is the birthplace of all the wonderful wigs the theater-going world knows so well—while it is fit to add that it was the actress herself who laid the corner-stone of the new offices.

Since that day of amateur trowel-and-mortar, the hairdresser's had undergone many changes, and each of these had to be inspected and approved. The diva was as a child with a new toy. Then her eye lit upon some magnificent French cabinets, once the property of the late Duke of Cambridge, and these were pounced upon as an especially happy find. They were full of stage jewels and souvenirs, which Bernhardt promptly proceeded to auction off to a roomful of imaginary bidders. There she frolicked, the greatest tragedienne the present-day world knows, bustling up and down in the grotesque exaggeration of the king's perruquier, evoking roars of laughter at her parody of that gentleman—under his very nose and roof.

SARA BERNHARDT.

If such genius as this be near kin to downright eccentricity, Madam Sara has shown it in other and yet more marked ways. She once slept five nights in a coffin "to acquire temperament." She once ordered $300,000 worth of jewels at a sitting. She has paid $1700 for a single gown. She pins heart-whole faith in the luck brought her by a necklace of gold nuggets, once presented by some California miner admirers, and she has made pets of half the wild animals known to zoölogy.

"In the Greek Manner."

Perhaps the oddest, though, of all the odd things which Bernhardt has projected into the news of the day, happened at the breakfast which Edmond Rostand gave to the friends of "Cyrano" and "L'Aiglon' the day of his admission to the academic circle of the Immortals. Sara, the guest of honor, wore a marvelous gown, which had not only been designed and made for the occasion, but (evidently) was never to be worn again. At the close of the feast, she rose and, in that impressive manner which commands at will, held high a wineglass and said "I drink to the greatest of French dramatists, M'sieur Rostand, and I drink after the Greek manner!" Then she poured the contents of the goblet over head and gown!

For such a woman to become a member of the Society of Men of Letters is almost prosaic. Bernhardt's own "Adrienne Lecouvreur," however, on which she gained admission to that solemn band of litterateurs, is an excellent piece of playwriting. The critics praise it without stint, pointing, the while, to its clever situations and dialogue as full and sufficient excuse for the dramatic work of the author's son Maurice. And when one reads in her preface such statements as the following, one is properly impressed. Is it not an authority which speaks from the chair?

"The dramatic art is essentially feminine. To paint one's face, to hide one's feelings, to try to please, to endeavor to attract attention—these are all the faults for which we blame women, even as we forgive them. In a man such defects become nothing short of odious.'

"The actor is naturally jealous of the actress. The courtesy of the well-educated man vanishes before the footlights. The actor who, in private life, would render any service to a woman in difficulty, will pick a quarrel with her on the stage.

"The crinoline may go upon the stage—let it! Yet no power on earth could induce me to adopt it for regular uses. In the days of my youth, when I still had to bow to a mother's authority, I wore crinoline under protest. And I found it an instrument of such torture that even then I registered a solemn vow never to submit to it again."

From Variety to "Legitimate."

The very controversy over her birthplace may well be held in evidence of Bernhardt's greatness. There is a legend that she first saw the light in a little hamlet on the banks of the Oder, that her parents were Germans, and that her father was a horse dealer. The more accepted story tells of Paris as her native town, of a Havre lawyer as her father, and of a remarkably pretty daughter of Amsterdam as her mother. This "Mere Julie" seems to have been a modiste, with a little shop situated in the Rue de la Michodiere, though when, at 23, she married M. Bernhardt, the young couple set up their housekeeping at No. 5 Rue de l'Ecole de Medicine, where "Rosine" was born sixty-one years ago today. Rosine surely was the girl's christened name, nor is it clear just when the Sara was substituted; perhaps in her earlier years, during one of those frequent visits to the grandfather in Amsterdam, or, perhaps, during the schooldays at the Convent of Grand Champs, near Versailles. Then came the Conservatoire, and then the stage.

The Parisian footlights first displayed her to the theater-going world in the little "Haut Monde," a vaudeville house, where she had a mere song and dance. Think of it! And none to recognize her latent art till along came Col. Horace Rublee, then American Minister at Brussels. It was he who first was impressed by the young woman's subtle grace and that marvelous voice, of which no less an authority than Sada Yacco has written: "It is not to be adequately described, in its really miraculous intonations and infinite flexibility." Rublee set Bernhardt's case before the American Minister to France, and through his influence obtained that audience with the Directory of the Comedie Francais which brought a trial in the role of "Phedre"—and after that one "try," Sara's path to her present glory was all flowery.

"Wizout M'sieur le Colonel," she said not so long ago, when telling of those earlier days, "vaire little goot would my art do. He find me in ze song and dance, an' he say: 'Saira, you are one daisy.' Ozzer men see me again, an' zey nevaire see me to be one daisy. M'sieur le Colonel, he vaire well know."

From the Comedie to the Odeon, back to the Comedie and then to the Theater de la Porte St. Martin, filled the years before foreign conquest began. England, Americt, Italy, Russia, Germany and where not, followed, to be in their turn succeeded by the managing of the Renaissance, and at last by the establishment of the Theatre Sarah Bernhardt, where the actress now rules in her own land, so to speak.

Behind the Scenes.

Speaking "professionally," her life is the simplest. Her dressing-room is no palatial affair; no draperies, no rugs or baubles, simply the room usually given to any "leading lady," whether large or small. Frosted glass is her one and only request, and, naturally, she always gets it.

But in going to and from her "calls" the diva is a very queen. She is then always attended by solicitous maids, as well as one male escort to see her to the flies, where she is met by some friend, from whose arm she makes her entrance. The part over, she comes off with eyes flashing, a hand held out to the waiting hand of that same friend, and a relieved "Ah!"

Yet this is not her ideal. That looks toward Belle Isle, her country home by the sea. "I long to run barefoot over those dear rocks," she writes, "to watch the dashing spray and cry aloud with only the gulls to answer. I long for the wild freedom of that lonely out-of-doors, to dress as do the fishwives of the shore, to be far, far from the world of streets and lights and noises. I long to gather my grandchildren about me, and, like Niobe, to shed my tears for those that are not."

Perpetual Youth.

This may be the basis for the persistent rumor that Bernhardt contemplates retirement. It is sure that for some time past the actress has been condemning, in private conversation, the folly of the player who clings to the stage with quivering and enfeebled hands, and cannot see that a new generation of playgoers demand something more than a great name, won chiefly while they were still in their cradles. It is a continually haunting fear with Mme. Bernhardt lest she might one day hear herself spoken of as "a woman who used to be a really great actress."

On the other hand, it comes upon the very best authority that she has advised Madam Patti never to retire while she can sing at all, in very spite of any such thing as mere age, adding, "Providing I am able to act, I mean to retire not a moment before I am 70."

It is a safe guess that the actress will never look that age, even when she has reached and passed it. Not since the day of Madame Recamier has a woman in the public eye so marvelously maintained her youthful look. The lady herself declares the only secret about it lies in the frequent use of sour milk as an article of diet, with work and massage added. Which sounds very simple, indeed—and seemingly produces the required results. For Madame Bernhardt is the picture of well-preserved health. She is no longer thin, her hands are full and soft, while her face appears that of a woman of not more than 40 at the most.

THE LUCK THAT CAME TO A SUBSTITUTE AT DINNER.

you are James Rodney!" she exclaimed, turning quickly and looking at him with the clear, direct gaze of her honest eyes. "I have always suspected it, though I never could understand why you didn't use your own name. I have read all of your books."

As soon as she had said it she wished that she could recall the impulsive words. Her eyes drooped, and therefore she did not see the gleam that came into his.

"It was a fancy of mine," he said quietly. "James was my father's name, you know. But what made you think it was I?"

She became flippant. "Oh, I suppose I recognized some of your ideas. One does, you know, with the most casual acquaintances."

"And we were not casual acquaintances," he said.

It was at this moment that her attention was claimed by her neighbor on the other side, and it was not until the fish was served that they spoke again.

"And now, tell me about yourself," said he. "Are you still living at Highgate, in the old house?"

"Still at Highgate, but not in the old house. It is Edward's now. My father and mother died twelve years ago, and Edward and his family came there to live."

"And so you have never married. I supposed, of course, that you had."

She laughed as though at an excellent joke. "No, I left that for Grace and Edward to do. I spend my winters with Grace. She married a Londoner, Robert Leigh. He is the brother of our host."

He glanced up and down the long table.

"No, she isn't here tonight," she added.

She did not say that she was grateful for her sister's absence. She could not have carried off the situation with so high a hand if any one had been present who knew the history of these two whom a device of destiny had brought together once more. When they last met they were lovers. A letter, written by her in one mood and read by him in another, had worked the mischief. He was at a distance and was too proud to go to her, and she could not go to him. Mistaken pride and false delicacy on both sides, but, alas! the way of the world.

"You have changed very little," he said presently.

She laughed again. "Your memory is poor. My hair was not always of this silvery hue, I assure you."

"Your hair is different, but I like it. It seems to suit your face." He watched to see if the rich color would rise in her cheeks as it did in the old days. "You haven't changed in the least," he added.

"Nor you," she retorted. "These candles are merciful to our crow's feet, but I can see that you haven't grown old. You have been happy, successful, satisfied!"

She paused, but he said nothing. "I heard that you had married," she continued. "Tell me about Mrs. Rodney. Where is she tonight?"

"There is no Mrs. Rodney."

She grew grave at once. "Oh, I am sorry! I—I had not heard of her death. You see, I have known so little about you."

"And that little is not the truth. There has never been a Mrs. Rodney. I have not married."

She wondered afterward what her face had shown. She glanced up suddenly and saw that Mrs. Leigh was watching her. It gave her courage to be flippant again.

"Is it possible! Dame Gossip carries strange tales. Not that she has told me much about you, for, as I said, I have lost sight of you completely; but I did hear that you were married, and even the name of the lady."

"Who was it?" he asked curiously.

"It was Miss Alice Farwell."

"My cousin's wife. They have been married a dozen years at least. He is Henry Philip Rodney, you know. People are always confusing us, but I should think you would have known that it wasn't I."

"Not at all. It was a most natural mistake for me to make." She willfully misinterpreted his meaning, which was perfectly clear to her. "I had quite forgotten that your names were so much alike."

She spoke very quietly. She wondered if he guessed that her heart was beating with a violence that frightened her. It seemed as though every one could have heard it had the din of conversation ceased for an instant.

"So we are both as we were fifteen years ago," he observed.

"Exactly! You crumble your bread as wastefully as you did then, and I—oh, I am just as I was, but a little more precise, a little more set in my ways. As one grows in spinsterhood one grows in precision."

"You never were precise, and you are far from it now."

"How uncomplimentary! I consider it a virtue."

They had reached the salad—or, to be more exact, the salad had reached them. She wondered if this dinner would ever come to an end. She longed for, yet dreaded, the final moment. It would be final in every sense of the word. Of course, they would never meet again. They must not—she could not endure it.

She glanced at the man on her other side. He was elderly and aristocratic, and was absorbed in his dinner. He never talked when he could eat, and it was only between the courses that he vouchsafed a word. He had been invited because of his wife, who was as animated as he was dull, and who entertained a great deal herself. Mrs. Leigh was punctilious about paying her social debts. This man was particularly fond of a good salad, and Frances saw that he would be unavailable for some minutes. Philip really ought to speak to his other neighbor. She leaned forward intending to draw her into their conversation, but the girl was talking to some one else.

"You can't do it," said Rodney. "You must talk to me or be silent, and if you are quiet I shall talk to you. You are completely at my mercy. I have something to say, and I am going to say it."

"I am at your mercy," she said; "but I trust to your generosity."

"A weak reed to lean upon. I have been silent for fifteen years. Now I am going to speak."

"Philip, please don't! This is not the place."

"It is the place! Anywhere is the place for speaking in which I happen to find you. Do you think I shall let the chance go? Or that I shall let you go?"

She looked about her desperately. Her elderly neighbor had finished his salad. Next to his food, old furniture was, she knew, his hobby, and she plunged with startling suddenness into the description of an ancient desk which she had discovered that very day in a shop. He was responsive until he found some reason for believing it to be a reproduction, and the "sweet" coming on just then, his interest flagged. Then in her other ear came Rodney's voice, quiet, determined, tender.

"Francie!"

She gave a little gasp; it was his old name for her.

"Francie, you may just as well make up your mind to listen to me. It has got to come sooner or later."

"Later, then! This is not the time. Mrs. Leigh is looking at you. You are too intense for a stranger whom I have met for the first time tonight. Be sensible, Philip! Ah, Miss Merion!"

Again she leaned forward. The girl beyond him was now disengaged. Frances congratulated herself; she had won a small victory.

"Before the coffee comes!" he murmured, and then became perfectly silent.

Miss Merion had already decided that the man from Bradford was either eccentric or stupid, and having important affairs of her own to attend to, she did not long bestow her attention upon him or Miss Fearing.

The dessert had gone, the coffee was coming, and he spoke again.

"Francie, I was a fool! A hot-tempered idiot!"

"Don't call yourself names," she laughed; "it isn't polite. I must put on a vivacious manner, Phil! Really, you will attract attention."

"I have loved you all these fifteen years."

"Very unwisely, then. I am not what I was. Has Time stood still?"

"Alas, no! But may we not hope that we have both developed for the wiser and the better under Time's sight? And may we not try now to atone for the folly and the headstrong temper of youth? We have wasted fifteen good years apart."

"They might not have been a success together."

"Francie! Please, dear, be serious."

"I am very serious—underneath. How does either one of us know what the other may be now? Fifteen years! It has been a century."

"That is precisely what I think myself. Ah, yes, coffee. I remember you always took yours with such an extravagant quantity of sugar."

"You remember that?"

"I remember everything. You always quirked your little finger in that absurd way when you held your cup."

"You ridiculous boy! You don't look forty."

This was irrelevant, but delightful.

The coffee was drunk in a profound silence, and now Mrs. Leigh was rising.

"Francie, is it yes or no?"

"It is—why, Phil, I can't say it here!" C. N. P.

AD WORTH $50,000,000 A WORD.

The old advertising man pointed to an advertisement, yellow with age, that was pasted in his scrapbook:

"Settlers Wanted—To take up land in the region of the Upper Lehigh River, on long credit, at $5 an acre. Pay for same in timber, beechnuts, work, shingles, maple sugar, fish, game, or any other product, natural or cultivated, of the forest or soil."

"That want 'ad,'" said the old man, sighing "appeared in a Philadelphia paper in 1815, and those who answered it found it worth to them $50,000,000 a word. Had my father answered it, as he thought of doing, I might be riding in my own touring car today.

"A certain Henry Drinker, who has a host of descendants in Philadelphia, bought in the early part of the century 25,000 acres of land for $30,000 on the Lehigh. It was forest land, and Drinker to make a fortune out of it. But no settlers came, and Drinker died disappointed.

"His son, a believer in advertising, put in this little ad. It worked. It brought settlers, and the settlers flourished, cutting timber, making maple sugar, fishing and gunning for the market, farming and so on.

"Then, all of a sudden, it was discovered that under those 25,000 acres that had been offered at $5 an acre, payable in beechnuts, valuable mines of coal and iron lay hid. Capital to work the mines poured in. The city of Scranton sprang up in a night. Many a man's $5 acre of land proved worth millions of dollars.

"But for that little want ad of 1815, the Pennsylvania coal fields might be still unknown. That want ad opened up the district. It brought to the earth's surface all that hidden store of coal and iron. It built a city. Therefore to estimate the ad's value at $50,000,000 a word is to be conservative."

A FUNNY FIDDLER.

What a smart little fellow a cricket must be!
For if what they tell us is true,
When he seems to be singing he's fiddling instead,
Which must be much harder to do.

But then if a cricket should happen to feel
Like dancing, how fine it would be!
For with two of his legs he could fiddle the tune
And dance with the others, you see!

Before the Coffee.

THE LUCK THAT CAME TO A SUBSTITUTE AT DINNER.

By a Special Contributor.

MRS. LEIGH was giving one of her dinners. The guests at these functions were always chosen with a care and precision upon which Mrs. Leigh prided herself, and which she, of all others, was fitted to exercise, for no one in London knew as she did the ramifications of family differences and the aristocratic skeletons that lurked in the closets of her friends. In fact, no one could gather so successfully a small party of people who were glad to be together, and who were aware that their ancestors had dined or supped in the same amiable intercourse since the days of Queen [illegible].

But on this occasion Mrs. Leigh—to vary an ancient [illegible]—reckoned without her guest. At 6 o'clock she was summoned to the telephone. At the other end was Mrs. David Logan. Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Leigh had been intimate since their infancy. Her accents were [illegible].

"My dear Harriet, David has come home perfectly [illegible]. He insists that I shall not stay at home with him. I shouldn't think of coming and making an odd woman at your dinner if I didn't happen to be able to bring a substitute for David. Mr. Rodney (Philip Rodney, you know) came over from Bradford today unexpectedly, and is staying with us. He is a great friend of David's. May I bring him?"

Mrs. Leigh expressed her regret, sympathy and acquiescence, and the matter was arranged.

"It is too bad about David," she said to her husband; "he is such a capital diner-out; but no doubt Mr. Rodney of Bradford will do as well. I needn't change [illegible]. I will give him to Frances Fearing, whom David was to have taken in. As neither one of them is a Londoner, they can compare notes about us and have a good time doing it. It will suit admirably."

Snow had been falling all the afternoon, and by 8 o'clock it lay thick upon the ground. The scraping of shovels, the shouts of the men upon the snow plows that passed at intervals over the car tracks, the clang of the motormen's bells, the shutting of carriage doors, as one equipage after another drew up at the Leighs'—all of these sounds fell upon the ear with the resonance peculiar to a snow-laden atmosphere. The house was in Church street, and across the way the trees of Dorchester Square loomed in the storm, the electric lights shining but dimly through the misty glass.

Within the house the scene was in sharp contrast to the whiteness without. There were softly shaded lights, the delicate perfume of flowers, beautiful women in dinner dress, and the murmur of voices and laughter. The room was full when Mrs. Logan and Philip Rodney entered. They were the last of the guests to arrive.

"Let me introduce you to the lady you are to take in," said Mrs. Leigh to Rodney.

They crossed the room to a woman in a white gown who was standing with her back turned partly toward them. She was not young, for her hair was gray, and for this Rodney was grateful. He preferred women of his own age. She was tall, almost as tall as he was, and the poise of her head was especially graceful. It gave him an odd sensation to see it, for it reminded him of—

"Frances," said Mrs. Leigh, "this is Mr. Rodney, of Bradford. He is to take you in. Miss Fearing, Mr. Rodney."

They both bowed. A startled look came into her gray eyes and a wave of color passed over her face and lingered there. It was a face that was still young in spite of her gray hair and her thirty-seven years. Neither one of them spoke, and then he offered her his arm and they walked in to dinner.

She was the first to recover her self-possession.

"I suppose we must say something," she said. "We have not met for fifteen years, and in that time one can forget a difference of opinion. In fact, one can forget anything and everything. Now, it had totally escaped my memory that you lived in Bradford."

"[illegible] when—a—fifteen years ago."

He was peppering his oysters with the deliberation she remembered so well. He had changed very little. There was not a gray hair among the ruddy [illegible] grew so thickly on his head, and it always had a little wave to it. He wore no mustache; he did not [illegible]. There was an added line or two about the mouth, and the perpendicular furrow between the blue eyes had deepened, but it came from study, not from sorrow. Time had sat lightly upon him, she said to herself with a touch of bitterness that was not natural to her. She would ask presently for Mrs. Rodney, for she had heard years ago that he had married. It was very soon after—after he went away. It was strange that she had known nothing of him since. Except for this one important item of news, she had lost sight of him completely in the fifteen years that had elapsed since their engagement was broken by mutual consent." She determined to assume a manner of perfect frankness. She had always found it the best disguise when dealing with the other sex.

"Now, tell me all about yourself," said she blithely. "What have you been doing? And since when have you been living in Bradford?"

"Only for a year. I have been abroad most of the time—a—for the last fifteen years. I have been writing, of course, and have published a lot of stuff. Then about three months ago I was offered a position on the staff of a Bradford paper. In fact, I am editor of the [illegible]."

"Then you are James Rodney!" she exclaimed, turning quickly and looking at him with the clear, direct gaze of her honest eyes. "I have always suspected it, though I never could understand why you didn't use your own name. I have read all of your books."

As soon as she had said it she wished that she could recall the impulsive words. Her eyes drooped, and therefore she did not see the gleam that came into his.

"It was a fancy of mine," he said quietly. "James was my father's name, you know. But what made you think it was I?"

She became flippant. "Oh, I suppose I recognized some of your ideas. One does, you know, with the most casual acquaintances."

"And we were not casual acquaintances," he said.

It was at this moment that her attention was claimed by her neighbor on the other side, and it was not until the fish was served that they spoke again.

"And now, tell me about yourself," said he. "Are you still living at Highgate, in the old house?"

"Still at Highgate, but not in the old house. It is Edward's now. My father and mother died twelve years ago, and Edward and his family came there to live."

"And so you have never married. I supposed, of course, that you had."

She laughed as though at an excellent joke. "No, I left that for Grace and Edward to do. I spend my winters with Grace. She married a Londoner, Robert Leigh. He is the brother of our host."

He glanced up and down the long table.

"No, she isn't here tonight," she added.

She did not say that she was grateful for her sister's absence. She could not have carried off the situation with so high a hand if any one had been present who knew the history of these two whom a device of destiny had brought together once more. When they last met they were lovers. A letter, written by her in one mood and read by him in another, had worked the mischief. He was at a distance and was too proud to go to her, and she could not go to him. Mistaken pride and false delicacy on both sides, but, alas! the way of the world.

"You have changed very little," he said presently.

She laughed again. "Your memory is poor. My hair was not always of this silvery hue, I assure you."

"Your hair is different, but I like it. It seems to suit your face." He watched to see if the rich color would rise in her cheeks as it did in the old days. "You haven't changed in the least," he added.

"Nor you," she retorted. "These candles are merciful to our crow's feet, but I can see that you haven't grown old. You have been happy, successful, satisfied!"

She paused, but he said nothing. "I heard that you had married," she continued. "Tell me about Mrs. Rodney. Where is she tonight?"

"There is no Mrs. Rodney."

She grew grave at once. "Oh, I am sorry! I—I had not heard of her death. You see, I have known so little about you."

"And that little is not the truth. There has never been a Mrs. Rodney. I have not married."

She wondered afterward what her face had shown. She glanced up suddenly and saw that Mrs. Leigh was watching her. It gave her courage to be flippant again.

"Is it possible! Dame Gossip carries strange tales. Not that she has told me much about you, for, as I said, I have lost sight of you completely; but I did hear that you were married, and even the name of the lady."

"Who was it?" he asked curiously.

"It was Miss Alice Farwell."

"My cousin's wife. They have been married a dozen years at least. He is Henry Philip Rodney, you know. People are always confusing us, but I should think you would have known that it wasn't I."

"Not at all. It was a most natural mistake for me to make." She willfully misinterpreted his meaning, which was perfectly clear to her. "I had quite forgotten that your names were so much alike."

She spoke very quietly. She wondered if he guessed that her heart was beating with a violence that frightened her. It seemed as though every one could have heard it had the din of conversation ceased for an instant.

"So we are both as we were fifteen years ago," he observed.

"Exactly! You crumble your bread as wastefully as you did then, and I—oh, I am just as I was, but a little more precise, a little more set in my ways. As one grows in spinsterhood one grows in precision."

"You never were precise, and you are far from it now."

"How uncomplimentary! I consider it a virtue."

They had reached the salad—or, to be more exact, the salad had reached them. She wondered if this dinner would ever come to an end. She longed for, yet dreaded, the final moment. It would be final in every sense of the word. Of course, they would never meet again. They must not—she could not endure it.

She glanced at the man on her other side. He was elderly and aristocratic, and was absorbed in his dinner. He never talked when he could eat, and it was only between the courses that he vouchsafed a word. He had been invited because of his wife, who was as animated as he was dull, and who entertained a great deal herself. Mrs. Leigh was punctilious about paying her social debts. This man was particularly fond of a good salad, and Frances saw that he would be unavailable for some minutes. Philip really ought to speak to his other neighbor. She leaned forward intending to draw her into their conversation, but the girl was talking to some one else.

"You can't do it," said Rodney. "You must talk to me or be silent, and if you are quiet I shall talk to you. You are completely at my mercy. I have something to say, and I am going to say it."

"I am at your mercy," she said; "but I trust to your generosity."

"A weak reed to lean upon. I have been silent for fifteen years. Now I am going to speak."

"Philip, please don't! This is not the place."

"It is the place! Anywhere is the place for speaking in which I happen to find you. Do you think I shall let the chance go? Or that I shall let you go?"

She looked about her desperately. Her elderly neighbor had finished his salad. Next to his food, old furniture was, she knew, his hobby, and she plunged with startling suddenness into the description of an ancient desk which she had discovered that very day in a shop. He was responsive until he found some reason for believing it to be a reproduction, and the "sweet" coming on just then, his interest flagged. Then in her other ear came Rodney's voice, quiet, determined, tender.

"Francie!"

She gave a little gasp; it was his old name for her.

"Francie, you may just as well make up your mind to listen to me. It has got to come sooner or later."

"Later, then! This is not the time. Mrs. Leigh is looking at you. You are too intense for a stranger whom I have met for the first time tonight. Be sensible, Philip! Ah, Miss Merion!"

Again she leaned forward. The girl beyond him was now disengaged. Frances congratulated herself; she had won a small victory.

"Before the coffee comes!" he murmured, and then became perfectly silent.

Miss Merion had already decided that the man from Bradford was either eccentric or stupid, and having important affairs of her own to attend to, she did not long bestow her attention upon him or Miss Fearing.

The dessert had gone, the coffee was coming, and he spoke again.

"Francie, I was a fool! A hot-tempered idiot!"

"Don't call yourself names," she laughed; "it isn't polite. I must put on a vivacious manner, Phil! Really, you will attract attention."

"I have loved you all these fifteen years."

"Very unwisely, then. I am not what I was. Has Time stood still?"

"Alas, no! But may we not hope that we have both developed for the wiser and the better under Time's sight? And may we not try now to atone for the folly and the headstrong temper of youth? We have wasted fifteen good years apart."

"They might not have been a success together."

"Francie! Please, dear, be serious."

"I am very serious—underneath. How does either one of us know what the other may be now? Fifteen years! It has been a century."

"That is precisely what I think myself. Ah, yes, coffee. I remember you always took yours with such an extravagant quantity of sugar."

"You remember that?"

"I remember everything. You always quirked your little finger in that absurd way when you held your cup."

"You ridiculous boy! You don't look forty."

This was irrelevant, but delightful.

The coffee was drunk in a profound silence, and now Mrs. Leigh was rising.

"Francie, is it yes or no?"

"It is—why, Phil, I can't say it here!" C. N. P.

AD WORTH $50,000,000 A WORD.

The old advertising man pointed to an advertisement, yellow with age, that was pasted in his scrapbook:

"Settlers Wanted—To take up land in the region of the Upper Lehigh River, on long credit, at $5 an acre. Pay for same in timber, beechnuts, work, shingles, maple sugar, fish, game, or any other product, natural or cultivated, of the forest or soil."

"That want 'ad,' " said the old man, sighing "appeared in a Philadelphia paper in 1815, and those who answered it found it worth to them $50,000,000 a word. Had my father answered it, as he thought of doing, I might be riding in my own touring car today.

"A certain Henry Drinker, who has a host of descendants in Philadelphia, bought in the early part of the century 25,000 acres of land for $30,000 on the Lehigh. It was forest land, and Drinker to make a fortune out of it. But no settlers came, and Drinker died disappointed.

"His son, a believer in advertising, put in this little ad. It worked. It brought settlers, and the settlers flourished, cutting timber, making maple sugar, fishing and gunning for the market, farming and so on.

"Then, all of a sudden, it was discovered that under those 25,000 acres that had been offered at $5 an acre, payable in beechnuts, valuable mines of coal and iron lay hid. Capital to work the mines poured in. The city of Scranton sprang up in a night. Many a man's $5 acre of land proved worth millions of dollars.

"But for that little want ad of 1815, the Pennsylvania coal fields might be still unknown. That want ad opened up the district. It brought to the earth's surface all that hidden store of coal and iron. It built a city. Therefore to estimate the ad's value at $50,000,000 a word is to be conservative."

A FUNNY FIDDLER.

What a smart little fellow a cricket must be!
For if what they tell us is true,
When he seems to be singing he's fiddling instead,
Which must be much harder to do.

But then if a cricket should happen to feel
Like dancing, how fine it would be!
For with two of his legs he could fiddle the tune
And dance with the others, you see!

The House Beautiful—Its Flower Garden and Grounds.

LOVE OF FLOWERS.

AN INDICATION OF INTELLIGENCE AND REFINEMENT.

By Ernest Braunton.

HENRY WARD BEECHER declared that he always found house plants an infallible test in selecting acquaintances, neatness, cleanliness, and innumerable virtues being the usual accompaniments of a love of flowers. Then, what delightful subjects of gossip they furnish; and how many reputations have been spared when house plants were at hand, and their various merits, their growth, and means of culture to be discussed. How they grow into the affections, too, as we watch their green sheaths pierce the rich brown mould, and leaves and blossoms expanding into loveliness.

It is an unquestionable fact that the cultivation and care of a garden instills love of nature and has an uplifting and ennobling influence on mankind. Go where you will you meet with the best reception in every way at such places, where the greatest love is manifest for the beauties of nature. When the traveler comes upon a home where there is a roomy, well-planned, well-kept garden, he at once feels a desire to know the inmates personally, for he is certain to find there more or less generosity, intelligence and refinement.

Cultivated flowers are evidences of high civilization; they are a sort of floral thermometer, indicating in some degree the intelligence and refinement of the people; and their indications are as significant as are the evidences afforded by architecture, painting, poetry, or any of the sciences. The lessons of these gentle teachers are having an influence on the habits and manners of our people.

There is scarcely a home now but has its flowers. They give a pleasant and cheerful aspect, and attract the grateful admiration of the passer-by. Their almost universal cultivation indicates a refined taste and higher intellectual attainments. Such evidences of improvements are full of promise for the future. The creation of beauty which wealth and taste have produced attracts the attention of those less fortunate and awakes in them the love of the beautiful, and leads them to attempt their reproduction on a cheaper and simpler scale. Let your grounds be simple and restful rather than strain for bold effects, and an air of quietness will pervade the whole, and whether it be a cottage or a mansion, it will be a home in the fullest sense of the word, a fact really noticed by the observant passer-by. A well known public man says: "We instinctively judge a man's personality by the outward aspect of his home."

MAMAN COCHET

ADMIRAL DEWEY.

The Easter Lily.

The amateur has but indifferent success with these pot plants, for each bulb has its own peculiar time for blooming, largely dependent on size and vigor. Lilies in the house must be watched for green fly, and if these appear, the plants must be fumigated with tobacco or dipped (or washed) in tobacco water. Bermuda lilies are also subject to a blight which is usually worse with us than in the East. The best treatment is by the use of Bordeaux mixture, and as in the case with everything, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Spray or wash the foliage before the blight appears; the cost is trifling.

This lily originally came from Japan, and is a variety of a native quite common there. Though a few bulbs had arrived in the United States before that time, it was not until 1882 that a Philadelphia florist by the name of W. K. Harris recognized its commercial value, and it was launched under the trade name of Lilium Harrisii, by which it is known to gardeners and nurserymen in general. Its true, or scientific name is Lilium longiflorum, variety eximium, and for any purpose but forcing is generally considered inferior to the straight longiflorum, a native of China, Japan and Formosa. All these lilies multiply by offsets which are each year produced in considerable numbers.

Top Dressing Soils.

If a palm or other plant like it does not absolutely need repotting, or the operation cannot be attended to for the present, then the plant ought to be top-dressed. Top-dressing simply means to put on the top of the pot some earth well-enriched with some kind of fertilizer such as guano, granulated bone, or some commercial preparation. Well-rotted cow manure can be used pure, but a little soil mixed with it gives it body. It is necessary to be very cautious with guano; a spoonful in a quart of soil would be about enough, and then it is better to apply it on two different days rather than all at once.

Before applying this dressing, it is necessary to make room for it as much as possible by trying to remove the old soil on top of the ball, using a pointed stick to dislodge it, turning the pot on its side. If you have the hose you can turn a stream of water on it also to help the operation. The plant can be taken out of the pot also, and the stream turned on the ball to remove some of the soil. If the plant could be raised a little higher, say half an inch or more, that would give a chance for the dressing soil to get down all around and make a better job still. It is better to put only a part of the dressing on at first, and after some time add a little more.

Water the plant well, so that the soil can be carried down as much as possible. Whenever a plant gets pot-bound, that is, the roots fill the pot all around the ball, it should be top-dressed if it cannot be repotted. Scrape out at least a good inch of the top soil along with the roots, if there are any, then put on the rich dressing, leaving always a half inch of empty space for the water.

Dwarf Ageratums.

Princess Pauline is the aristocratic name of an equally aristocratic little ageratum, so different from the common old blue or white ageratums of the past. The old plants were large-growing and too straggly for small or neat borders, but Pauline belongs to another class. You need no longer confine yourself to the old blue and dirty white, for these neat little plants of today come in almost every shade of color. They are peculiarly adapted to California conditions, for they are very drought-resistant.

Plant Breeding.

There are two classes of plant breeders, both of which are doing good work of more or less value from the scientific and economic viewpoint, in the interest of advanced knowledge and our advancing civilization. The first of these is the breeder who works for the purpose of proving his theories, and who by a limited number of recorded crosses is able to place the simple analysis of his investigation in presentable form for educative purposes. The second, or the breeder for practical results, cannot do this without placing limitations upon his activity, which means his experience and success, as it is only the man who makes crosses who may hope to approach even the border of a field of limitless possibilities in results.

HIPOLITO REVERSIBLE WINDOWS

The Hipolito Window is the MODERN WINDOW, and is as necessary a part of modern building equipment as electric lights.

It's good business to install Hipolito Windows in old buildings—but it's the height of extravagance to put up a new building without this modern convenience.

Buildings equipped with Hipolito Windows rent to far better advantage—because the windows are more convenient, more easily and safely cleaned, save time and expense, give better ventilation and are more healthful than the ordinary windows.

Hipolito Windows are in use today in the best office buildings and residences in Los Angeles.

IMPROVEMENT WORK.

THE NEED OF TRAINED INTELLIGENCE IN OUTDOOR ART.

THE giving of prizes as an incentive to the improvement of home grounds, street planting, school gardens, etc., appears to have become an efficient means and is growing more and more popular among improvement workers and organizations. This is far better than not offering prizes at all, but all who are interested in the advancement of art in outdoor surroundings are watching and hoping for something still better from the men and women who are interesting themselves in improvement work.

It is greatly to be wished that such organization shall become the leaven from which a clearer understanding of outdoor art, as exemplified by the work of landscape gardeners of the highest grade, shall be diffused. The standard of the leading landscape gardeners should be their standard. It is by a study of the best paintings, scenery and buildings, that education in such things is brought about, and this rule is quite applicable to the art that has to do with fitting every piece of ground for the purpose for which it was intended. No one could be expected to know good art in the treatment of ground without training for it any more than the best paintings could be appreciated by the untrained mind and eye.

The leading improvement organizations of this country came into existence for the direct purpose of giving such training through their annual meetings, and through the preparation and distribution of literature containing suggestions, helpful hints and definite directions for the assistance of smaller societies and of individuals. The best way to secure all of this in producing something really worth while in outdoor adornment is to join one of the national organizations of this class. Leading artists of more than national reputation are the leading minds in these organizations, and they are consulted in the interest of all who wich to learn. Where so much thought, time, energy and money are to be expended, it is certainly unfortunate that anything but the best standards should be the goal aimed for. Especially when it costs so little to learn what is worth striving to attain, and membership insures enough printed matter to set every improvement worker in the United States on the right track.

Embellishing School Grounds.

A correspondent notes the fact that little or no attention has been given to school grounds in many communities, and wonders whether we are to continue laying out beautiful private home grounds, public parks and gardens, and neglecting the grounds of our schools. "Are not our schools," he asks, "provided for educating and cultivating the minds of children? and should they not be given lessons in the pure, elevating art of plant culture, which may contribute so greatly to human happiness?" With our correspondent's suggestion we are in hearty sympathy and gladly give space to his pertinent inquiry. We shall be glad to have assistance from friends of our schools everywhere in presenting this subject from many standpoints, especially where good results have been obtained. That there is wide room for improvement here no one can deny, who has had his eyes to the common neglect of the school yards of California. The best way of instituting a movement toward reform in this direction is difficult to determine. It may be well for those interested in such a movement to compare notes. Here and there, throughout the country there must be many instances of school ground culture, which, if brought to light, would benefit the school yards of the whole country. Reports on such work will be gladly received and given to the public.

Appointments.

Civil service for park commissioners; rigid examination of applicants for office or employment under them; appointments on the ground of character and fitness; civil service rules to govern promotions and retention in service; strict accountability and rigid discipline throughout the department will result in well-managed parks.

Park Building.

The rapidly-growing sentiment of creating parks for the congested population of this country needs support, and it may be truly said that its greatest achievements are still to come, and therefore belong to the future. The era of park making appears upon the historical page of a city when culture and refinement have penetrated the narrow spheres of commercialism, when the make-up of a city has been mastered and accumulated wealth demands pleasure and comfort. Therefore we find that the introduction of parks occurs at an epoch most injurious to the artistic layout of a great city and which has to be overcome at an immense cost. It is perhaps not always true that the motives creating public pleasure grounds are of that true and benevolent character uppermost in the hearts of those desirous for the welfare of their less fortunate fellow-men, but on the contrary come from a selfish desire to build parks and parkways as an incentive increasing the value of their own land holdings. Whatever may be the original motive, however, the creation of parks by any city must be commended as the first step of municipal art out of chaos and a prime necessity for improving the health and morality of those that have to pass their lives in the congested spots.

Tree Planting in New York.

The Board of Park Commissioners of Manhattan have adopted the following code of ordinances relating to the planting and preservation of trees in New York City, rules which many municipalities in Southern California could with profit adopt and enforce:

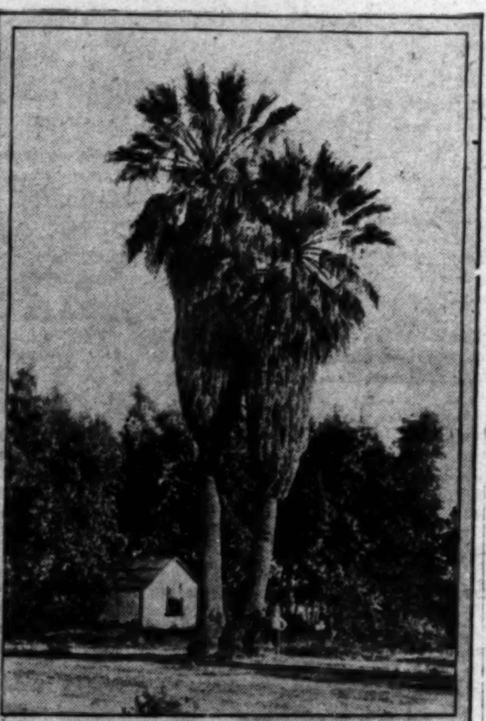
1. No shade or ornamental tree or shrub shall be planted in any of the streets, avenues, or public thoroughfares of the city of New York, until such tree or shrub shall have been first inspected and approved by a duly appointed employé or expert of the department and a permit granted therefor.

2. No hole or excavation shall be prepared for planting any tree or shrub unless sufficient mold of satisfactory quality shall be used, and a duly-appointed employé or expert of the department shall report that the conditions such as the absence of poisonous gas and deleterious substances have been made satisfactory and a permit granted therefor.

3. No stem, branch, or leaf of any such tree or shrub shall be cut, broken, or otherwise disturbed without having been first examined by a duly-appointed expert or employé of the department, and a permit granted therefor.

4. No root of any such tree or shrub shall be disturbed or interfered with in any way by any individual or any officer or employé of a public or private corporation until the same shall have been examined and a permit issued therefor.

5. The surface of the ground within three feet of any tree or shrub growing on any street, avenue, or other public thoroughfare shall not be cultivated, fertilized, paved, or given any treatment whatever, except under permit granted after an inspection by a duly-appointed employé or expert of the department.



THE OLDEST STREET TREES IN LOS ANGELES.

6. It shall not be lawful to attach any guy rope, cable or other contrivance to any tree or shrub or to use the same in connection with any banner, transparency, or any business purpose whatever, except under a permit from this department.

7. It shall not be lawful to cut, deface, mutilate, or in any way misuse any tree or shrub, nor shall any horse or other animal be permitted to stand in a manner or position where it may or shall cut, deface, or mutilate any tree or shrub.

8. The foregoing rules and regulations are also adopted and declared as ordinances. Any person violating the same shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction thereof before a city magistrate be punished by a fine not exceeding $50 or in default of payment of such fine by imprisonment not exceeding thirty days.

Useful Parks.

We have for so long considered a park as being a sort of a living picture and artistic production that we strive to make it such, and we do right in so striving, yet, first of all, even before the art, a park is made for use, and should be made usable, and to fit the needs of the community so they will use it. In this respect it is like the home. The first function of a home is to be usable, inhabitable, homelike, comfortable; we all know what we want our home to be, and high art is not the first thing we provide for it. Art is the crown of our home, and it should crown our parks, but art rests on the useful, and so in our parks there are lots of things that come before what is commonly known as artistic, the most common things may be the most beautiful, and the best art is in the simple effect, and that much that passes for art is not art at all, but superficial embellishment. True art in the home or park may be anything but costly.

A Valuable Shrub For California.

Too few plants of Plumbago are used, both in its blue and its white variety. It can be used as a shrub or trained over fences and buildings as a half-climber. After getting firmly established no water should be given it, for the less it is watered the more it will bloom. Many people make the mistake of watering it too much; it then runs to rank vegetative growth. If allowed to care for itself, it is a perfect shower of bloom.

After Seven Years.

THE REHABILITATION OF CAPTAIN RICHARD CAIRNS.

From London Sunday Chronicle.

"IS that Acton?" roared Holt from his room, as I entered the outer office of "Ferris Holt & Co., Private Inquiry Agents."

"Yes, sir," I answered.

"Here. Shut the door. Why are you half an hour late?"

Holt was a little man with red-rimmed eyes and an undershot chin. His nickname among his employés was "ferret," a pun on his Christian name and very apt, for he had a peculiar way of thrusting his head forward and wagging it when excited.

"Overslept myself, sir. I'd been up the two previous nights watching Carshalton Mansions, and at work all day as well."

"Don't let it occur again. It's thanks to me you've a bed to sleep in. I picked you out of the gutter, didn't I?"

"And I've served you faithfully and to the best of my ability these last six months. Not all those you employ can say that truthfully."

Holt snapped his eyelids viciously. Two of his most trusted subordinates had been discovered taking bribes from the people they were watching; the fact had just come out in a police court and done the firm no good. The Ferret himself was a bully and a cad, but perfectly honest, and all the work he took was of a reputable character. But the "detectives" he employed were a very mixed lot, ex-Scotland Yard men, ex-lawyers' clerks, scallywags, and ex-gentlemen like myself.

"Bah, don't brag, I daresay you've got your price. Hold your tongue and listen. Clarkson wires he's sick. He was to be on duty at Lady Moorfield's in Grosvenor Square this afternoon. Give your work to Ranson and take his place. Ever heard of Lady Moorfield?"

"She's the widow of Lord Moorfield, the politician, who died last year," I answered. I might have added that she was my sister, but I kept that piece of information to myself.

"Her stepdaughter is marrying Lord Herbert Anstruther today. There will be a big reception after the wedding. Dress like a guest and report to Hardy at 2 o'clock; help him to watch the presents. And keep your eyes open. There have been several thefts at wedding receptions this season, but not one when we've been employed to guard them. Our reputation for watchfulness must be maintained. Damage it, and I'll fire you. Now get out."

I walked slowly back to my Bloomsbury attic, thinking of many things. It would not be the first time I had visited the homes of old friends and acquaintances in my new capacity of private detective, and, unrecognized, mingled with them. Seven years had changed me out of knowledge. I was only 35, but my hair was streaked with gray, by face lined, nothing was left of the debonnair Capt. Cairns but the voice, and that was easily disguised. I did not think Gertrude would know me. Pauline might, and she would be there if she were in England, unless the old friendship had been sundered.

Pauline! I had shut her out of my thoughts—or very nearly, but the knowledge that I might chance to hear of her or even see her that day brought back a flood of memories. In my portmanteau lay a photograph of us taken just after our engagement was announced. I drew it forth.

Seven years ago. She was a beautiful girl of 19 then. She would be beautiful still if death had spared her. And married, of course. But I! My lips twisted in an ironical smile as I surveyed myself in the dingy mirror, and looked from it to the photograph. Seven years had written fourteen on my face. Cowboy in Texas, lumberman in Canada, miner in Klondike, life had gone hard with me and branded me. Ah God, how I had paid for my folly!

The wedding party were lunching when I arrived, immaculately clad, and the big reception-room on the first floor where the presents were displayed was empty save for Hardy, dressed in the Moorfield livery.

"Hullo, you?" he said.

"Clarkson is ill," I explained.

"Ill? On the booze, I expect. Look here, Acton, we shall have to keep our eyes skinned. Over three hundred presents to watch and about a thousand of the smartest folk in London coming to look at 'em. The smarter and more exclusive the gathering the more thieves among 'em. That's my experience."

It was a very smart wedding. Royalty was gracing it, all fashionable London would be in this room presently. I remembered the bride as a long-legged girl with her hair down her back and a passion for marrons glacés. And she was Lady Anstruther today, and these her wedding presents.

As both the bride and bridegroom were enormously rich, the gifts were not only numerous, but expensive; nothing but the best could be good enough for this lucky young couple, and a small fortune had been spent over the presents. The jewelry especially was resplendent and costly. I walked round with Hardy looking at them and noting the most valuable, so as to facilitate keeping an eye on those most worthy of the attention of a—kleptomaniac.

We heard the noise below as the bride and bridegroom departed, and then the guests began to filter upstairs into the big drawing-room adjacent to that where the presents were displayed. Our room began to fill also, and a babble of gossip and laughter pervaded it, the presents were exclaimed over and freely commented upon. Meanwhile I watchfully strolled about, and no less assiduously did Hardy keep a keen eye on all that went on.

Among the early visitors was an immaculately-clad young man with a pale face and dark upturned mustache. He was escorting an elderly dowager, who seemed to take much pleasure in his society. They examined the presents with more or less interest, and I caught the man glancing about him furtively behind his companion's back in a way that roused my suspicions. I took advantage of their stopping to talk to another couple to waylay Hardy and draw him aside. He knew almost everybody.

"Who's the young man with the black mustache and military appearance? He ought to be watched, I think."

Hardy chuckled. "A boss shot, Acton. That's the Grand Duke Alexander, a cousin of the Czar's, staying at the embassy, and supposed to be studying English."

"Are you sure?" I asked in surprise. I had set him down as a wealthy parvenu.

"Certain."

At that moment three ladies entered together, Gertrude the first. She had grown stouter, but otherwise had altered little. One of her companions I recognized as her old school friend, Ethel Bonnerman, the other was Pauline.

She had changed, though I knew her in an instant. Her beauty had matured, the rosebud become a rose. She was more stately and rather graver of face; but as lovely as ever. With an effort I held down my emotion.

"Who's that lady with Lady Moorfield? I mean the one——"

"That's Lady Norrington she's talking to." He indicated Pauline.

Lady Norrington! She had married Fred Norrington. Ah, well, he was a good fellow in the days when I knew him. But was she happy? I doubted it; there was a sad look in those eyes, which, filled with happy laughter, had so often looked into mine. I turned away with a smothered sigh.

Pauline a peeress, and I a private detective, on seven and sixpence a day. So turned Fortune's wheel, and I resolutely set myself to watch the presents and forget her. But, against my will. I encountered her and Gertrude a few minutes later. My sister dealt me a shrewd look, and I quaked, remembering her memory for faces. Luckily, Pauline had turned, and was bending over a magnificent pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom to the bride.

"Pardon me," said my sister; "I cannot recall your name, Mr. ——"

"Acton, me lydy. I'm from Holt's."

My cockney twang quite deceived her.

"Oh, the second detective. I see; you're rather like some one I used to know—in face at least," and she glanced at Pauline, whose head was turned away. I slipped past.

There was little crush, the room was large, and most people walked through and out again. Pauline lingered, once I thought she was watching me, then decided I was mistaken, and, with an effort, kept my thoughts and eyes to my duty. The afternoon slowly sped. The Grand Duke had left a long time, and now came in again, and this time alone, and again his manner roused my suspicions. It was true Hardy said he was a Grand Duke, but Hardy, walking encyclopedia of the beau monde though he was, might be mistaken, and I shadowed the man unobtrusively.

A little later he stood before the pearl necklace Pauline was admiring, when Gertrude spoke to me. The jewels were perfect round "virgin" pearls, flawless, and matching perfectly, the neckless must have cost Anstruther several thousand pounds. Behind it stood a silver salver, a presentation from some group of tenants or dependents, and the Duke leaned forward as though to read the inscription engraved upon it. Then he glanced suddenly round, no one was looking at him, I screened myself behind two ladies. Again he examined the salver and passed on. I approached the jewel case whereon lay the necklace. It was empty.

I did not hesitate. I knew the necklace had been there a minute before, that no one but he had stood within reach of it. It must be in his possession. I touched his arm.

"You have just taken the pearl necklace, surrender it," I whispered.

He stared at me in haughty amazement.

"I am a private detective. I have been watching you."

"You accuse me? Cochon, you lie."

"Then I arrest you. Come quietly."

He saw I was not to be denied, and permitted me to take his arm and lead him toward the door in apparent amity. We passed through, jostling some people going in, and, as luck would have it, encountered Gertrude outside.

"Your Highness is not going yet," she began.

"I have arrested the Grand Duke, if he is one, which I doubt. He has taken the pearl necklace, the one which Lord Anstruther has given to Eva."

My slip of the tongue calling Lady Anstruther "Eva" passed quite unnoticed. Gertrude with astonished eyes interrogated my companion.

"It is true. This blockhead has arrested me," the foreign accent in the voice was noticeable.

"Dolt," she cried. "Are you mad, accusing a Grand Duke of stealing a necklace?"

"Far from it," I replied coolly. "I was sent here to guard the wedding presents, and I'm only doing my duty. Let us go in here," and I turned the handle of a door on my right. It led, I remembered, into a small sitting-room.

Gertrude hesitated; then her eyes alighting on an elderly gentleman approaching, brightened. "Ah, Colonel, I want you. Come in here."

It was Col. Trevor, the last man in the world I cared to meet, and I lost my composure for the moment. I thrust my prisoner into the room and let the two others follow. Then I looked toward my old chief; he stared at me.

"I've seen your face before. You've been in my regiment."

"No, the man's a private detective," explained Gertrude; "one of the two men hired from Holt's to guard the wedding presents, and he has the audacity to accuse the Grand Duke Alexander of stealing a necklace."

"The Grand Duke Alexander! Preposterous!" snapped the Colonel. "On behalf of my old friend, Lady Moorfield, I offer your Highness a thousand apologies for the insult put upon you."

"Pardon me, Colonel," I said drily, "an apology is premature at this juncture. I make a statement, and I'm going to substantiate it."

"And, I repeat, you lie, fellow," answered the man I accused.

"Will your Highness object to be searched?" I queried.

"Not in the least," was the unexpected reply. "I make but one stipulation."

"Name it."

"That the Colonel searches you first. That the necklace has disappeared there is no doubt, but it is, I think, more likely to be in your possession than mine."

"I am perfectly willing," I said, somewhat taken aback. I could not guess the reason of this manoeuvre, unless it were to gain time.

"Don't leave the room, Lady Moorfield," continued the speaker, "the search will not require any disrobing. Ah! just as I thought!"

I stood thunderstruck. The Colonel had approached and begun to search me, and, from the first pocket he touched, the upper one in my waistcoat, had drawn forth the necklace! The tables were turned with a vengeance.

"You put it there," I stammered, white to the lips. Too late, I remembered how the crowd at the door had jostled us; he must have taken that opportunity to rid himself of his booty.

"You d—— thief," roared the Colonel. "Lady Moorfield, I beg your pardon. Oh, you . . . " he gesticulated eloquently. There were only two men in the British army who had a finer flow of language than Col. Trevor, but Gertrude's presence tied his tongue.

With a calm smile the man who had outwitted me received the apologies of Gertrude and the Colonel, and assured them he did not hold them responsible for my misdeeds.

"We'll leave the rascal in here for the present," said the old soldier to my sister, "while one of your servants fetches a policeman." He tried the handle of a door opposite the one we had entered by. "Where does this lead to?"

"That's Pauline's room, but it's locked from the other side."

The Colonel satisfied himself it was so, examined the window, pronounced the room a safe prison, and, going out last, locked me in with the assurance a policeman would take charge of me very shortly.

Alone, baffled and humiliated, I sank into a chair. True, I had saved the necklace, and my character must be cleared in the end, but the thief had gained time to escape and much temporary discomfort was before me. Yet I told myself if I escaped recognition as Capt. Cairns nothing else mattered. Minutes passed slowly and my imprisonment remained undisturbed. Presently the mortification of my present position stung me and springing up, I paced the room like a caged animal seeking to escape. It was useless, both doors were locked, the window offered no prospect but suicide on the pavement beneath.

"Dick,' said a voice at my elbow as I leaned out, and I started at the once familiar voice; it had not changed. Pauline stood behind me.

"Pauline," I cried, "you know me?"

"I knew you at once."

She had entered from the other room; the door stood open. "Pauline, do you know the trouble I am in?" I began.

"Yes; I listened at the door. I heard everything."

"The fellow is an imposter. I know he stole the necklace. Let me escape through your room and go to the Russian embassy——"

"You need not trouble. I have sent my maid in a hansom with a note to the Ambassador. He is sure to be here directly."

"God bless you, Pauline. We'll catch the knave [illegible] and unmask him before they come to arrest me. Outwitted by that rogue! But I'll have the last laugh.'

But my joy that my rehabilitation was so soon evaporated under Pauline's presence and her grave eyes. They brought back the past, and my own sank under them. I felt ashamed. "Why do you stare at me so?" I asked irritably.

"Oh, Dick," she cried, with a sob in her voice, "you're altered so. And your hair!"

"Semi-starvation in the Klondike turned it gray. You've not altered except that you're prettier. I hope you're happy."

"Oh," she said, unheeding, "why did you run away? I never believed you guilty. Your cruel letter nearly broke my heart."

"You didn't? Then your uncle lied to me, for he told me you did. And that decided me. No one believed in my innocence. Even Gertrude doubted. So I thought it best to vanish. I meant to carve out a career in the new world and come back in ten years a millionaire. I came back in six to starve in the streets till I became a private detective."

"Oh, my poor darling." She was crying now and standing close by me. Her hair touched my shoulder, but her pity only hurt me. She was another man's wife. I drew back.

"Don't cry, Pauline, I'm not worth it," I answered roughly.

Her wet blue eyes gleamed like stars. "Oh, forgive me, Dick, but I was powerless. I tried to come to you, but they locked me in. I wrote, they wouldn't let me send the letter. And I was only 18 then."

The pity of it. Silently, hungrily, we gazed at one another. In my heart was sick despair at the impossibility of it all, but in her eyes I read nothing but agony that she had failed me in the hour of my trouble.

She held out her hands like a child suing for forgiveness and asking to be kissed and consoled.

"I don't blame you, Pauline," I said gently. "As you say, you were only 18, and under the guardianship of your uncle and aunt. They jumped at the chance the engagement. I was a fool to believe Mr. Kerr. a fool to run away. And I've paid for my folly."

She advanced a step, and then paused with puzzled eyes. My attitude seemed to bewilder her, but just then the key grated in the lock and the door opened.

Two blue-clad constables came in with the Colonel, who gasped at sight of Pauline. She cut short his questions.

"Col. Trevor, you're making a great mistake, and not for the first time. The man calling himself the Grand Duke is an imposter. I've sent for the Ambassador to prove it."

"God bless me, child, what do you know about it?"

"I know more than you. Ah! I hear Gertrude, and, yes, it's the Ambassador."

Three more persons entered. Gertrude, my late prisoner, now wearing a hang-dog expression, his arm firmly held by an elderly gentleman, who, I guessed, was the Russian Ambassador.

"Pauline, how did you get here? Oh, Colonel, we were wrong after all. This isn't the Grand Duke. It's one of his valets, a Swiss." Thus spoke Gertrude, volubly.

"The Grand Duke has only accepted a very few of the invitations he has received since his recent arrival in London," explained the Ambassador, "and this rascal, taking advantage of the fact and of some resemblance to him, has impersonated him. This is his third appearance in the character of his master, so he has just confessed to me."

"Mrs. Felix Poulet's reception in Park Lane last week and the dance at Lady Harold Rising's on Monday were the other two?" I said to my former prisoner. "There were jewel thefts at both."

The pseudo Duke shrugged his shoulders. "Right you are, Mr. Detective," he said jauntily. "The stuff is hidden in my luggage and sure to be found, so I don't mind confessing. But I nearly beat you. If I could have got away from here a minute earlier, I'd have reached the embassy, secured the jewelry and slipped off to a safe hiding place. I was caught on the doorstep. It's the fortune of war."

The constables took possession of the thief, while the Ambassador exchanged a few words with Pauline, but I did not hear what was said, for the Colonel had got me in a corner, and was apologizing to me in a loud voice. The prisoner was marched away, and Russia's representative went too, apparently apprehensive that the resourceful rascal might yet escape; we four remained.

My sister addressed me with cold courtesy. "You were right and I wrong, detective, and I must apologize. For your special services in this matter I will send you a check."

"Oh, Gertrude, how blind you are," cried Pauline; "it's Dick."

"Dick!" She stared at me.

"Cairns!" roared the Colonel. "God bless my soul, so it is. I knew I knew your face. This is——"

I held out my hand. "Capt. Cairns is dead. He died seven years ago when his brother officers accused him of cheating at cards, and he couldn't prove his innocence and ran away."

"But you were innocent," my old chief shouted in uncontrollable excitement. "I learned the truth today for the first time. Byron died last week, and left a sealed envelope in his desk addressed to me. I got it from the lawyers this morning. In it he confessed that out of sheer spite he bribed your man to put the marked cards in your room that night. It clears you. Clears you publicly."

He was wringing my hands as though unable to leave off, while I, sick and giddy from emotion, stood, slowly realizing the momentous news. I grew faint, and, when the Colonel let me go, I staggered to a chair by the table, and bent over it, burying my face in my hands.

Byron! I knew he hated me, but I had never suspected him. How the scene came back, the card party in my rooms, my extraordinary run of luck, the sudden discovery of Chesterton's that the cards we were using—my cards—were marked packs, the kind used by sharpers, the accusation, my hot denial, my rage and fury, which alienated many who would have believed me had I controlled my temper better, the official inquiry that followed, and how—deeming my friends lukewarm towards me, and Pauline faithless, I had run away—ruining my career in a fit of temper.

I raised my head. Pauline stood opposite me. They had left us together. But my eyes went no higher than her hands, which lay on the table. They were destitute of rings. I sprang to my feet and pointed. I cried hoarsely:

"Where is your wedding ring?"

"Dick! I am not married."

"You're married to Norrington," I insisted dully.

"He's married to Ethel Bonnerman. I'm not married. I suppose I ought to know." She was smiling now.

Free! Pauline free. I had misunderstood Hardy, or he had misunderstood me. It mattered not which. I stretched out my arms and my old love came to me.

"Oh, you foolish Dick. That was why you wouldn't know me just now. Oh, Dick, I've waited and waited for this day. I knew it must come. Thank God it has!"

WHAT'S IN A MAN?

"All the constituents of a 150-pound man are contained in 1200 eggs," said the chemist.

"There is enough gas in a man," he went on, "to fill a gasometer of 3649 cubic feet. There is enough iron to make four nails. There is enough fat to make seventy-five candles and a large cake of soap. There is enough phosphorus to make 8064 boxes of matches.

"Furthermore, that man who is aëronautical will be pleased to know that there is enough hydrogen in him to fill a balloon and carry him up to the clouds.

"The remaining constituents of a man would yield, if utilized, six cruets of salt, a bowl of sugar, and ten gallons of water."

The Bennett Family.

HAS ITS MEN OF SCIENCE AND OF LETTERS AND ITS STATESMEN.

By a Special Contributor.

A BENNETT may be quite as much a member of this well-known and widespread family if he elect to write himself down Bennet, or Bennette, or Benet, or Benett, or Bennitt, or Benit, or Beneat, or Benoit, or even Benight.

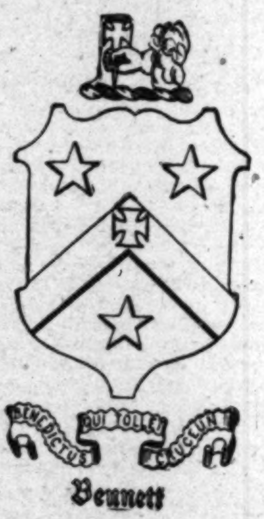
If the name is derived from Benedict or Benediscite the evolution is as follows: Benediste, Bendist, Bennett. Or the derivation may be from Benet, an order of priests. Benet is also the name of a town in France, and Benoit is a common Huguenot patronymic.

The Bennetts flourished in England in the reigns of Edwards II and III, and one seat of the family was Pitthouse, Wiltshire. In 1619, at Youghal, an Irish seaport, Lord Boyle repaired a chapel which had been founded by Richard Bennett and Ellis Barry, his wife, in whose memory he erected a monument. The church register goes back to 1100, presumably the year of its foundation.

There are those who say that records or traditions of the family extend back to Saxony and the year of grace 896, or thereabouts. He would be a courageous person who set out to try to prove the statement.

The family were prominent in the reign of Charles I of England, and Sir Henry Bennett was private secretary to Charles II.

The family has its men of science, authors, poets, musicians, theologians and statesmen. Sir William Sterndale Bennett was a musical composer of renown, and at his death received the highest honor England can confer upon her sons—a grave in Westminster Abbey.



Bennett

It was one of the Bennett name and lineage, of the Scotch line, but living in America, who sent Stanley in search of Livingstone.

In 1630 there was the mercantile house of "Benet & Co." established in Boston.

Six years later William Adriaense, or Adrianesz, Bennet came from Holland, and bought land on Long Island. It is down in the records that he was a Huguenot. Jacques Benoit was another Huguenot, who with his wife Sarah and son Jean fled from Poitou, France, and found a refuge in South Carolina.

The son of Adriaense, first ancestor, was Adriaense or Arie (for short perhaps,) and he married Angenietje, daughter of Jan Tomasse Van Dyck of New York. In 1676 Adriaense was constable of New York, and deacon of the Reformed Church. He removed to New Jersey, where he bought a farm, and his son Abraham was one of the incorporators of New Brunswick when its first charter was granted, December 30, 1730, just two weeks before New York was incorporated as a city by George II. For its charter the citizens of New Brunswick rendered annually to Great Britain one sheaf of wheat.

For a study in names, we must look at the list of Adriaense and Angenietjes' children. There were Jan Adriaense, Tryntje Adriaense, Jacob Adriaense, Isaac Adriaense and Marie Adriaense, and possibly a few more Adriaenses.

It reminds us of the story of the fireman who said: "I like any color, provided it is red;" the Bennetts of this branch, said "any name is good enough, so it has grandfather's name tacked on to it."

The colonial Governor of Virginia, 1654, was Sir Richard Bennett, a "roundhead," who was appointed to act, with the English commissioners, in reconciling the colony to the administration of Cromwell. Gov. Bennett proved his metal upon many occasions, notably so when intercolonial hostilities raged.

A tradition which has traveled down the ages anent one Samuel Bennett of Essex, Mass., living about the middle of the seventeenth century, is to the effect that he was presented at court for being a "common sleeper in church," and fined 2s. 6d. On July 15, 1644, he was wide awake, for he buys "ye new water mill," a valuable property. Samuel may have been the son of Edward, who with wife and four children came from England, 1636, settling at Weymouth.

The family have always been a power in New England, occupying offices of trust and prominence. Capt. Jonathan, of Gloucester, was a marine trader, born 1721. He married Martha Parsons, and their son Nathaniel was the founder of the Maine branch. Middleboro, Beverly and Ipswich were other Massachusetts homes of the Bennetts. Stephen, of the last named town, was "published to Elizabeth Clark, December 21, 1746;" that is, the banns of marriage were read.

One of the founders of Manchester, Mass., and a selectman, was William, date about 1637. His two sons rejoiced in the names of Moses and Aaron; the latter had two wives. One might say that two, yes three, wives are a failing with the Bennetts, or one of their characteristics, shall we say?

Among the first settlers of Wyoming Valley were many Bennetts, or Benets, if you please, and when Wilkesbarre had but five white women, three were Bennetts. Ishmael Bennett of Connecticut, in 1770, removed to the Wyoming Valley, and was one of the ancestors of that line. Isaac Bennett of Preston, Conn., in 1765, bought a half share in the Susquehanna company, which entitled him to 500 acres of land. All the stories handed down about him prove that he was a patriot.

Affiliation with the Society of Colonial Wars may be claimed by descendants of Moses and Lieut. Bennett of King Philip's War, 1676.

The New York roster of soldiers in the Continental army of the Revolution includes the names of twenty-five Bennetts of near kinship to those who located in Wyoming Valley. There were among the number Lieut. Amos and Sergeant Ephraim, and in the rank and file Ezra, Jesse, Joseph, Isaiah, Jeremiah and Bildad.

An inextinguishable spirit of enterprise is one heritage of the Bennetts.

Physical characteristics of the Bennetts are medium stature, and complexions, eyes and hair, dark—an inheritance from French ancestors, so it is claimed. Family names are Peggy, Polly, Sally, Nelly—all of one family, and Ruby, Nabby, Tirza and Cynthia. There are marriage relations with the Lows, Dodges, Proctors, Fords, Richardsons Lewises and Peytons.

Dr. David Bennett was brave enough to take a third wife in the person of Rebecca Balles, sister of Sir William Phipps, of Boston. The doctor lived to be 100, which proves that he had the best of care, and while it is not every man who has the luck to get three wives, he is wise who improves any opportunities of the kind that happen along his way.

The arms reproduced was borne by Sir William Bennett of Scotland, who was created a baronet 1670. It is gules, on a chevron between three stars argent, a cross-pattee gules.

Crest, a hand issuing out of a cloud, holding forth a cross-pattee fitchee.

Motto—Benedictus qui Tollet Crucem—Blessed be he who bears the cross.

Other Bennett mottoes are Mihi Consuilt Dens, and Serve the King.

The cross-pattee, or maltese cross, like all crosses, denotes a crusader ancestor. The chevron signifies protection; the hand is a pledge of faith, sincerity and justice. The star, or mullet, "denotes some high estate whereby men shine in virtue, learning and works of piety, like bright stars on earth."

ELEANOR LEXINGTON.

THE MIRRORS' SECRET.

"It is not enough to make true mirrors," the dealer said. "If that were all, ours would be indeed a simple business."

He was walking complacently over his huge shop, which bustled and hummed with a brisk fall trade.

"Dressmakers and milliners," he explained, "require mirrors of all sorts. They need, for example, a mirror that makes one look taller and thinner. When they dress a fat, short patron in one of their new hats or suits, they lead her to this mirror, and she is so surprised and pleased with the change for the better in her looks that, straight off, she buys.

"For masseurs I make a mirror that, like a retouched photograph, hides blemishes, wrinkles, scars. The masseur takes the wrinkled face of some rich old woman, steams it, thumps it, pinches it and smacks it for an hour, and then holds up to it the mirror that gives a blurred, blemish-hiding reflection. The woman thinks her wrinkles are gone, and is happy till she gets home to her own true mirror.

"Altogether I make some twenty varieties of false mirrors. Salesmen and saleswomen, in millinery and dressmaking establishments, can double and quadruple their business if they are quick and deft in their selection of the mirror that flatters each patron best."

IT SHOULD WORK BOTH WAYS.

Things were getting worse and worse at Haash House. The poor clerk was in despair. He worked hard, he needed sustaining food, and yet——

Monday, when he asked for apple pie, it was out.

There were duck and hash on the menu Tuesday. He ordered duck, but there was none. Out.

Wednesday he couldn't get any potatoes. They were out.

Thursday morning, coming down late, no steak. Out.

When he got his week's bill on Friday, the clerk did not, as usual, pay it in the landlady's office. He took it in to dinner with him.

And, before all the boarders, he handed the landlady the bill and $4.

"My week's board," he said.

"But," said she, "this is only $4 you have given me. Your board is $6, isn't it?"

"Yes," he explained calmly, "but four is all I've got. My money, you see, is out."

PLUCK.

"Pluck," said old Gobsa Golde, pompously, "pluck is the secret of success in business."

"And I'll give you $10,000," said L'Oignon, "if you'll teach me your method of plucking."

Monumental Church.

HISTORY, MYSTERY, AND ROMANCE CLUSTER ABOUT IT.

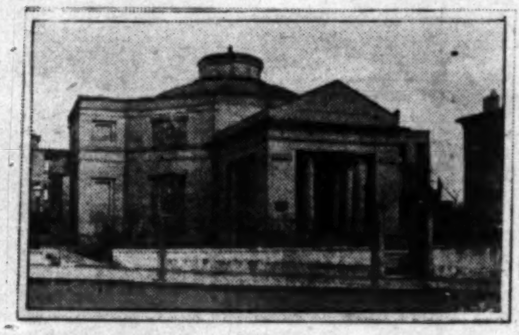
By a Special Contributor.

THE Monumental Church, at Richmond, Va., has not only a wonderful history, but there is a romance concerning one of its priests which will live forever in local history.

Writers of the future will undoubtedly weave a web of weird doubt concerning the identity of that priest, and the legend may ultimately form the foundation for myths, out of which unbridled fancy and poetic license may develop stanzas as peculiar or as wonderful as those which trickled from the pen of the gifted Edgar Allen Poe. One thing is certain, and that is that the picture of the Rev. Dr. Armstrong and the picture of John Wilkes Booth are so much alike that every observer will declare that they are not mere resemblances, nor likeness, but counterparts, representing one person.

The Monumental Church manifests many strange vagaries of construction. It stands in a quiet old churchyard, fronting on Broad street, upon the slope of a hill which was once the center and circumference of official and fashionable life in the capital city of the Old Dominion. The church itself is a part of the history of the city, and even the ground where it stands is held in reverence, because it constitutes part of a block of ground bought by Thomas Jefferson and by him dedicated to be the site of an institution of science and belles lettres, after the fashion of the French Academy.

There were many people in Richmond who shook their heads in doubt and deprecation when the Academy building was converted into a theater. They were not croakers without cause, for the theater was destroyed by fire a very few years later. The historic block was then divided, and the new Richmond Theater was erected upon one corner of it. This second theater followed the fate of the first. It was a short-lived enterprise which rapidly became famous because the greatest actors of that day and generation trod its stage; and the Richmond Theater was regarded as the cradle of dramatic art in America.



MONUMENTAL CHURCH.

On December 26, 1811, a performance was given in the Richmond Theater for the benefit of E. Placide, then one of the most popular actors on the American stage. This benefit was looked forward to as an event to be noteworthy in the social life of the Old Dominion. It was announced that the old English custom of presenting pantomimes at Yuletide would be followed by the rendition of a new play, entitled "Raymond and Agnes; or, the Bleeding Nun." It was further announced on the bills that it would be "the last performance of the season."

When the curtain went up, that evening, there was a grand throng in the Richmond Theater. The Governor of Virginia was there, with his official staff. There were old-time gentlemen from the prosperous plantations of the State; members of the bench and bar; family parties of husbands, wives, children, bevies of maidens, the most lovely of girls, and the most stately of matrons, silked, satined and bejeweled. There were successful tradesmen, merchants, seafaring men, and importers. In the rear section reserved for them, were seated the negroes and the "poor whites." The theater was filled with humanity; filled to overflowing. For that time and place, it was a great audience; the greatest that had ever assembled in any city of the South.

Gas and electricity were unknown, and the chandeliers of those days were made with lamps. At the beginning of the second act, a boy on the stage pulled up into the flies overhead a chandelier, one lamp in which was burning. One of the strips of painted canvas was ignited. That was the beginning of the awful ending of that gay evening.

When the little flame was first seen, there was a cry of "Fire!" and the people rushed for the single exit. One of the actors came forward and assured the people that there was no danger, and that the fire would be put out without delay or difficulty. There was a pause for a moment; but each moment the flames grew stronger. They crackled and roared. Wider and wider, larger and larger, the fiery serpent grew. It devoured the tinsel coverings of the ceiling of the stage. Screen after screen went away in puffs of flame, each adding heat to heat, and doom to disaster.

Within ten minutes—think of it!—within ten minutes the entire theater was a mass of fire. The tragedy was complete; and it was likewise speedy and overwhelming. The tongues of flame swept from the stage into the auditorium, rushing after the struggling and suffering people like animated demons from Inferno. It singed the hair of women and men, ignited their clothing, making the people themselves a part of the holocaust, their bodies burning while they yet lived, and shrieked for relief from their horrible imprisonment with the fiery monsters and the interminable legions of hellish flames.

It was all over in ten minutes, but in that brief time the Governor of Virginia, and many others of high rank and station, lost their lives, and the city was in mourning; yes, the whole State of Virginia was shadowed, and shrouded with woe. When intelligence of the disaster became general, the Congress adopted joint resolutions of condolence; memorial services were held throughout the length and breadth of the land; and the conflagration was regarded as a national disaster.

Early in the spring of 1812 it was suggested that a great memorial should be erected by public subscription, and Chief Justice John Marshall of the United States Supreme Court assumed charge of the movement. A building fund was raised. Then the remains of the lost were gathered together and placed in a vault beneath the center of the ruins; and around this tomb the people built the Monumental Church.

It has been said that there has been mystery and romance, as well as history of interest; and having viewed the wonderfully pathetic history and origin of the Monumental Church, let us look into the mystery of it, and the romance. Let us go into the vestry-room. There, in a dark corner, hangs a picture of John Wilkes Booth, clad in long clerical garments. The sexton says that it is a picture of Rev. John G. Armstrong, who was rector of the church from 1878 to 1884.

The photograph shows, in every line and curve, the broad, high forehead, the long, straight hair, the handsome chin and exquisite profile of the notorious assassin, John Wilkes Booth. The man is in the prime of life, standing beside a table, with serious mein. He is apparently a clergyman; but, that is the face of John Wilkes Booth. Every picture extant shows the semblance, and those yet living who saw Booth upon the stage, say that the photograph of the alleged Rev. John G. Armstrong is a perfect picture of John Wilkes Booth.

There is the mystery. But, there is romance also connected with the story, for nobody knows where the reverend gentleman came from. It was said that he had been ordained in Ireland. An investigation of his past did not produce satisfactory results. He came to Richmond a comparative stranger. Everybody wondered at the likeness of the man to John Wilkes Booth, and some accused him of being that man. Finally, the clergyman was accused of irregularities in his habits; and this started afresh the insinuations that he was not what he claimed to be. At last, in despair, he left the ministry, lived in private and died in obscurity. The doubt of his identity hung over him like a pall. On his deathbed, his last words were an earnest and tearful denial that he was John Wilkes Booth.

There were many men in Richmond who had heard Booth on the stage, who also heard Dr. Armstrong in the pulpit, who declared that two men could not be so much alike, in face, form, voice, gesture, everything—for the preacher was an orator of such dramatic manners that it would have been almost impossible for any man to have acquired them anywhere except upon the stage. Moreover, it was remarked, that he was slightly lame, as John Wilkes Booth undoubtedly would have been after having sustained a serious injury when he jumped from the box to the stage, on the night of the commission of his awful crime.

In 1865, and for a long time subsequently, there were grave doubts expressed by many people, as to whether or not Booth had really been killed; or, some one resembling him. Those doubts were expressed frequently in the public prints. When Rev. Dr. Armstrong appeared in Richmond, all of those rumors were revived. There was such a general dissemination of gossip and rumor that the preacher found himself to be in the center of a seething cauldron of mystery. When attempts were made to investigate his antecedents, he gave no assistance.

It is known that he had a daughter whom he trained in elocution. She went upon the stage after the death of her father. It was generally believed that whatever may have been the secret of his former life, he confided it to his child, for she said that she alone knew her father, and that she only could he trust.

The mysterious priest of the Monumental Church has gone to his grave, and there is no stone to mark his resting place. Just before he left the ministry he had two photographs taken; one for his daughter, and the other for the church. And there, in that dark corner hidden by the surrounding shadows; as his life was hidden by the shadows of a marvelous mystery; in the vestry-room of the Monumental Church, visitors gaze upon the features of John Wilkes Booth. Whoever he was, his was an unhappy life; his was a pathetic death.

A Goat Farm Discovered.

A FLYTIME STORY FROM THE WILDS OF NEVADA.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was gnat time all the way from Las Vegas to Caliente, and eighty of W. H. Crandall's Los Angeles mules were throwing their tails from north to [illegible] with grave insistence close by a shoo-fly of the [illegible] Lake Railroad at Kyle that evening we made our [illegible] stop-over in Nevada. The mules were busy at both ends, for their corral was loaded with fresh alfalfa, and it was supper time, although the sun had but just [illegible] down behind the perpendicular of the purple and copper-stained west wall of the Meadowbrook Wash. A suffering "skinner" in the near-by tent was lustily demanding that the camp blacksmith come p. d. q. and shoe the flies that were tormenting him. The rambling rails of the shoo-fly were as irony to the scene and mocked the genius of engineers, since the now sluggish brook that idled along beside the temporary track had but recently run riot down the cañon, whisking away piles as if they were toothpicks and making far-reaching level sand floors of the grand embankments along which the Los Angeles Limited had whirled its proud way toward Chicago or the setting sun. A community of men and mules was laboriously doing over again what the Meadowbrook Wash had playfully undone in a mere moment of mischief.

We had heard about Kyle. It was well-known in the Stimson Block, where we were told that George West was Mayor of the metropolis and that Mike Leonard, formerly of Wherever-he-happened-to-be, had settled down to the humdrum that went with the office of director of public works. Yet, notwithstanding that the integrity of its two office holders was vouched for by Mr. Crandall himself, we had been rather skeptical about Kyle, because no available line drawing of the somewhat lumpy State of Nevada would reveal to us that Kyle was really on the map at all. But in the due course of much overdue time, due to wash-outs and shoo-flies, a conductor pulled a bell rope and in a moment we knew that the place had been already discovered by a sign painter of the Clark system, for there, high up and haughty, confronting and yet overlooking us, was the magic word "Kyle."

"We are at the city gates," we said; "now how far is it to the City Hall?" What we really expected was to find the Mayor shooting craps with Harry Eagan, [illegible] McCarty and some of the rest of the Los Angeles experts who had been selected by competent judges to carry reforms into that suffering State and incidentally to restore the highway of the Salt Lake system. But all we ever did find of Kyle was on that sign post. The sixty or more inhabitants assured us in California English, which they spoke with striking vigor and a strong grading-camp accent, that they no sooner had a mouthful of mountain air than they lost all remembrance of city charters and recalls; and anyhow what was the use when every one of them was a political boss and none of the mules had a vote? Outside of cottontails, quails, rattlesnakes and doves no one lived permanently in Kyle, and even these were not particularly permanent since both West and Leonard had guns, and by dint of laborious practice could nearly always lay down a dove if they were careful to aim at a cottontail, a quail and a rattler all at once. Moreover, the nearest winery was three miles south, and already had been sold dry to prospectors, while the nearest ranch was four miles north, and about all you could get there for love or money was a bale of alfalfa and a long-haired billy goat.

And this is how we came to get acquainted with the yet-to-be-made famous Angora goats of Elgin. For you must know that this is a story about goats, and the reader will kindly note that all that goes before the goats is a prelude intended to give an idea of the isolation in which the goats ruminate and have their being. Elgin is a real station on the Salt Lake Road, for there is a big iron water tank on stilts there and locomotives will get thirsty crossing the Nevada barrens. There are two houses and a tent there, but if you were to send a letter to one of the populace of Elgin you would address it to Caliente, nineteen miles nearer the Utah line, for Elgin has no postoffice. The Meadowbrook Wash leisurely making its way down the cañon, the bed of which is much narrower than the walls of it [illegible], suddenly disappeared one day in May, just south of the Elgin water tank. A few hours later a tall, broad-shouldered, grizzled man put in an appearance and demanded to know what had become of it. The Wash had passed the tank in good order, but a little beyond it had sunk from view in the sand it had itself scattered in the washout of a few months previous.

"My fruit, my alfalfa and the goats!" Farmer Bradshaw expostulated, but no one could give him a clue to the present whereabouts of the Meadowbrook Wash, which for twenty years of unbroken friendship had irrigated his soil and watered his stock without being an hour off. Crandall's Los Angeles outfit of men and mules had been encamped at Elgin before moving to the sign-board town of Kyle, but no one openly accused them of the larceny of the brook, although subsequently it was found to have returned to the surface and resumed its normal course a mile below the Bradshaw ranch and that much nearer the Crandall camp. It had simply cut the farmer out.

That thrifty gentleman speedily went to digging, and in the course of a few days he found the buried brook. As it could not be coaxed back to the surface, he had to make a new surface for it, and when we last saw him he had succeeded, after severe toil, in getting water in adequate quantities at the ranch. Angora goats were scattered up and down the cañon in search of fresh food and water. We saw them poised on the highest crags and skipping care-free from boulder to ledge and ledge to boulder in places where the goats and mountain lion would fear to tread.

A couple of years previous two men had started out of Arizona with a band of several hundred goats in quest of a better feeding ground than they had been able to locate in the Territory. Some of the goats were pure-blooded Angoras, with hair a foot long at their ends, some had less Angora blood and shorter hair, and a few were the Navajo Indian goats, strong of limb, short-haired, hardy and mighty good mutton. The partners drove their stock down to the Muddy, in Nevada, and there learned about the Meadowbrook Wash. In the course of a month they had reached Bradshaw's ranch. A trade was soon struck, and the whole band was turned loose on the then unfenced portions of Bradshaw's homesteaded acres. They were the first goats used for commercial purposes that had struck that section of Nevada, and they have been money-makers from the start.

Bradshaw and the men who own the goats agree that a better place could not be found. Although the cañon in places is just wide enough to let Salt Lake trains through without the cars rubbing shoulders with the towering walls, it is, in several other places, generously wide and with gentler slopes. The water is good, and never fails, albeit once it hid beneath the sands. Excepting some of the best of the meals, none of the goats are ever fed by their owners. Unlike the dissipated and notorious goats of Harlem, which are supposed to attain corpulence on a diet of tin cans and to give milk flavored with a concentrated extract of circus posters, the Elgin goats eat nothing but Spanish dagger and other growing plants and grasses, the purity of which is guaranteed by the Department of Agriculture at Washington. The Elgin goats will have none other. Winter and summer alike they forage for their living.

Last year the enterprising goat man—and a very likely man he is—sent 40,000 pounds of hair to the Massachusetts Mohair Company of Lowell, in the old Bay State, and some of it was worth $1 a pound. This year the hair not averaging enough in length to suit the far eastern customer, the product was sold in Salt Lake City.

The older goats are sheared twice in a twelvemonth. A carcass of mutton sells for $6 and is in demand at all the mining camps. For eating—or, rather, for being eaten—the Navajo is the more profitable, and now it is being more extensively bred. It is stronger (not in the common muttony sense, but physically) and the nannies are supposed to stand hardship better than do the gentler Angoras. Kids of either variety sell at $3 each.

[illegible] West of Kyle, who, in the callow days of youth and before he knew better, was a corral buck, believed that it was healthy for mules to have a goat with them, so he bought a pair of the Angora kids—the sweetest things outside of human childhood—and turned them in with the camp mules. One old jenny eyed them wistfully, and on the second day her opportunity came. She doubled up her hind quarters like a closing jackknife, a la Opper's infamous Maud, and one of the [illegible] pillowed in a remote patch of healthy sage brush. It came back to camp with a leg dangling, and, the injury was repaired, the kids ever after made their abiding place within easy reach of the camp cook's outfit, where they added such cunning to their native nimbleness that they could clear the table without upsetting a dish and pick up a baked potato or a mouthful of [illegible] in flight. They were the cause of more profanity among the skinners than the most "ornery" mule Crandall owned, and the director of public works swore that unless the offenders were boxed up and shipped to the Old Man in Los Angeles, he would perforate them with bullets. But skinners were scarce, and hard to get in that section of Nevada, and for fear of making a vacancy among them, the genial director had to hold his erratic fire—and the kids were reasonably safe in any event so long as he would adhere to his habit of aiming directly at them.

[illegible] the goats and second in interest to the [illegible] was the goat dog. We might call him a hybrid. He surely must have been grafted with a peach. [illegible], he became an orphan before his eyes were open. It happened that an old nanny was conveniently disconsolate because of the death of her kid, so the goat man, being wise to the eccentricities of goat motherhood, took the puppy to the mourning nanny, which promptly adopted it and lavished all her pent-up affection upon it. She nursed it through its puppyhood, and the goat man paid no further attention to it, for he [illegible] having had goat dogs beforetime. The puppy became a dog in stature, but remained a goat in association. He became master of the herd, going and coming with it day by day. Out of the corral he marched every morning at the head of the long goat column, and he saw that all his subjects were rounded up safely at night. During the day, when the inherited habits of [illegible] forbade his eating Spanish dagger and all the other things that the bureau at Washington prescribed for goats, he sat on a rock or a knoll and overlooked the herd. Whether he would have joined issue with a [illegible] coyote was never known, for his mere presence was tacitly accepted by the whole coyote tribe as a mandate to keep off—skidoo. It was a rare thing for even the most venturesome kid to fall victim to this [illegible] of all prowlers, which has had the distinction of being embalmed in the amber ointment of Mark Twain's choicest sarcasm.

As for mountain lions, an enterprising mother has been known to provide her cubs with an occasional dish of kid at the expense of the Elgin goat man. But that gentleman's losses from animals that prey in the mountains have been really insignificant. The Elgin goat man is prosperous, his goats are well fed and happy, cheerfully yielding their coats semi-annually to his profit and to supply the need of some Eastern upholsterer; the smallest kids rush, on unsteady legs, to meet him whenever he opens the corral gate; the goat dog knows him as his counsellor and friend, though he acknowledges no master but the exacting one of Duty. They are a happy and an increasing family.

The Chinaman's Mail.

Some Puzzles Postoffice Men Have to Solve.

By a Special Contributor.

FEW people have an idea of the difficult work the officials and the employés of the Los Angeles postoffice daily grapple with in handing out and in forwarding the correspondence of our local Chinese colony. "Little China" in Los Angeles numbers about 4000. The Chinese send back to their families and "cousins," through the postoffice, about $35,000 a month. There are four carriers for the Chinese district, and they make three deliveries each day. Almost all the letters received are addressed in Chinese characters, and in the Cantonese language, which is the language used in commerce. Nearly all of our Celestial merchants are from the Canton district. A few of the Chinese who understand English also write that part of the address in English which shows its destination, and thus makes it easier for the postal employés. Other letters come from different provinces, and as nearly every one of the nineteen provinces is represented in "Little China," and each province has a different dialect, and some of them have several dialects, it is seen that when the mail from the Celestial kingdom is spread out before them the distributing clerks have a Chinese puzzle to unravel. The key to this puzzle is furnished by Postmaster Flint, who employs a Chinese interpreter, at his own expense. This interpreter understands the Cantonese commercial language, as it is written, also several dialects. Here he is confronted by a problem almost equal to some of those found in Euclid. The written language of a province is different from that of the spoken language, and, in many instances the Chinese who has only a surface learning combines the two. One of the troubles is the equivalent of Los Angeles, in Chinese characters. In writing "California," they express it as "Gold Hills." These are translated by the Chinese distributor. Notwithstanding these manifold difficulties there has not been a complaint of a lost letter within the past three or four years. The Chinese not being an alphabetical language, it is difficult to express in their characters the equivalent of some of our streets. The writer tries his free hand on Marchessault street, and the interpreter reduces it to English, or as near it as possible. When the carrier is more than usually puzzled he goes to the headquarters of the association which manages the affairs of Little China, where he finds a representative of each of the Seven Companies. Here the difficulty is unravelled, for all languages and dialects are spoken, and each member knows every one from his province, and where he may be found. The City Directory is also brought into play at the postoffice when the street and number are not given, just as in the case of the "Melican" who has less excuse for not giving full directions. The Chinese themselves aid the carriers in finding the one whom the carrier cannot track, such as a person of little consequence who has no street number, or perhaps does not live anywhere in particular. When a green Chinese arrives he is billeted upon the company which has control of those from his province. His name is there registered, and the merchants from that province also keep track of their countrymen. When a new store is opened, the carrier is so informed, and is requested to leave the letters for Wo Gun at a designated place.

Chinese are very particular about opening letters. Unless the person is certain that the letter is intended for him he will not open it. He especially desires to keep out of trouble with the "Melican" government.

A peculiarity noticed by the carriers is that they never have letters for Chinese women, though many of the merchants are married. Married women in the Celestial kingdom of the City of Angels are not permitted to receive letters. If a Chinese woman's mother or other female relative in China writes to her, the letter must be directed to the head of the household, the husband, and it is written to him, though intended for her; or, it is inclosed in an envelope directed to him. This puts the lid on flirting at long range. In like manner, no letters are forwarded to women in China. When Ah Sin writes to his first "dear wife," he indites it in the name of the oldest male in the family. Or, when he is on a pleasure trip to China, he writes to his wife in Los Angeles in the name of his eldest son, and the letter is directed to him, though it be a baby.

Under this custom, if there be no male child, the letter for the wife is written to the husband's mother, who hands over the letter to her daughter-in-law, without reading it, of course.

In forwarding letters, the postoffice has less work than in receiving them; but the trouble is quite sufficient. The translator marks "China" on the outgoing letters and the distributing clerks look at the top of the envelope, reads "China," and throws the letter in the oriental box. In like manner the destination is indicated on letters for the Celestial colonies tributary to Los Angeles.

The Chinese system of directing a letter is the reverse from ours. They write the last line of the address at the top, beginning on the right, and reading down in vertical parallel columns. Thus:

"North America.
California.
Los Angeles.
4444 Marchessault Street.
WUN LUNG."

Turn this inscription to the right and it reads downward vertically, as it appears on a Chinese letter.

The five lines of the address occupy about one-fourth of the length of the envelope, as the pen, or rather brush, makes a wide sweep. The interpreter reduces it to English in cross-plowed lines, something on the style of a young girl's love letter. Frequently, the address is divided—one part at each end of the envelope. The translator has his say in the middle of the envelope, which adds to its picturesqueness.

Chinese reason that this system is more convenient and that it is the proper way. The first thing that the distributor in China looks at is the top line showing to what country the letter is directed. It shows "North America." He look no further, and throws the letter in the North America box. When the letter arrives at any point in North America the distributor looks at the second line, California, and in like manner throws it in the California box. When the letter reaches San Francisco, the clerk reads "Los Angeles," and he also sends it on its way. The interpreter in this city looks at the street number and then at the name of Wun Lung. These are "Englished," and placed in the box of the carrier for that section of Chinatown. The carrier first looks at the number, and when he arrives calls for Wun Lung.

The postage on a letter of an ounce or less, from the principal sea ports in China, is one sen, which is equal to six and a half cents.

Black-bordered, or mourning letters, as we know them, are not received in the Chinese quarter. The Chinese emblem of mourning is white.

The Chinese receive a great many newspapers, each one subscribes for the principal yellow journal of his native province, and also of his particular town, or locality. Some of these come tied with strings, the address being written, or brushed, on the margin, which stumps even the interpreter. But, similar instances are common among the "Melicans." The Chinese, however, are fast learning American customs, and are improving in their system of addressing letters.

BALLOON LAW NEEDED.

Two women were talking over their tea in a woman's club.

"This balloon fad is all right," said the first. "I see that George Bernard Shaw, Pinero, the Goulds, Harry Lehr, all sorts of celebrities, make occasional ascensions. But at the same time——"

She made a gesture of repudiation and horror.

"At the same time," said the other woman, "it's a risky business, eh? Well, that is the truth. My husband went up in a balloon last week, and I haven't spoken to him since. What right had he to risk his life like that? He has nothing saved, and we live at a $7500 rate. Suppose anything had happened to him, what would then become of me, with nothing in the world but a $15,000 insurance?"

"In Vienna," said the first woman, "they have a law that is needed here. No married Viennese male is allowed to go up in a balloon without the formal consent, before witnesses, of his wife. That is as it should be. I am positive, if the ballooning craze continues, that some such law will be adopted in America."

"It should be," said the second woman, "and if it is, it will bar my husband out, rest assured."

THE DEMAND OF LABOR.

It was formerly the custom of a paper mill in Massachusetts to pay the workers semi-monthly; and, the operatives having found the practice somewhat inconvenient from their standpoint, it was decided to send a delegate to the head of the firm to state their grievance. An Irishman, rather well known for his sagacity and persuasive powers, was selected for the task. He duly waited on the "boss," who said: "Well, Michael, what can I do for you?"

"If ye plase, sor," said Mike, "I've been sint as a dilligate by the workers to ask a favor of ye regardin' the paymint of our wages."

"What do they want?"

"Sor, it is the desire of mesilf an' of ivery other man in the establishmint that we resayve our semi-monthly pay every week."—[Lippincott's.

HIS MOST ACCURATE COUNTERFEIT.

The genial Mark Twain complains that he has a most surprising number of "doubles." Only the other day a gentleman wrote to him from Florida, saying that he had been taken so often for Mr. Clemens that he thought it a matter of duty to send his photograph to the real original.

The likeness, as shown by the picture, was certainly remarkable—so much so, indeed, that Mark sat down and wrote the following reply:

"My Dear Sir: I thank you very much for your letter and the photograph. In my opinion, you are certainly more like me than any other of my doubles. In fact, I am sure that if you stood before me in a mirrorless frame, I could shave by you."—[Lippincott's.

DAISIES AND WAR.

"There were no daisies in the South," said a Southerner, "till after the Civil War. Now we have daisies in profusion, and they are especially abundant in the regions visited by the Northern armies.

"Sherman's march to the sea can be traced in the summer by a broad white trail of daisies.

"How was the daisy seed brought South? Undoubtedly it came in the hay that was shipped from the North for the horses' fodder."

Good Short Stories.

BRIEF ANECDOTES GATHERED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

Compiled for The Times.

One on the Senate.

BART KENNEDY, the noted English novelist, told in New York a story about the Senate.

"I heard this story in Washington," said Mr. Kennedy, "and I have every reason to believe that it is true

"A Senator hurried into the Senate chamber one morning early, and said to a page:

"'Young man, did you find a $10-bill on my desk last evening? I wrote a letter, intending to inclose the bill, but somehow I failed to do so, and left it behind on the blotter."

"'Yes, Senator,' said the page, taking out his wallet, 'I did find that bill, and here it is. And it's a lucky thing for you, sir, that none of the other Senators happened in before I saw it.'"

Astronomy's Intricacies.

MISS DOROTHEA KLUMPKE, the famous astronomer, was talking about the difficulties and intricacies that astronomy presents to the lay mind.

"For instance," she said, smiling, "there is the well-known case of the meteorite that fell on a Vermont farm in 1896. It was a valuable meteorite, and the landlord at once stepped up and claimed it. 'All minerals and metals on the land belong to me,' he said. 'That's in the lease.'

"But the tenant demurred. 'This meteorite,' he said, 'wasn't on the farm, you must remember, when the lease was drawn up.'

"The landlord perceived the justice of that claim. He thought a moment. Then he said, decisively: 'I claim her as flying game.'

"But the tenant was ready for him. 'She's got neither wings nor feathers,' he said. 'Therefore, as ground game, she's mine.'

"They continued their argument, and in the heat of it a revenue officer, arriving with a truck, proceeded to put the meteorite aboard. 'I claim her for the government,' he said, 'as an article introduced into the country without payment of duty.'"

Fun for the Neighbors.

VIRGIL P. KLINE, the noted corporation lawyer of Cleveland, in an address upon "ambition" said:

"Ambition is an excellent thing. Without it the world would not progress. But there are worthy and unworthy ambitions, silly and wise, beneficent and maleficent ones. Then there are the peculiar, the distinctive ambitions, such as we see in childhood. Thus I once knew a little boy who had an ambition to be a letter carrier, and, finding in a cedar chest in the attic a great bundle of love letters that his mother had been preserving since the days of her courtship, he packed them in a leather school satchel and distributed them from house to house throughout the neighborhood."

The Mistaken Queen.

WRACKSHAW TODD, the English novelist, declared as a result of his recent American tour, that the English workingman was far better paid and far better treated than the American.

At a dinner given in his honor in New York, Mr. Todd was taken to task for that statement. But he defended it stoutly. He claimed that a dollar a day was better pay in England than a dollar and a half in America, for the reason that a dollar in his country would purchase nearly twice as much as in the United States.

"However," he said, "I may be mistaken. We are all liable to mistakes—even kings and queens. When I was working in the Manchester cotton millls, the Queen visited Manchester, and one thing she did was to go over a certain convent there. In every department she visited, the Sisters made profound curtsies. This annoyed the Queen, and she said reproachfully to her guide:

"'Ah, Mother, I thought I told you emphatically that I wished to be treated quite as an ordinary visitor. Why, then, is every one curtseying?'

"'Your wishes, madam, have been obeyed,' the mother replied. 'The reverence shown by the Sisters is not intended for you, their Queen, but for me, their superior.'"

Paying Politeness.

"POLITENESS," said Senator Gallinger, in the hope of stilling a rather acrimonious argument in Congress, "always pays." His flushed listeners looked up at him in inquiry, and he smiled and repeated:

"Politeness always pays. Two little girls I know were set before a plate containing two bunches of grapes—one a very large and tempting and perfect bunch, the other small and hard and green.

"The two little girls looked at the two bunches for a space in silence. Then the polite child said:

"'Is oo gweedy?'

"'No,' the other answered, 'I'se not a bit gweedy.'

"'Then,' said the first, 'oo choose.'"

A Rebuked Patient.

J. B. MARTIN of Tacoma owns a valuable mine in Alaska, the profits of which he has sworn to devote to the cause of total abstinence, even though these profits should reach $500,000 a year.

Talking the other day about total abstinence, Mr. Martin said:

"The drunkard is to my mind the most foolish man that exists in the world. He is the most foolish man, the most mistaken man. For, consider: The drunkard sacrifices everything in the world for—what? An hour's vague gaiety, to be followed by some twenty-four hours of racking headache and intolerable illness.

"He is foolish and mistaken. He reminds me of a patient of Dr. George Chester's.

"Dr. Chester, at 2 o'clock of a bitter winter morning, drove four miles to a patient's house. On his arrival, the patient said:

"'Doctor, I ain't in any particular pain, but, somehow or other, I feel that death is nigh.'

"Dr. Chester examined the man, felt his pulse, listened to his heart. Then he said:

"'Have you made your will?'

"The man's face fell, and he turned pale.

"'Why, no, doctor. At my age—there seemed time enough yet—oh, Doc, it ain't true, is it, that——"

"'Who is your lawyer?' Dr. Chester interrupted.

"'Higginbotham.'

"'Then you had better send for him at once,' said Chester curtly. 'Who's your pastor?'

"'The Rev. Kellogg M. Brown,' the patient answered in a low, tremulous voice. 'But, Doctor, do you think——'

"'Send for him,' said Chester, 'post haste. Your mother, too, should be summoned, also your——'.

"The patient began to blubber softly.

"'Say, Doctor, do you think I'm going to die for sure?' he wailed.

"Dr. Chester, looking at him hard, replied:

"'No, I don't. There's nothing at all the matter with you. But I hate to be the only man you've made a fool of tonight.'"

Why Scotsmen Wear Kilts.

A. J. DREXEL brings from his Scottish estate a story of a Highlander.

"There was a well-known American writer," he said at a dinner, "who automobiled through Scotland, and at a hotel in the Highlands was treated with the greatest incivility.

"Accordingly he complained to the manager.

"'And I complain in particular,' he said, 'about my waiter in the dining-room. The inattention and insolence of this man are insupportable.'

"The manager sought out the waiter, a raw-boned, red-haired Highlander.

"'Dugald,' he said, 'the American visitor accuses you of inattention and insolence. What have you to say?'

"'Dugald snorted and hotly replied:

"'It's no' to be expeckit that a self-respectin' Scot could wait on him wi' civeelity. Wasna it he that said we took to the kilt because our feet were too large to get through trousers?'"

A Complicated Matter.

TOWNSEND BURDEN was talking in Newport about his recent autumnal experiment of oiling the Newport roads—an experiment that though it promised well, failed because it ruined so many delicate toilets.

"Oiling the roads of Newport," said Mr. Burden, "was more complicated matter than we thought. There were so many things to take into consideration—white silk stockings, lace petticoats, suede shoes—yes, decidedly it was a complicated matter.

"It reminds me, in its wealth of complication, of the man with the cross-eyed dog.

"This man said to a friend:

"'A wonderful dog, that of mine.'

"'Is he? He doesn't look up to much,' the friend replied.

"'Well, now, for a test,' said the owner, 'you just grab me by the throat and say "Whoo!"'

"The other did so, and the dog at once sprang up and bit a piece out of his master's hand.

"'How do you account for that?" asked the friend, with a hearty laugh.

"'Why, hang it,' said the owner, as he grabbed his hat and hurried off to be cauterized, 'I forgot that he was cross-eyed. I ought to have put my hand on your shoulder and yelled.'"

Not Honorable Enough.

LADY WALROND, the wife of Gen. Sir William Walrond, M. P., described at a dinner party in Boston the life of a maid of honor.

"One of my friends," she said, "was a maid of honor to Queen Victoria. She spent a part of each winter at San Remo, where I have a villa, and one January afternoon at the Sports Club, as we were taking tea under an orange tree, a gentleman said to her:

"'How interesting your life at court must be! And what a delightful diary you must be able to keep!'

"'No,' said the maid of honor, 'that is impossible. The Queen makes it a condition that we keep no diaries while at court.'

"'Ah,' said the gentleman, laughing, 'I think I should keep a very secret one, all the same.'

"'Then', said my friend, with a grave smile, 'I am afraid you would not be a maid of honor.'"

A CUNNING little two-year-old came to dinner the other day.

Knew from Experience.

"I SAY," said a friend the other day, "you are an old hand at it. I have only just got married, and don't understand much about the business, but has a married man any rights left when he once assumes the hymeneal responsibilities?"

"Rights? Yes, lots! He 's a right to pay all the bills, to——"

"Stop! I mean this. Let me give you an instance. Every box and drawer and portmanteau, and, in fact, every available receptacle of every description, is stuffed full of my wife's property, and when I want to put away a few cuffs and collars——"

"Hold hard! I know what you mean. Listen, young man. If your bedroom were 200 yards long, and lined from the floor to the ceiling with drawers, and you wanted a place to stow away a couple of collars, you couldn't find a nook that wasn't full of hairpins, tufts of frizzes, pads, scent boxes, old gloves, powder puffs, rings and things. So just accept the inevitable. Wrap your personal property in an old newspaper or some brown paper, and hide the parcel under the bed."

The inquirer smiled loudly and ironically, and passed on, a wiser, if not a better man.—[Tit-Bits.

How the Vixen Was Named.

THE Vixen, like the Gloucester, was bought for the Spanish War. How she got her present name is a favorite navy story. Commander Alexander Sharp, Jr., now of the cruiser Chattanooga, was naval aid to Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, at the outbreak of the Spanish War, and he applied for the command of a vessel. He was then only a lieutenant, and was not entitled to a large ship. John D. Long, Secretary of the Navy, decided to assign him to command the Josephine.

"Mr. Secretary," said Sharp, "my wife's name is Josephine, and I wish you would change the name of the yacht I am to command."

"And what does Mrs. Sharp say?" asked Mr. Long.

"She said," answered Sharp, "that if you kept the name, it would be the only Josephine I ever commanded."

"Ah," said the Secretary of the Navy "I shall change the vessel's name to the Vixen." And the Vixen it became.

Misinterpreted.

The story in a nutshell is this: Capt. [illegible] man, another of Gen. Funston's aids, had wired, overexplicitly, to the quartermaster's department: "Send wagons to meet horses and two humans." The department accepted the last words literally and sent over an undertaker to meet the very-much alive [illegible] and his gallant aid.—[Washington Post.

Buying a Bottle for Baby.

A NEW, inexperienced father, sent to purchase supplies for a baby, is apt to be handicapped in the open market. On the other hand, he may prove unexpectedly terse and comprehensive.

"I want a milk bottle for a baby," began a [illegible] addressing a drug clerk.

"How large?" demanded the clerk.

"Fifteen pounds," replied the father proudly.

A drug clerk would hardly neglect this opportunity to emphasize his superiority over a customer in [illegible] knowledge.

"The bottle you specify is very nearly a carboy," [illegible] observed, facetiously. "You probably referred to the baby, whereas I referred to the capacity of the bottle."

"This bottle," explained the father, quickly, "[illegible] be large enough to fill one baby or about a baby and a half."—[Unidentified.

LAND ANIMALS INHABITING THE CHANNEL ISLANDS.

I.—SNAKES.

PERHAPS it is no more strange that San Clemente and San Nicolas Islands are free from the presence of snakes than that snakes are common upon Santa Catalina Island; yet there is no greater relief (and a peculiar one it is, too) than to take the long and difficult trails over San Clemente amid the ever bristling [illegible] of three different species which beset the way; besides the rough volcanic rocks in whose crevices the [illegible] are caught at every step; yet however great the heat of the day, or obscure the trail even amid undergrowth, you need give no thought to the snake nor do you have to pause and listen for its rattle.

On Catalina, after the first of April, it is absolutely essential to your "future existence" to learn what sort of sound the rattle of the snake is and to be ready to jump when hearing it, without pausing so long as even to look for it.

The rattlesnake is not "quarrelsome," and it does not strike unless you are alarmingly near, and when it rattles, it is a sign it is ready to protect itself. All you have to do is instantly to change your location, and you do not need to choose an exact site, because there are always four points to the compass, and the snake does not care which one you take—its rattle is merely [illegible] bell, and tells you you must move on, for you are not in the right place at the present time.

[illegible] people who do not see snakes upon Catalina do not believe that there are any here; of course "seeing is believing." There are doubtless "several," but not "many," for you may tramp and live outdoors from April to November, and will not come across more than [illegible], and perhaps not half that many.

During those months it is very foolish to sit down upon a rock without first striking boldly with a stick upon it, or when resting near an undergrowth, it is always wiser to "beat the bush" before sitting down.

Rattlesnakes are easily roused in warm weather; on a narrow trail, toward dusk, by merely keeping your stick well in advance and tapping it along the trail, you may be sure the way is kept clear for your feet.

[illegible] was thought by many people to be very lucky, but those who knew him best said "he had that sort of 'luck' which comes to the best player." The Indians believed that Kit Carson held a charmed life because they never had been able to hit him with one of their arrows; but it is a fact that when the nights were cold and a camp fire was a luxury and all the other men would be lounging beside it, Kit Carson only came up to get a coal for his pipe, and then went and drew a blanket around his shoulders in the deep shadows of the background; it was his caution alone which gave him his singularly unharmed existence in the midst of imminent dangers and never-ceasing perils.

It is well to kill a rattlesnake whenever you can, and the simple way of stoning them to death is better than the modern style of the brave young man who stamps on [illegible] with the heel of his new tramping boot, because on [illegible] such occasion the snake bit through the leather and hit its mark, although probably the poison was [illegible] by the boot itself, as the foot was not punctured. This is one reason why even tender feet should [illegible] in heavy boots when going forth upon a summer stroll.

When the Santa Ana winds have passed, in October, and the cool fogs begin to drift along the coast in November, the snakes crawl away under the rocks and beneath old logs, and coil themselves up to sleep until the coming of warm weather again. For even large ones—large as a man's arm—will be seen in winter occasionally, coiled and no more to be roused than stone; but sooner or later according to the temperature of the spring, they waken and begin once more [illegible]; and ever after, even when amid the [illegible] of blossoms, you must not forget—there are [illegible]!

[illegible] when gathering violets, a sudden rattle brought [illegible] an involuntary leap from the spot, and when [illegible] looked back, there was coiled, just where [illegible] violet had been taken, a small rattlesnake not more than a foot in length, with its little forked tongue rapidly drawn in and then thrust out again from [illegible] mouth; an ordinary boulder crushed it easily, [illegible] from above.

Again the tapping of the stock in advance at dusk, [illegible] a narrow trail, was rewarded by an unusually [illegible] and thrilling rattle, evidently from a bush at one [illegible]. This rattle was repeated interruptedly from ten [illegible] minutes; finally it was deemed wiser to "go [illegible]," and give up the trail, as most certainly the big [illegible] thereon ensconced did not propose to go away, and yet he was willing to give you a fair warning of what would happen if you persisted in your course.

[illegible] a trail in the dark a large snake lay coiled and [illegible] stepped on by John Sullivan, some years ago; the [illegible] quickly recovered itself, recoiled and rattled [illegible] in time to save the next tramp, who was rushing [illegible] his fate.

You will frequently come across snakes when running [illegible] trails upon a rocky ledge which terminates in an [illegible] below, where the warmth of the enclosed region [illegible] the snakes to sun themselves. If you are in a [illegible], you do not pause to recall that this is a good [illegible] snakes! Perhaps at the very last step, as [illegible] your feet and the crumbling edge roll down together—whirr! the alarm of the rattler goes, and a leap which would do credit to a gymnast lands you, the next instant, upon the opposite side of the arroyo, while you peer forth and see the creature slipping under the sheltering edge of a boulder and then coiling again, his forked tongue shooting, like flashes of black lightning, in and out of his extended jaws.

You may go near him, for he will not move unless you are within striking distance; you may even take a time exposure if you have your kodak, for only the forked tongue continues to work as if automatic. The tail quivers, with the rattle erect at the rear, and that portion of the body near the head is held upright from the coils and seems to support the head, whose poise is horizontal. Some snakes seem to hold their heads higher than others, just as probably some people are more "stuck up" than others. The eyes are tiny and black and glittering, and seem to be without expression. You feel they are fires of evil, which, volcano-like, may stir in their hidden deeps and erupt, engulfing you in an awful fate; but all this, you know, is purely prejudice.

The snake is afraid of you, just as you are afraid of it; and you are a giant which may tread it to death or at least an enemy, and it is driven to follow its instinct—self-preservation, which, indeed, we all do follow from birth to death. Sometimes, on a hot day, you will come across a snake lying fast asleep in the shadows from a dense undergrowth. This is the time and place to get a picture of a snake at rest, you think; and so you break the tender twigs which grow in the way, between your hands in a sort of silenced crush, and do not hear so much as a leaf fall which you have disturbed. You open the instrument, throw the shutter and set the time, and peer into the gloaming at the dark, beautifully-scaled creature—but do your eyes deceive you, or has the solid ground begun to sway and move in earthquake fashion once again—for the coiled form is surely not uncoiling, yet it seems to be sliding and slipping away into denser shadows as if it were itself but a deeper shade. At last the place where it lay is void of coils. You close your kodak and perhaps, without reluctance, go forth to brighter trails.

A camper's blankets should always be thrown open and shaken up just before he "turns in," because—well,, it is wiser.

Yet there is such a thing as too great alertness because of snakes. It is not well to hear the rattle in every passing breeze. Capt. Remington, many years ago, one sunny morning, stood in the little "windbreak" of John Sullivan's cabin at the Isthmus, and with gun levelled, called out as John approached, "Look out! Wait a bit—I'm just going to shoot the rattler in under the bench there! Hear that now!" and as John Sullivan listened, he drew near and began to laugh, and put his hand fearlessly in under the bench and brought out a two-quart Mason jar in which the white bubbles of yeast were foaming, and escaping gas made a sound more or less like a "rattle."

In the "Big Corral" on the south coast, rattlesnakes are exceptionally common, and "once upon a time" even after the vaqueros had been all day long clearing the cacti and building a brush fence and setting up camp, the snakes still came along; it appeared impossible to get rid of them. It was evidently a favorite haunt; a warm and sheltered flat in which cacti thrives. One morning Capt. Whitley, rousing from his night's rest, found under his pillow a coiled rattlesnake! The tall and stately man was seen to tramp up and down the camp for a few minutes, pulling his mustache vigorously and shrugging his shoulders.

Perhaps the most peculiar place in which a rattlesnake was ever seen was upon the wet sand of a low tide, at the very edge of the waves. A friend, walking that way, thought, in the gloaming, it was a curious bird's nest cast up by the sea, and her hand, about to pick it up, was arrested by the cry of the little girl whose eyes were sharper: "It's a snake—a rattlesnake!" In the half light, the silvery scales on the dark skin of the snake produced a mottled effect, and the coiled form simulated bound twigs; but sure enough, the forked tongue was darting in and out the open jaws, and the ominous rattle waving on the uplifted tail; but the sound was lost in that of the sea.

The damp edges of the low tide are not a resort of the rattlesnake, however, and this one, without doubt, had just been driven thither in distraction; a driftwood fire was being built in the lee of a large boulder up on the shore, and the snake had evidently glided from there toward the sea, not having taken his bearings.

Thick tramping boots and leggings are the best preventives, because it is in sudden turns on the trail, where there is no opportunity to escape, that the real danger lies.

It is now very generally understood that all surgeons and those who are more or less exposed to the bite of the rattlesnake carry a reputed medicinal remedy to be administered at once by needle. A decoction of the leaves of the Grindelia is an old-fashioned remedy for rattlesnake poisoning commonly known as the "Gun Plant." Probably there is nothing better, when no remedy is at hand, than to cauterize with live coals and tie a bandage near the wound, so as to prevent the circulation of the poison through the entire system at once. The Indians who engage in the well-known snake dances are said to have a remedy which they make for themselves from the leaves of a mysterious plant; their secret is skillfully guarded from white men.

The rattlesnakes upon the island of Catalina are small compared with those upon the mainland. In the San Jacinto Mountains they are often six feet long, while three feet long is considered a large size for a snake on the island. The snakes do not seem to be able to rattle unless the tail is erect, and they do not strike unless coiled, under ordinary circumstances; although when pinned down under a rock in the middle they are then seen to strike out in all directions as far as they can reach. They never spring or jump, but throw their bodies from the tail to its full length when coiled, and when uncoiled, coil again at once. The poison is contained in a sac back of the fang, into the hollow tube of which it can be thrown at will.

The snakes are beautifully bediamonded in silvery-gray scales, and their rattles are the color and consistency of horn and are articulated and curiously flattened. Twelve or thirteen is a large number for a Catalina snake to possess. There is a little snake with a red ventral stripe which is harmless; it is about a foot long, but another little snake, bright red, was said by Capt. Whitley to be as deadly in its bite as an asp. He used often to see them, but no one ever hears of seeing one nowadays.

The question of how the snakes came here in the first place is an interesting one. Why is it not quite as peculiar for San Clemente Island to have no snakes as for Catalina to have them? Did they migrate? Were they brought hither in driftwood?

A gentleman once said he had the day before (all at once!) concluded how snakes came to be on the island. The Indians, of course, brought them here to use their poison for arrows. As this is sound reasoning, perhaps "it settles the case." Yet—alas! It leaves the poor Indians upon San Clemente to have to borrow poison from Catalina. It would then seem that Catalina had a monopoly of the snakes as well as of serpentine and soapstone pots to barter with its neighbors, besides a vein of flint from which arrowheads were made.

IN PEACE SECURE.

I will build me a cot on the mountainside,
  Away from the toiling town,
Where the sunbeams lure, and the air is pure,
  And the winds come sweeping down;
Where the much-loved birds in their leaf-roofed halls
  Will herald my mornings in;
And my days shall be and my nights shall be
  As a world that has no sin;
Where this life's fierce cares and its wild unrest
  Cannot reach my sun-garbed day;
And the whole of my time shall be the rhyme
  And the theme of an artless lay.

I will poise me a cot on the mountain's brow,
  Where the eagle whirls his flight,
Above the vale, with its gentling tale
  Of a life that is lived for right;
Where the joys of sublimity linger around,
  Giving rest to the overcrushed soul—
As the drooping lark sings, on its low-lying wings
  Ere it runs to its coveted goal;
Where the heat of ambition, the glitter of shows,
  The falsehood of friendship or love,
There forever must cease to ruffle my peace,
  Or darken my pathway above.

THE CREATION OF MAN.

Every intelligent man is a marvel to himself. The centuries past have been spent in trying to answer the question, "What is man?" I really know little of myself, and know less of you.—[Rev. Warren F. Day, D. D., in an address on "The Creation of Man," at Pasadena.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

TAKE TIME BY FORELOCK.

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES BEFORE WINTER SETS IN.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IT will soon be cooler, and the newly-feathered wings will become ambitious. Soon it will be judicious to watch the fowls go to bed, and see that none roost in trees. If any resist your precautions, and insist upon roosting in the trees, their wings must be cut. One gets hints of the wild and of freedom at seeing beautiful birds roosting in trees, and during the summer may indulge them, but as the rainy season approaches, a fancier's birds must be made to like captive conditions. Clipping the wings adapts them to the conditions. The show birds must be put into a pen by themselves, and where there are no trees, or be carried to the house roost each night and confined. Their wings must not be clipped, of course. When all the day is rainy, hens will voluntarily roost in the house, but if a rain comes on after they have taken flight into a tree, and it is dark, they will sit and take the rain all night. Many a fowl has not minded a night out in the rain, but many have taken the death potion. If one part of the body is not well covered, the rain will get into the skin and course all around, as it will do on a roof where a small leak exists in the shingles. One does not know his fowls with the new feathers perhaps, and to avoid all risk insist upon nice captivity according to your best judgment.

It is interesting to ask advice of experienced breeders concerning the cutting of wings. As a novice, I asked a man, who must have had the best of sense, but must have had a different breed of chickens from mine. He told me to cut the flight feathers of only one wing, and explained in a matter-of-fact way that if one wing were cut, the bird could not fly because of lack of balance. His birds did not fly, but mine did. I had a six-foot wire run about my birds and he a four-foot. Another breeder told me I had freak birds and must cut both wings. My bantams flew like pigeons with only one wing cut, and heavy Dorkings would roost ten feet high in a tree with only one wing cut. I thought it must be I did not know how to cut the wing scientifically, but after noting the advice of many, concluded with the advice of a veteran whose birds did not fly. That the specimens of the same breed do not accept the cutting of one wing alike. One who has been flying, finding one wing disabled may give up trying to fly; that the light birds give up more easily, being more nervous and more susceptible and suspicious of change; that the cutting of one wing really does not change the balance perceptibly, and that robust specimens can fly, if they wish to, with one wing, and quite probably will not give up flying; that the more petted one's birds are the more faith they have in themselves, in everything and everybody; that the birds, from whom fear has been guarded, who eat out of one's hand, and can be happily handled, are almost sure to fly with one full-feathered wing.

A fellow breeder who cuts the wings most artistically advises: Take the hen carefully into the lap and, holding her firmly with the left arm, with the left hand spread the wing out flat and cut carefully with the right hand and a pair of sharp shears, every other feather of the wing, being careful not to cut them too short, but short enough to prevent them from making a flight wing. A little experience will tell one the best length. When the wings are folded the cut feathers will not show. There are a few birds who will fly with these feathers off; with such cut-off a few more feathers in each wing, so the wing cannot ride the air at all. This latter kind of bird is extremely interesting; generally lay eggs with equal persistence, defy skunks and dogs and cats in the rearing of young, and moult with decision, being in business nearly the entire year.

A New Bug on the Hen.

Mrs. Dr. Reed of Covina writes to this department as follows describing a couple of injurious insects on poultry which are new to the writer. Possibly some of our readers can throw some light on these new bugs infesting the American business hen. If so, we would be pleased to hear from them:

"The past week I have noticed on a neighbor's chickens two distinct varieties of parasites entirely new to me, which gather on the fowl in colonies and cling to the flesh with a tenacity making it almost impossible to pull them off. One resembles a tick about the size of a pinhead which fastens itself to the body in great clusters, which burrow into the flesh and sap the vitality of the bird. The usual precautionary measures have been observed, viz., to cleanse the chicken-houses, spade up the yards, to apply the ordinary lice remedies, nevertheless the affected fowls grew weaker and finally three of the birds died. After cleaning one of the houses and spading up the yard a number of incubator-hatched chicks were placed therein, which after three days were also found to be infested with these ticks. Investigation revealed the fact that about a year previous to this time a former resident in the place bought some chickens from a peddler all of which died from the ravages of these ticks. The house has since been burned and the ground fired over. Now will you tell me what sort of a bug this is, and how we are to get rid of it?

"The other pest is a very small flea which attacks the neck, and encircles the eye for from a half to three-quarters of an inch, making a great brown circle. It is difficult to remove or scrape them off with the dull edge of a knife. They burrow into the flesh in such numbers that it is impossible to place even a pin between the mass without sticking into them. They do not seem to be fatal to the fowl, but goodness knows they are bad enough in spite of that fact. Will you kindly tell me what they are, and what I can use to get rid of them on my birds?"

This is "up to us" good and pretty. We confess that we do not know the bugs, though having heard of similar cases from one or two other breeders. Can any of our readers give us any light on this vexed question as well as on the life history and habits of the pestiferous bugs? If so, will they kindly furnish The Times readers the desired information?

Learn to Know Your Birds.

In this age of low-priced class literature treating on almost every phase of an enlightened poultry culture, there is every reason why breeders should know their stock, and no reason whatsoever why they should not. Especially is this true if catering to the market for pure-blooded stock or for honors in the competitive classes in the showroom. The late edition of the American Standard of Perfection is so complete in its descriptions of the defects of fowl subject to "cut" discounts, and also all the disqualifying classes no breeder can go wrong in judging the value stock, provided he will study his standard with any intelligence at all. The price of the book is $1.50, and is to be had at any of the poultry-supply houses.

To none does this advice appeal more strongly to the breeder or fancier who contemplates entering showroom, as it will readily show him the disqualifications possessed by the poorer specimens in his and also those which are liable to discount on of some one or more imperfections in the several tions of the bird. A good way to learn along intelligent lines is to score the birds, a thing which be done with a little practice with a copy of the Standard in hand. The description of each breed or class preceded by what is termed a scale of points, and under the specific description of each breed is given particular disqualifications and discounts applying If breeders will but study their birds they will be prised how soon the eye and mind will grasp the points of a good bird. Try it.

Six Judges to Place Awards Next January.

Breeders and fanciers will be gratified to learn the Los Angeles County Poultry Association has singularly fortunate in securing a bevy of judges lated to call out one of the largest exhibits ever bled under one roof in Southern California. The Care of Goldfish.

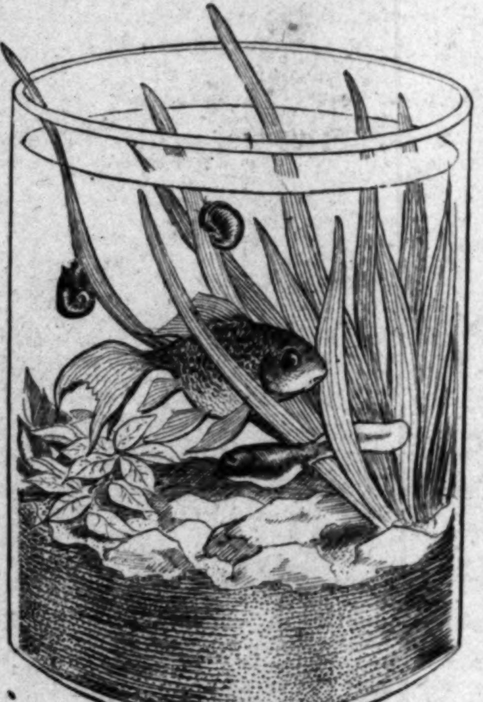
SUGGESTIONS FROM AN EXPERT ON THE SUBJECT.

By a Special Contributor.

IN every city of considerable size in the United States, hundreds of goldfish are annually sold. Most of the sales take place during the holidays, as several goldfish in an aquarium make an attractive and acceptable gift. It is safe to state that at least 90 per cent. of these fish die within a few days or weeks after they are purchased; but in justice to the dealers and the fish themselves, it is only fair to say that this enormous mortality is in nearly all cases due to ignorance or carelessness on the part of those who are supposed to look after the welfare of the finny pets.

It is a common belief that a glass globe of water, a fish or two and a box of prepared fish food constitute an aquarium—a species of live machinery that will, by adding daily a liberal supply of food and a frequent change of water, continue to maintain itself indefinitely. As a matter of fact, fish are, with the exception of a few of the lower forms, the most sensitive and delicate of all animals. Aside from the problem of maintaining the proper aëration of water, there are the added questions of temperature, proper food supply and cleanliness.

Most fishes are extremely sensitive to any considerable variations of temperature, especially if such changes are at all sudden. The effect of sudden or largely varying temperatures may not at the time be noticeable, but they are nevertheless present. It should not be understood by this that even one species of fish cannot thrive in vastly varying degrees of temperature; for I have known of some goldfish that did remarkably well in hot-house pools or ponds while even in the East their relatives lived all winter in ice-frozen ponds. There are, however, fish which will succumb to even a few degrees of variation, and no fish should be made to suffer any sudden change in this respect. It is a safe working basis to maintain as nearly as possible an even temperature of water. Fortunately, the common goldfish is so largely a domesticated animal that, like a chicken, he can more readily adapt himself to varying conditions than some sea-roaming or mountain stream-lurking relatives.



AQUARIUM MADE FROM AN ORDINARY BATTERY JAR, AND CONTAINING FANTAIL GOLD FISH, AQUATIC OXYGEN-PRODUCING PLANTS AND SCAVENGERS IN THE FORM OF TWO WATER SNAILS AND A TADPOLE.

Unless proper means of aëration are provided, it does not require a great while for a fish to consume all the available oxygen in a fair-sized vessel of water. It is, however, easily possible to so arrange even as small an aquarium as a common battery jar that it will maintain a goldfish comfortably without any change of water being necessary. My own aquarium outfit is of that type, and it is surprising to learn what a deal of pleasure may be derived from devising a miniature bit of nature wherein the animal and plant life is so nicely balanced as to result in a happy and thrifty little community of plants and animals. For scavengers I have a couple of water snails and a tadpole. The oxygen producers are two aquatic plants, one of them the result of years of effort on the part of an Eastern biologist to produce, by crossing, a better oxygenator than the parent stock. In this bit of glass-lined zoölogical park our fine little fan-tailed native of the orient swims about in golden splendor.

Improper food or absolute lack of any proper diet is responsible for the death of many a fine fish, although overfeeding is perhaps the most common form of death prescribed for their pets by overindulgent owners. Once a day, or twice at most, is often enough to feed a captive fish and even then the food should not be dealt out with a prodigal hand. The fish should be fed only as much as it will devour readily, and to leave any to decay is almost as fatal as distributing a few grains of swift poison in the aquarium, for it breeds fungus, the most deadly enemy of fish and the bane and dread of all aquarium-keepers. The managers of large aquariums throughout the country are constantly waging a never-ending war against the disease known as fungus; but it is continually at work, picking off fine specimens here and there, killing some speedily and subjecting others to disfiguration and a lingering death. It is as fatal as roup in a flock of poultry. Absolute cleanliness is its worst enemy. Along with this cleanliness, a fish should be so fed as to be kept strong and active, and great care should be taken against breaking any scales from its body or in any manner breaking its skin or fins, as the fungus is a plant which springs from a spore floating in the water; this eagerly attacks any bruised or broken region of the fish and immediately takes root, destroying the tissues and eating away like a cancer. Its ravages can be most readily detected on the fins, especially the tail, which in most specimens can be noticed in a frayed and half-destroyed condition. It is a well-nigh incurable disease, although there are some experts who claim that it can be treated successfully. My own experience is that if the fish be treated the very moment the first symptoms of disease are discovered, a cure may in most cases be effected, but even a slight delay is almost always fatal. It is at all times best to remove the ailing fish from its fellows.

In order to keep even a small aquarium clean, it is advisable to have on hand a few feet of small rubber tubing to be used as a siphon for removing excrement and particles of waste which gather on the bottom of the receptacle. Some sand in which the plants are rooted may also go out during the siphoning process, but it is easily replaced.

Live fish should not be handled directly, but transferred from one aquarium to another by means of a small dip net, which is, by the way, a handy thing to have always near the aquarium.

Do not let your aquarium stand in too bright a light, for if it does, you are very apt to be kept busy removing the little green plant that will cover the sides of the glass and so obstruct a clear view of the interior. Water snails will keep down a fairly active growth of this little plant, which, although harmless, does not add to the beauty or attractiveness of a small aquarium. The plant and animal life are so nicely balanced in my own little fish pond that it never becomes necessary to add fresh water except to offset the decrease due to evaporation and the usual siphoning out of waste product.

San Francisco has for years been the distributing point for the fancy and fine-bred goldfish of Japan. From San Francisco they have been shipped to all parts of the United States. It is at present a difficult matter to secure, at least in the West, any very choice lot of the Japanese fringetails, fantails or other variations of the wonderfully handsome little fellows with long gauze-like fins and tails. There are here and there a few rather heavy cross-bred specimens, and perhaps an adequate supply of the plain variety, but the fancier who has even a very few of the nobles among goldfish is fortunate. Recently in the grounds of a well-known hotel in Riverside, among a small colony of plain goldfishes, I came across a gold and black-mottled fellow that has a magnificently well-developed caudal fin or tail. Although perfectly plain and straight, that tail is a wonder, and I wish an equally festive-looking goldfish were a companion to my solitary beauty.

Another beautiful aquarium specimen which can be kept in a small enclosure in the Paradise fish. It is, however, a pugnacious little individual and very frequently develops a vicious habit of picking out its neighbor's eyes, a practice which does not readily lend itself to kindly relationships between closely-confined specimens of this fish. The most interesting habit of the Paradise Fish is its nest construction. This consists of a bunch of tiny air bubbles floating on the surface and held together by a gelatinous fluid. Inside or beneath this floating capsule, the eggs are deposited and there hatch. The Paradise fish is a beautiful creature, and the breeding male is well worthy of the admiration which his brilliant color is sure to call forth.

Another, not very widely-known, specimen, which with proper care does well in the small aquarium is what is commonly known as the "top minnow." This is a tiny fish, but an active, carnivorous fellow. Recently a shipment of them was taken from the south central part of the United States and, accompanied by attendant, transplanted to Hawaiian waters for the purpose of destroying mosquito larvae. Late reports state that they are propagating rapidly and attacking the larvae in their usual aggressive fashion.

There is only one way to learn about fish, and that is by study. If you are so fortunate as to have any for pets, remember that as captives and dependents they are at least entitled to your thoughtful care and attention.

GEORGE B. CULVER.

"POOR LITTLE KID."

Apparently, Susy was born with humane feelings for the animals, and compassion for their troubles. This enabled her to see a new point in an old story, once, when she was only six years old—a point which had been overlooked by older, and perhaps duller, people for many ages. Her mother told her the moving story of the sale of Joseph by his brethren, the staining of his coat with the blood of the slaughtered kid, and the rest of it. She dwelt upon the inhumanity of the brothers; their cruelty toward their helpless young brother; and the unbrotherly treachery which they practised upon him; for she hoped to teach the child a lesson in gentle pity and mercifulness which she would remember. Apparently, her desire was accomplished, for the tears came into Susy's eyes and she was deeply moved. Then she said:

FIELD NOTES.

Unanswered Queries.

I HAVE three letters upon farm topics requiring answers by mail, the writers of which forget to give name and address. One is regarding the address of a grower of thoroughbred stock, another on dairy cattle diseases, and the third relating to nursery stock. A little forethought in this matter, would bring replies, bulletins and other information, but the postmark upon the envelope is not a very clear indication of the location of a writer unless one is a mind-reader. If practicable, in referring to these notes please give date of magazine in which they have appeared, as files are always at hand.

Superior Figs.

S. H. TAFT, the fig and grape specialist of Sawtelle has been sending out some excellent specimens of the Kadota fig this fall, and has favored the Chamber of Commerce exhibit with samples of this fine fig. I do not know of a variety nearly so delicious as the Kadota. It is a good producer, vigorous and easily grown, the fruit never souring on the tree—a fault of no mean proportion among the white figs of Southern California. There are some very poor dried figs upon the markets of Los Angeles this season, as well as those of splendid quality, and one is obliged to buy upon the brand to secure even tolerable fruit. If growers would be more particular in the varieties they plant, figs would become very much more popular and profitable. The Taft fig is the best I have seen and worthy a trial by every one who wishes the fresh fruit in his garden.

Spraying Time.

THOSE who have young deciduous orchards troubled with San Jose scale should spray their trees about the last week of October, or as soon as the leaves are off the trees. Use six pounds of potash to 100 gallons of water, with care that all parts of the trees are reached. The female scale now upon the orchards will soon die, leaving the impression that the scale has disappeared. It is not so, however, for they leave a gravid progeny to winter over and begin propagating next season. If this method of treatment is followed and the trees are given a spraying in the spring with lime—sulphur—salt the scale may be subdued. It is a fact that the San Jose scale is being parasitized to a controlling degree in the older orchards, but the time has not arrived when entire dependance can be placed in the work of beneficial insects upon the prenicious scale.

State Convention.

THE fruit growers of the State will hold their annual meeting at Hanford, December 4th to 7th inclusive, the Secretary of the State Horticultural Commission having announced the place and date in the usual way. The programme for this meeting will cover all the important topics of fruit growing possible and especially those relating to cultivation, marketing, raisin-growing, wine making and tree propagation. The agricultural industries and commercial developments of Hanford will prove a drawing card, the railroads will give the usual one and one-third fare and the people of this new section will do the entertaining in good style. Arrangements have been made with the hotels of Hanford for greatly reduced rates. Very many questions of vital importance to all concerned in the fruit industry will come up for discussion at this convention and it will be a season of profit to all who attend.

Destructive Moles.

G. B. S., of San Gabriel writes that the common mole is so prevalent in some of the yards that a lawn is becoming impossible. It will be news to many readers that the mole is found in California, as there are extensive sections where none have ever been seen. "We have tried drowning them with hose, poison, traps and smothering with carbon bisulphid, and all without results. Each morning discloses a new section of the lawn torn up, and you will confer a great favor if you will suggest a remedy for the evil." Trapping with a spear trap is successful in Illinois. Submerging a large tin can partly filled with water, at a broken place in the run-way is recommended. Perhaps the gentleman used poisoned vegetables when poisoned meat should have been tried, as moles are carnivorous, or at least insectiovorous in their diet. Fortunately moles are not generally distributed in California on account of the scarcity of insect food in the soil. This is the first time I have heard complaint of the depredations of this animal, here, though it is a bad pest in the regions of the middle west. If any one of the readers of The Times have had experience in exterminating moles I am sure we shall hear from him.

Typhoid Fever.

ON THE authority of Dr. L. O. Howard, typhoid fever is pronounced, specifically, a disease of the farm and small village. While it is true that this disease prevails to some extent in the cities, the attacks have often been traced to contaminated milk, the return of the people in the autumn from less sanitary districts and other causes clearly traceable to rural sources. In case, however, the city's water supply becomes infected at its source with fever germs there is no escape from an infection that sometimes discounts any scourge of similar character in the rural districts. In the country immunity depends upon the efforts of the individual householder; in the city, upon the work of the health office which in all well-regulated cities is usually most efficient.

Intelligent farmers are rapidly lessening the liability of typhoid by the adoption of hygienic methods, by screening windows and doors and by looking after all the conditions that may, if neglected lead to an outbreak of this disease. Dr. Howard places especial emphasis upon the liability of the common house fly to distribute the germs of this fever, charging the outside box-closet as the principal agent through which the flies gather and then scatter contamination. This can be remedied by deep, dark vaults, the use of chloride of lime and the extermination of the fly. Los Angeles city has taken measures to lessen the danger of fruit infection from flies by requiring the fruit boxes to be covered with netting. This measure is not strictly observed, but consumers may assist in its observance by refusing to purchase from fruit merchants who do not observe this common sense protection. While statistics show that the average supply of well water, especially from shallow sources is more impure than that of large streams and city conduits, those who use water from the "dead ends" of city pipe lines should beware of typhoid, as we have several cases of infection from this source now in the city.

Nature's Fair Adjustment.

THOSE who have had to do with fighting the black scale in Southern California all these years and have given the matter careful study are giving the latest parasite credit for immense assistance, yet in a way scarcely thought of by the introducers of the so-called African fly. The scutellista has not assumed control of the scale as so fondly hoped by the growers. But it has cut off the straggling broods of scale and bunched the development into narrower seasonal bounds. This gives the fumigator a much clearer field, with an even hatch and an even growth of the pests in their development. With the perfection of artificial methods of insect control and the natural taste of the parasites we may be able to play one force against another with final success, like a new method of mosquito control, said to be in effect in some portions of the country.

A visiting friend was spending the night with the colonel, who lived in the lower swampy reaches of the Mississippi River. The insect pests were exceedingly bad there last summer and the visitor suffered severely because there were no mosquito nettings over his bed, and the next morning asked Sam, the colored bodyguard of the master of the house, how it was that the latter could manage to exist amid the pernicious activity of the mosquitoes. "It's des lak dis, boss," answered Sam, "In de fo' part uf de night de Colonel's so drunk dat he don't pay no attention to de skeeters, an' in de last part uf de night de skeeters is so drunk dat they don't pay no attention to de Colonel."

Powell Investigation Continues.

IN THE study of citrus fruit transportation the Department of Agriculture proposes to follow up the work of the past two years by continuing Mr. G. Harold Powell in the field till the investigations have been thoroughly concluded. I have just received a letter from Mr. Powell, in which he promises to be on hand at the proper time to resume the work. It is not flattery to say that he and his associates have made a fine record in this field, literally rolling up their sleeves and doing things that have counted far toward permanent improvements in our methods of handling citrus fruits. One may readily see, from the work of this band of investigators, why the farmers are becoming so enthusiastic toward their department of the United States government. The specialists which constitute the group of investigators under Mr. Powell undoubtedly are the ablest to be found anywhere in this line of work. Mr. Powell writes as follow:

"I have meant to drop you a line for some little time to say that we are making provision for a considerable extension of our citrus fruit transportation investigations the coming year. We have added three able specialists to our staff, one, Mr. H. J. Eustace, a pathologist from New York State Experiment Station, who is an expert on the development of the diseases that attack fruits in storage or in transit, Mr. G. W. Hosford, who was connected with the Cornell University faculty, and Mr. S. J. Dennis of the Leland Stanford faculty, a mechanical engineer, who will look after certain technical phases of the transportation and storage work. During the coming season we shall check up all of the work of the last two years, and shall extend it into several new fields, which I will be glad to discuss with you on reaching California sometime during the winter. I thought possibly your readers might be interested in knowing something of the personnel of the new men connected with our work. Our staff for the study of transportation and storage now consists of Prof. A. V. Stubenrauch, Mr. L. S. Tenny, Mr. H. M. White, in addition to the men that we have named."

Denatured Alcohol.

E. W. WAGNER has issued an interesting pamphlet in which he takes the ground that denatured alcohol will put corn up to $2 a bushel and corn land up to $300 to $500 per acre. He says:

"Corn is the greatest, readiest and best producer of alcohol in the world. Alcohol is the best and cheapest available source of light, heat and motive power in the world. Light, heat and motive power are the three agents closest allied to civilization, development and advancement of the industrial world and the comfortable existence of mankind. Those who consider this [illegible] will laugh; those who think it not true should sell the corn crop of 1906 short; but the farmer who disposes of his corn below 40 cents at home is throwing away money."

Englishmen and Apples.

THERE is a good demand in Europe for apples, and those from America are most sought. Boxes are the preferred packages. But the demand is for different kinds in different markets, so it is well for the prospective shipper to know his market. Liverpool and Glasgow require large red apples like Kings and large sized Baldwins. London demands medium sized apples and will pay more for these than for larger ones. Liverpool pays the highest price of any place for Newtown Pippins, last winter paying as high as $16 per barrel. But these must be genuine Newtowns, and not the imitation that some dishonest shippers have tried unsuccessfully to impose on them. France pays the highest prices for Roxbury Russets, some shipments last season netting $9 per barrel, while Spitzenbergs netted $7.50.—[Farming.

Difficulty With Clover Crops.

A FOOTHILL lemon grower writes of the difficulty of getting a full stand of legumes in the orchard. It is a case of light top soil, with an excellent subsoil of loam for the growing of citrus fruits. Probably the best way to get a good leguminous crop started would be to plow under stable manure or any kind of mulch that may be obtained, and follow with the mechanical breaking up of the somewhat flinty top soil to get it in as good tilth as possible previous to attempting the cover crop. By then, sowing at an opportune time may be done. The second attempt to get the legume growing will certainly be much easier. In the East I have seen abandoned fields within the last five years brought to a state of production excelling by a dozen bushels of wheat to the acre the capacity of the same soil in its virgin fertility. It was done by spreading coarse manure, shallow plowing (for the ground was too hard for anything else), and the planting of cow peas.

A lemon grove in the condition of this one cannot expect profits with lemons at $9 a box. Trees growing under this condition cannot be expected to resist drought, even with an abundant water supply; they can not fortify themselves against cold weather, much less frosty weather, and I believe many of the troubles of our trees that have become decrepit from such adverse causes have appeared in most aggravated form from the trees being unable to resist cold weather even in the main branches while in this sickly condition. With the restoration of the soil to its normal action the cambium layer of the limbs and of the newer growth will become properly matured and hence more resistant to frost and every other external cause of injury. What can restore these lost qualities better than bringing the soils again to good tilth, and what can do this better than green manuring? If a soil become packed into hardpan, how much heat will it absorb through the day to protect against a frosty night? One [illegible] his tree tips more susceptible to cold, yet [illegible] main growth of the tree absolutely resistant to what cold may occur, by keeping his grove in a [illegible] active state. At any rate, it is conceded by all that the more regular the soil action the more regular the [illegible] of fruit growing. Green manuring, if not a specific to this end, is a corrective of uneven action throughout the year.

Free Alcohol.

A VERY pronounced increase in Germany's denatured alcohol industry indicates what may be expected in America. The German production last year was [illegible] 000 gallons, made in 72,000 distilleries, of which [illegible] were on farms or were operated by farmers. About 84 per cent. of all alcohol was made in the agricultural distilleries. The rules will soon be issued by the United States internal revenue department governing the manufacture and sale of denatured tax-free alcohol under the new law, which is about to go into effect. Fears have been expressed that this law might be so [illegible] as to encourage monopolization of this new industry. We cannot believe, however, that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue will be a party to any such deal. Certainly the spirit of the law, as well as its letter as we interpret the phraseology, are designed to afford every possible encouragement for farmers to establish individual or coöperative distilleries for the manufacture of denatured alcohol. This new industry will afford a use for many of the small distilleries in the country which have been closed up of late by the operation of the trusts in the whisky and distillery business. Changes and improvements are needed in the present apparatus to consume alcohol [illegible] for heat, light and power, but these ought to keep pace with the probable increased production. Cooperative distilleries, like coöperative creameries, promise to be the medium through which farmers will derive the largest benefit from this new industry.—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Chestnut Trees

A LATE reference to the fine chestnut tree growing upon Mr. Patterson's ranch at Burbank has brought several replies, one stating that there are two growing at Redlands, and bearing well, and three near Venice. It is strange that there are so few of these trees when one of our most prominent horticulturists fifteen years ago placed one of the varieties at the head of the shade tree list. A chestnut tree in the yard or garden is one of the most beautiful and fruitful, clean, handsome and free from insect pests and disease. The root system of this plant is almost imperishable and hence the chestnut should bear the vicissitudes of our somewhat trying climate as would no other in the list of useful trees. Scale on House Plants.

It is a pertinent question now, for these insects are rapidly getting beyond control by ordinary means, as they are gaining in size and de[illegible] preparatory to winter dormancy. If one wishes a remedy that may be applied with perfect safety and some execution upon the very young scale and has the patience to apply it frequently, he should use whale-oil soap. A more effective remedy and one equally safe is distillate emulsion, now being used to apply it in a strength signified by the manufacturer. It may be purchased of the Densmore-Stabler Refining Company, Ninth and Santa Fe, and possibly from other sources which you may know. It will not kill advanced scale, but is effective with the young and harmless to plants where the oil may evaporate within a reasonable time.

Intermediate Varieties.

VARIETIES of plants which are habitually multiplied by buds, vary widely when grown from seeds, so that every seedling may be markedly distinct. As soon, however as varieties are widely and exclusively propagated by seeds, they develop a capability of carrying the greater part of the individual differences down to the offspring. That is, seedlings from bud-multiplied plants do not come true, as a rule, whilst those from seed-propagated plants do come true. The reason for this difference will become apparent upon a moment's reflection. In the seed-propagated plants, like the kitchen-garden vegetables and the annual flowers, we select the best and thereby eliminate all those variations which would have arisen had all the discarded seed been sown. In other words we are constantly fixing the tendency to come true, for this feature of the plant is as much a variation as form or color or any other attribute is. Suppose, for instance, that a certain variation were to receive two opposite treatments, the seed from one-half the progeny being carefully selected year by year, and those from untypical plants discarded, while in the other half all the seeds from all the plants, whether good or bad, are saved and sown. In the one case it is seen, we are fixing the tendency to come true and this is all that constitutes a horticultural variety—a plant that is very much like all its parents. In the other case we are constantly eliminating the tendency to come true by allowing every modifying agency full play. So the very act of selecting seeds from only those which have come true, tends to still more strongly fix this hereditary force within narrow limits. Working against this restrictive force, however, are all the forces of environment, so that, fortunately, now and then Nature gives a "rogue?" or plant widely unlike its parents, and this may be the start for a new variety.—

Stay-at-Homes and Ramblers.

BY THIS I mean seedlings that stay at home and those that are forced to pack their goods and chattels for removal to foreign parts. The peregrinators, poor things, are really dispossessed. They must "move on" whether they wish to or not, and in spite of the shock their root systems receive, no matter how carefully the transplanting is accomplished, nor how skillfully they are "personally conducted" to a strange land. The stay-at-homes have a much easier time. They have inherited the old homestead, so to speak, and can settle themselves comfortably, grow as fast as possible, marry and bring up their children in unjarred peace; while the peregrinators have to become used to a new locality, make new friends, and are almost invariably checked in their new growth.

Just think what a jar it must be to the feelings of a young plant that grew next door to celery, and had been fascinated with the graceful plumes, to lose all her lovely friends and be doomed to live the rest of her life with the stiff, austere corn, or the flippant carrots! Do you not think we ought to move her as carefully and as gently as possible, so as not to upset her nerves any more than is absolutely necessary? If you are counting on a harvest you certainly feel in duty bound to guard your charges against undue strain. Be sure to have the new home as comfortable as possible. Make it soft, make it fine, make it rich. The stay-at-homes, seedlings that are allowed to remain where the seed was sown, need to be thinned as carefully as possible, the first time when they are about two inches high, in some cases even sooner. The stockiest plants should be allowed to remain after thinning them to about one-half the distance the plants are to stand from each other. When these plants have a still sturdier growth, they may be finally thinned to the distance apart at which they are to remain.—[E. L. Fullerton in Vegetable Garden.

The Easter Lily.

THE Bermuda onion, Bermuda potatoes, and Bermuda arrowroot are famous the world over; all kinds of tropical fruit grow and flourish in abundance, and twenty years ago the late General Hastings of Massachusetts took the oath of allegiance to England, as the colonial laws required, before he could become a freeholder. He at once began propagating the Easter lily, and made a fortune out of the venture before other islanders woke up to the possibilities of their fertile soil. Pioneer Hastings created a market in the United States for this delicate, glorious flower, tons of which are delivered annually throughout the North and the Easter services and holiday festivities. The General erected a winter palace, a royal and magnificent villa upon spacious, commanding grounds fronting the waters of the Sound. Here he entertained like a prince, for his taste was in this direction, with plenty of money to indulge his fancy. The name on the gate posts entrance to the grounds is "Sonci," the home, with its matchless winter gardens, its fish ponds, spanned by artistic stone bridges, its black forest of trees, oleanders, magnolia, tamarind and the like, and the hanging nests of the red bird, contribute to make this green spot a veritable fairyland. This summer paradise is only one among the many along the renowned Serpentine road.

Control of Weeds.

WHEREVER a practical system of rotation is followed the fight with weeds is forgotten. Rotation consists of systematic alternation on each field, of the three general classes of field crops, grains, clovers or grasses and cultivated crops. The object is to produce the grain, pasture and forage needed on the farm at the least expense of labor and fertility. Grass crops afford weeds a very poor chance to produce seed as they grow thickly and ripen for hay earlier than most of the weeds produce seeds. If the land is foul with weeds a cultivated crop should by all means be put in and continued until the land is clean. Clover crops enrich the soil and leave it in good mechanical condition. The succeeding crops grow heavier and more rapidly, thus giving the weeds less chance than on poorer soil. If the land is reasonably free of weeds from one to four grain crops may follow the hay crop. A cultivated crop should then be introduced to again clean up the land and to prepare the soil for the next grass crop.—[Denver Field and Farm.

Make a Lawn Now!

A FALL sown lawn has a much better chance of succeeding than one sown in the spring. Lime is a very good fertilizer for grass. The reason that there is a blue grass region in Kentucky is because it is also a limestone region. The best method of procuring lime for use on the lawn is to purchase from a local dealer in the spring a sufficient quantity of new lime. This should be placed in the cellar of the dwelling in barrels which should be only half filled or partly fill some boxes. As the lime absorbs moisture from the air it will help to keep the cellar dry during the summer, and by fall the lime will became thoroughly slacked. Apply this air-slacked lime to the lawn, any time after the ground has frozen, at the rate of one bushel to each thousand square feet of lawn, or at the rate of forty bushels to the acre. Lime sweetens soil, and if it is applied each year will rid the lawn of many plants that thrive in sour soil, such as moss and sorrel. It is not advisable to top-dress a lawn with any kind of stable manure, they all contain weed seeds. Bone meal is just as cheap and more lasting in effect.—[W. R. S., in October Garden Magazine.

Bulb Culture in a Nutshell.

AS a rule bulbs prefer a light, well drained, moderately rich soil, a winter mulch, an annual top dressing of manure during the growing season and no manure at all at planting time. Fresh manure must never be used in bulb beds and even well decomposed manure must be six inches below the bulbs or it will burn the roots. If your soil is not rich enough manure it heavily and grow other plants in it for a year before you plant the bulbs. All permanent bulb beds should be fed anually. A good way is to buy a complete fertilizer. This avoids unpleasant sights and smells.

Dig your blub beds at least fourteen inches deep. If the soil is heavy, throw it out and replace with good soil, or put a layer of stones at the bottom for drainage. If there is stagnant water at the base of a blub the roots are likely to rot off. Therefore, the safest way is to put a handful of sand or fine coal ashes under each one.

Perhaps the way to plant blubs best is with a dibble, which is not objectionable when the soil is in perfect condition. Another way is to make a marker by driving nails into a board to which a long handle is attached. By this device you can insure mathematical accuracy in depth and distances. The wholesale way to do it is to excavate the bed to the desired depth, prepare a perfectly smooth floor, mark and plant. The rule is to cover bulbs one and one-half times their own depth, but lilies should be planted about three times their own depth. The maximum depths in the table are for permanent beds and for soil in perfect condition. The deeper and The deeper and later you plant, the later the flowers, but the less chance of the flowers being spoiled by bad weather in the spring.

If you cover your bulb beds before the ground freezes hard mice are likely to nest in the litter and eat the bulbs. Wait until the rodents have found their winter quarters. Then cover with leaves (oak leaves mat down less than maple) and lay on some evergreen boughs to keep the leaves from blowing away. Hyacinths should have a 3 or 4-inch layer of leaves or litter, but 2 inches is enough for tulips and lilies. All lilies should have a 2-inch mulch in summer to protect them from drought and the most advanced practice is to put them in rhodendron beds.—[Thos. McAdam in October Garden Magazine.

Early Cabbage Varieties.

THE Eureka, or first early, is a flat-headed cabbage, fully as early in maturing as the well-known Early Jersey Wakefield. It is a cross of a fine strain of Early Jersey Wakefield on the well-known Succession cabbage, and is now thoroughly fixed as to type. The heads are large and very solid and the leaves tender, being entirely free from coarseness. The plants may be set as close in the field as the Wakefield, and can be depended upon to head up well.

The Early Jersey Wakefield is a leading early variety, one of the best for private or market gardener's use; cone-shaped and good quality.

Early Winningstadt has been a favorite variety for many years, as it is good for either early or late use and in some sections the best early sort. Conical shape; quality very good. This variety is especially adapted for light soils, where it does better than other sorts.

All Head, Early, is the largest heading of the second early sort, of excellent quality. The deep flat heads are remarkably solid, and very uniform in size, of a very compact growth, having few outer leaves; can be planted as close as the Wakefield.

Early Stonehead is exceptionally robust and hardy—unsurpassed both for an early summer crop and from later planting for fall and winter. It is specially adapted also for fall planting in the Southern States for an early spring market. The heads, each "solid as a stone," are particularly valuable for shipping to northern or distant markets. The heads are ten inches and more in diameter, broad but distinctly rounded at the top, and uniformly of the greatest possible solidity; well blanched and of crisp, sweet flavor. Its great solidity makes it most desirable for slicing for slaw, sauerkrout, etc.

Danish Round Head. The heads average larger in size than those of the Ballhead, maturing about two weeks earlier; are set on shorter stalks. They are extremely hard and solid, with interior leaves blanched to the purest whiteness; sweet flavor and crisp tender texture.—[California Cultivator.

Qualities of Ozone.

WHEN lightning strikes the earth or an object near its surface, a person in the vicinity at once perceives a peculiar, so-called "sulphureous" odor, which must belong to something developed in the atmosphere by electricity. The smell may be noticed in a room in which an electrical machine has been for some time in vigorous action. The substance which is thus produced is termed ozone, from a Greek word signifying to smell. It is a colorless gas, possessing most remarkable qualities, and is of the highest importance to agricultural science, although our knowledge of it is exceedingly imperfect. Ozone is not known in a pure state free from other bodies; but hitherto has only been obtained mixed with several times its weight of air or oxygen. It is entirely insoluble in water. It has, when breathed, an irritating action on the lungs, and excites coughing, like chlorine gas. Small animals are shortly destroyed in an atmosphere charged with it. It is itself instantly destroyed by a heat considerably below that of redness.

The special character of ozone that is of interest in connection with questions of agriculture is its oxidizing power. Silver is a metal which totally refuses to combine with oxygen under ordinary circumstances, as shown by its maintaining its brillancy without symptoms of tarnish or rust when exposed to pure air at common or greatly elevated temperatures. When a slip of moistened silver is placed in a vessel the air of which is charged with ozone, the metal after no long time becomes coated with a black crust, and at the same time the ozone disappears. By the application of a gentle heat to the blackened silver, ordinary oxygen gas escapes and the slip recovers its ordinary silvery color. Indirectly, ozone is of great significance in our theory of vegetable nutrition, inasmuch as it is the cause of chemical changes which are of the highest importance in maintaining the life of plants.

"Well, sir?" said the great lawyer.

The visitor spoke tremulously.

The other shook him by the hand. "Certainly I will defend you, my friend," he murmured kindly. "And how many hundred thousand did you say——"

"Hundred thousand?" the client interrupted. "Oh, sir, don't think me worse than I am. It is only $490 in all, and I expect to pay back every cent before I die."

The lawyer rose brusquely. His eye flashed scorn and contempt.

More Ideas of Dr. Haig.

"FREEDOM from Uric Acid and How to Obtain It" is the title of a pamphlet sent to the editor by the author, Dr. Alexander Haig, of London, who has earned a world-wide reputation as the leading proponent of the non-uric acid food dietary. In his opening, the author says:

"The title of this paper does not, of course, mean that absolute freedom from uric acid can be secured, for this is impossible. Roughly speaking, every one forms, day by day, about one grain of uric acid for every twelve pounds of body weight, this being a necessity of life. The freedom of which I speak is comparative, and may be obtained by excreting this quantity daily and regularly, so that none of it accumulates in the system, and by cutting off all uric acid from external sources, so that there may be none to collect in various organs, and thus form a focus of retention, both for the uric acid introduced, and for that formed in the body."

The author admits that underfeeding is a simple way of reducing uric acid, but says it is a dangerous plan, and should not be continued beyond a short period. He believes the adult must take the body weight in pounds and multiply by nine to get the grains of albumen that he should consume daily. This would make three ounces for a man of 160 pounds—twice as much as necessary, the editor believes, for brain workers. He does not agree with Prof. Chittenden or Horace Fletcher, and says that when he saw Mr. Fletcher some years ago his blood color was defective and circulation slow. On the other hand, in the World's Work for March, Isaac F. Marcosson said of Mr. Fletcher: "He was ruddier and healthier-looking than when I saw him two years ago. At 56 his step is springy, his eye clear, and his capacity for work prodigious. He rarely goes to bed before midnight; he is often at work by 5 in the morning. It may be that Mr. Fletcher is somewhat inclined to overdo the good idea of thorough mastication, just as, unfortunately, most hygienic reformers are inclined to overdo their specialties, but for one who overchews a million underchew.

Dr. Haig believes that those who undereat will be subject to attacks from microbes, of which he specially mentions those of boils and carbuncles, that of diphtheria and that of tuberculosis. This is all right, but the question is: What is underfeeding? The editor believes that Prof. Chittenden is correct, and Dr. Haig believes he is not. He says: "The right course is to secure just that quantity of nourishment which will keep the circulation normal and the blood color at the highest attainable level." True for you, doctor, but what is that quantity? On that point "doctors differ." It must, of course, depend largely on the temperature of the air, and the weight and occupation of a person. Brain workers require not more than half the amount of food consumed by those doing hard physical labor.

Apart from food, Dr. Haig goes on to say that we must live warmly. "Live a fairly active life so as to get rid of a certain quantity of the acid products of combustion through the excretions from the skin." In regard to warmth versus fresh air, he says:

"There are some who believe it is so important to get fresh air that they must of necessity expose themselves to cold in its pursuit; but this is an opinion which I by no means share. Fresh air is said to be productive of a large number of good things, including splendid blood color, but, as a matter of fact, if people live on the right diet, they can maintain the best of blood color in London, and under conditions of ventilation which some extremists would possibly characterize as defective, for the truth is that uric acid controls the condition of the blood, and a little extra oxygen of the air (though it is, of course, a prime necessity of life) affects it only to a small extent. I hope no one will misunderstand me; I would say to every one—by all means get all the fresh air you can, but do not imagine that good can be secured by exposing yourself to cold for the purpose. Far more harm will be done by exposing yourself to cold than will be gained from any good the slightly fresher air will do you. It is quite true that oxygen is a necessity, but only one-twentieth or one-thirtieth more oxygen is obtained by flooding a room with cold air, and such a fractional addition does little good. While, if the cold air causes the retention in the body of uric acid in the winter, that uric acid, coming through the blood next spring, will produce far more anemia than would have resulted if the cold air had been excluded and the room properly warmed in the cold weather. It often appears in these matters that people neglect the essential and pay an enormous amount of attention to minor points, not only in the matter of which I am speaking, but through the whole of life and in great things as in small.

"I, therefore (as I say,) clothe warmly; I live in warm rooms, and, though I gain all the fresh air possible, I refuse to live in the open air in the cold weather, looking upon this exposure to cold as a greater evil than a small diminution in the supply of oxygen can possibly be. In the same way it is a wrong course to take a morning cold bath, which not only chills temporarily, but for some hours afterward. This cold comes exactly at the time of the day when the greater part of the uric acid of formation is passing through the blood on its way to the kidneys, and is almost certain to check this excretion and to cause retention. It will thus be seen that cold, and bracing climates, and all tonics, have the same action; they all clear the blood of uric acid and cause its retention."

The editor regards this as dubious, and indeed a dangerous doctrine. One of the greatest needs of civilized man, in order to insure good health and long life, is to harden himself, first internally, by adopting a simple non-stimulating diet, and then externally, by breathing fresh air night and day, accustoming himself to extremes of temperature, exposing his body to the air and sun, and bathing in streams, ponds and the ocean. All this, be it remembered, to be done gradually, according to the growing resistance power of the patient. What the civilized human race is suffering from nowadays is not too much fresh air, or too much cold, but too much coddling.

Dr. Haig says:

"A much better standard than this has since been attained with the knowledge that the previous call for the bracing action of cold, for tonics, and for the spur of stimulants, was nothing but a result of the collaemic condition produced by unnatural food, and the simple object now is to be and remain so well that none of these adventitious aids are ever required."

If abstention from flesh foods should have the effect of leading people to shun the bracing action of cold, then the editor would say keep on eating meat. But it don't.

After reading the above, it is not surprising to learn that Dr. Haig admits being obliged, in addition to his precautions against cold, to take some alkali every day, during the cold season of the year, "as it is practically impossible for me in normal conditions to live a natural active life." But why take soda as a mineral, in which form it cannot be utilized by the body? Why not find his sodium in fruits and green vegetables? If the worthy doctor would harden his body to all kinds of temperature, and take a cold sponge every morning, he would soon be able to be content with the alkali found in a mealy baked potato, which further on he says he eats three times a day, for the sake of the alkali contents. On the other hand, he avoids an excess of fruit, claiming that the acids of the fruit have, at least for a time, an action exactly the reverse of that of the potato, causing the retention of uric acid in the body, and if taken in cold weather produce a store of this substance. He eats them in reasonable quantities in summer, as sauces to the foods, but abstains from them altogether in winter. On the other hand, the editor believes that a person who lives entirely on fresh fruits, nuts and salads will be more free of uric acid than one living on any other dietary. At the same time, Dr. Haig is doubtless correct in saying that fresh fruits are a summer food. As for us, in Southern California, it is summer all the year round.

In regard to avoiding climatic extremes, it may be remembered that not so very many years ago the Alcotts became eloquent in praise of an herb diet. A writer says:

"Glass sanitariums were established at Luebeck and Bonn, and arranged in a way to keep the temperature, winter and summer, in the close neighborhood of eighty degrees Fahrenheit. Sunshine was admitted by countless windows, and there was not much shade; but, as the patients were rather light dressed, the degree of warmth was not supposed to affect their comfort.

"Diet, diversions, opportunities for exercise, were all that could be desired, but the boarders succumbed to liver diseases and dysentery—killed by the domestic arrangements as surely as if they had been inoculated with typhoid germs."

Dr. F. L. Oswald, writing some time ago in Good Health, said:

"Many people, when cold weather comes, hide away in their wind-proof houses, thoroughly barricaded against fresh air. Under such circumstances the power to make heat diminishes, and they are afraid to come in contact with cold air, because they have coddled themselves too much as the cold weather has come on. When a person is in that condition, his vitality is lowered, his resistance weakened, and he is an easy prey to disease.

"On the other hand, cold is a vitalizer of tremendous consequence. There is no tonic so good as contact with cold air. The body rallies its forces to repel the cold, which it recognizes as dangerous. This is why one feels stronger and more full of energy after the application of cold. It is because of the resistance which the body makes against the cold. It is worth while to lose a little heat when by this loss the vital forces are rallied."

The editor agrees entirely with these opinions of Dr. Oswald.

Dr. Haig excuses himself for taking a drug, by explaining that it is impossible to lead a natural life under the unnatural conditions prevailing in England. A rather weak excuse, it seems, for a hygienic reformer.

The doctor properly states that salt introduces a powerful mineral acid into the body, which tends to the retention of uric acid, so he takes little or no salt.

In concluding this interesting pamphlet, Dr. Haig says:

"We may recapitulate the points here brought forward, by saying that the greatest freedom from uric acid is obtained by introducing none, and by passing out each day, regularly and punctually, all that is formed in the body, and that this regularity of excretion may be attained by clothing warmly, by avoiding ex-

The use of ointments, bandages and other outward applications do not cure rheumatism, gout, eczema, etc., any more than do crutches make a cripple whole. At best they simply ease a local pain for the time being, and in aggravated cases they produce no results whatever.

A cure for these diseases must go to the very root of the trouble and overcome the cause; then carry out accumulated poisons from the system, purify the blood and so tone and strengthen the organs that the patient will be able to resist any tendency to the uric acid condition.

It is in this rational way that Uricsol cures these diseases of the blood. Send for our free booklet on the and treatment, which will explain its action more fully.

to cold in every form, by eating freely of potatoes (especially in cold weather), by avoiding fruits are out of season, and indeed by never taking fruit any large extent, except in very warm weather. It advisable to secure the proper distribution of between bodily and mental exertion, and to dispense with dependence on tonics, stimulants, and bracing climates. The result will be a better balance of mind and body, and a more healthy, natural and useful than has been generally experienced, either ourselves or by our ancestors in the previous century.

The doctor fails to state that uric acid formation may a great extent be averted by eating freely of green vegetables and salads that abound in mineral salts prepared by nature for assimilation.

few months ago Dr. Haig wrote to a friend in New warning him against the adoption of a dietary proteid, such as Prof. Chittenden found sufficient, those upon whom he experimented. Dr. Haig claims those who reduce their proteid foods below what constitutes the normal amount are in danger of heart failure. Since then, there has been received a copy of pamphlet, "Heart Failure as the Result of Deficient Food," an article reprinted from the Medical Records May 26, 1906. In this article Dr. Haig admits that a man may starve for thirty, forty, or even sixty days, without serious signs of collapse, and with "little harm," if care is exercised. The doctor might have substituted for "little harm" "great benefit." He adds "But condition of slow, steady and constant deficiency of is substituted, there comes a time when not only the less important tissues suffer, but the heart muscle and brain cells begin to suffer with them, to some extent." He cites the case of a doctor, who went, some years ago, to the Lohmann Institute, near Dresden, to get relief from headache, in which he succeeded within two weeks, but got in their place heart failure, having lived largely on salads "which, by their bulk, prevented him from taking sufficient of the more nourishing foods." Dr. Haig says that debility from underfeeding may come on so insidiously that it is often far advanced before it is in any way recognized by the sufferer. He thinks the condition of poor men, who, being chronically half starved, are said to "lose heart," is actual malnutrition of the heart muscle. He says that nine grains of albumen daily for each pound of weight, is required—more for those who do very physical work, less for those who follow sedentary occupations.

On the other hand, read the following dispatch from [illegible], Mass., published on the same day as Dr. Haig's letter above referred to:

[illegible], a Civil War veteran of Dalton, Mass., asserts that it is possible to live on an income of $10 a year and to be in perfect health and vigor.

For nearly five years he has been carrying out his system of dieting, abstaining from ordinary cooked foods living on fruits, vegetables eaten raw, and on nuts, eating only one meal a day—at 10 a.m. In 1889 doctors told [illegible] that he had heart disease and would die. He determined not to go so quickly as they said.

Another pamphlet, by Dr. Haig, is "Uric Acid as the Cause of Gout and Gouty Circulation," reprinted from the Edinburgh Medical Journal. The article is intended as a reply to three articles on uric acid in the Practitioner of London, which articles Dr. Haig considers inaccurate. In the pamphlet he publishes a table, showing the daily circulation, blood pressure, temperature and acidity of three average persons, with the corresponding amount of uric acid presumably present in their blood and urine. Dr. Haig contests the theory that uric acid is an effect, not a cause, of physical disturbances. He says that the indications distinguishing the meat eater are produced in vegetarians by the administration of pure uric acid. He says:

"Uric acid kept in solution in the blood slows circulation and depresses metabolism. Uric acid driven out of the blood, whether by food, acid drinks, cold, or other causes, gives a clear blood and acts as a stimulant. These are the facts, simple indeed compared to the complexity of explanation they have evoked. * * * I have long since pointed out that constipation raises the acidity of the urine, and that this occasions the appearance of a little red sand. Its presence is no sign of excess of uric acid in the blood—rather the reverse. Uric acid is never in excess in the blood without the effects of its presence in circulation, temperature, etc."

Dr. Haig shows that patients beginning a uric acid free diet have still to deal with accumulations, and that these cause depression, as they are swept through the system. He adds:

"The natural tendency is to remove this depression by taking the foods which give immediate relief. A parallel case is the misery of the opium eater, until another dose is administered, and in both the condition of the blood explains all. It is charged with uric acid during depression; it is more or less cleared by the fresh dose, which sets up retention, and prepares the way for further depression and increasing dependence on the stimulant."

In regard to tea, Dr. Haig declares it to be of interest that the natives that have used it longest take it weakest. That is true. You never find a Japanese or a Chinaman drinking the strong brew that English matrons take two or three times a day. As the editor has said, tea should never be left to draw more than a minute, the water being at the boiling point, and if possible [illegible]

In conclusion, Dr. Haig pays his respects to the medical profession, which is so loath to appreciate and adopt a sensible idea, less it assumes the shape of some mysterious poisonous serum, fathered by an eminent German or French professor. He says:

"The preventible suffering endured by reason of ignorance and indifference among the profession and the public would be incredible, were it not a fact to be reckoned with that fresh knowledge almost invariably runs the gauntlet of apathy, misconception, and prejudice, before it obtains the recognition which opens its use to mankind; and this special branch of it can claim and has no exemption from so general a rule."

"Heart Failure" is published by William Wood & Co., New York. The other pamphlets are published in England, but may probably be had from the same firm, or from P. Blakiston's Son & Co., 1012 Walnut street, Philadelphia, who publish, in America, Dr. Haig's books.

How About the Kitchens?

WHILE we are talking so much about filthy packing-houses, how about some kitchens? The following sensible remarks on this subject were recently published in a local contemporary:

"The committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, appointed to make an examination of the packing establishments at the Union Stock Yards, has completed its work.

"Among other things the committee says this: 'The general conditions, involving sanitation, general cleanliness and a production of a wholesome food, were far BETTER THAN THE AVERAGE KITCHEN!'

"There is something about this statement that makes us jump.

"What IS the condition of the average kitchen?

"The kitchen in question is now brought home to us women. ARE WE AS CAREFUL AS WE SHOULD BE?

"Does the average housewife thoroughly wash her hands and CLEAN HER NAILS before she kneads her bread?

"Does she wash her dishes well?

"Does she wipe her dishes on a clean towel?

"How many kitchens harbor germ-breeding, disease-scattering, SOUR DISH RAGS?

"How many housewives serve spoiling food to the hungry family with the insane belief that they are SAVING THE FOOD?

"How many times have you seen the butter knife left in the butter until the EDGES OF THE KNIFE, where the silver is off, HAVE TURNED GREEN?

"How many housekeepers are guilty of WASHING off the COOKING TABLE with a dish cloth wrung from water that IS SOUR AND GREASY?

"How many women wash their frying pans and kettles in dish water unfit for cleansing a pig's trough, simply because they are MOST THROUGH and don't want to take the time to take clean water to wash the cooking utensils in which their food is to be prepared?

"Packingtown is a bad place, no doubt; but how about the kitchen?

"What a blessing it would be if this Packington agitation would clean up the kitchens.

"It has, at least, set us kitchen-keepers to thinking. That's one step."

To the above might be added: How many women leave milk which sucks up germs as a sponge sucks up water exposed in a pan within reach of all kinds of contamination?

The above applies to private kitchens. Restaurant kitchens are still more open to criticism. It is said that of thirty such kitchens, examined recently in Los Angeles on one day, in the cleanest time of the day, there were only two that the average person would see, and then go out to the other side and eat. It would be a good idea to make more common the fashion of having the cooking done in view of the eaters—or, at least, where they can inspect the process.

Care of the Baby.

MRS. J. B. JONES, of Highland Park, sends the following contribution, which contains some good ideas. The hardening of the body should begin in infancy:

"The first and second summer are said to be the most dangerous periods of a lifetime. Not the first and second years, nor winters, but the first and second summers. This emphasizes the danger of diseases brought on by hot weather. In view of this fact, those having the care of infants should keep them as comfortably cool as possible during the summer season. Put from your mind the dread of baby "catching cold," as of no importance, in comparison with the vital menace that lurks in diseases brought on by overheating. The usual attitude of the mother or nurse in this regard is about as rational as if she had sought safety for her charge in a den of wild beasts, in order to avoid a possible ghost that might lurk about. If a properly-fed baby is kept comfortably cool, nine-tenths of the dangers that threaten his life will be eliminated.

"I called in the doctor to see my first baby, one hot June day, when swathed in the usual garments of civilized babyhood, tenderly sheltered from any passing breeze, with prickles of heat thick upon his helpless little body, he lay restless and fretful under conditions that would have tormented a strong man.

"'I find the greatest lack in the care of infants to be common sense,' remarked the good physician, looking with satisfaction at his patient a few minutes later. Smiling in his sleep, the baby lay on a quilt in the open gallery, a fine breeze rippling the thin muslin gown to which, and a diaper, he had been stripped.

"'Oh, doctor, I'm so afraid he'll catch cold—hadn't I better leave that on?' I asked, referring to the flannel band.

"'We'll guard against the cold in due season. At present, the danger lies in the other extreme.'

"A comparison of the summer and winter infant death rates will serve to convince any one that it is principally against the heat and its effects that the little ones must be guarded. Yet, they are protected from the cooling breeze, that might mean life itself to the heated little body, as zealously as though some deadly poison were borne on its wings. Dress your baby as you would like to be dressed under the same conditions. That is, if you spent your time either lying on a stuffy bed or being nursed in some one's arms. If the day is hot and there is a breeze stirring give him the benefit of it. Don't change your tactics because of an occasional sneeze. It does not always mean 'catching cold.' It's the only way he has to blow his nose. When you give him his morning bath, wash out his mouth with tepid water, in which a very small pinch of soda has been dissolved. Apply with a rag wrapped around your finger. Give him water to drink occasionally—cool water, neither cold nor warm—just cool. If you should be unusually thirsty from the heat, some day remember he is apt to be the same. Don't try to teach your baby to sit alone—when his back is strong enough he will attend to that himself better than you can."

Hygienic Laws of Moses.

AS frequently mentioned, the editor finds that, in the main, the laws of Moses, relating to diet, are based on sound hygienic truths. Such, for instance, as that forbidding milk and meat together, and the proscribing of the hog. There are, however, a few, the meaning of which, from a hygienic point of view, is not plain, such as the proscribing of the rabbit, a clean feeding animal.

The editor wrote about this to Rabbi Emil Hirsch, of Chicago, who is regarded as the leading Hebrew authority in America. The following reply, signed "J. Hirsch," has been received:

"As Dr. Hirsch is absent in Europe, I shall try to give you the information requested in your favor of the 13th. Though I am not a rabbi, and my knowledge of the subject is only that of the non-professional, I believe that it is correct.

"The so-called dietary laws do not specify any particular animals by name as 'kosher,' or clean, but limit the animal food allowed to the species that have cloven hoofs and that ruminate. Both qualifications are required. The rabbit, not being cloven-hoofed, is therefore not to be considered as 'kosher' under the dietary laws.

"One of the deepest thinkers among the modern Jewish philosophers has reasoned that those laws were largely intended to represent the character of the then existing Jewish nation. The animals thus selected as food are all non-aggressive, and but little able to defend themselves against the attacks of carnivorous animals. Thus the Jew should not be aggressive.

"I judge the above will be sufficient to answer your question, but if not, then please again address your inquiry to Dr. Hirsch on his return, about the end of September."

This is an explanation that does not explain, from a hygienic point of view.

One Jewish authority of whom the editor inquired on this subject said that the meat of the rabbit is close and indigestible. On the contrary, the editor has found the flesh of a young cottontail to be as readily digestible as that of a young chicken. Perhaps Rabbi Hirsch may be able to throw light on the subject when he returns from Europe. Otherwise, we shall have to admit that, from a hygienic point of view, there are limitations to the laws of Moses—who was one of the wisest men that ever lived.

The following communication has been received from Howard Pealing of Sawtelle:

"Some weeks ago you stated that the Jews killed their animals for meat with the minimum amount of pain. Any one conversant with the facts know that the Jewish method of butchery is brutal in the extreme, and should be prohibited by law. The following extract from a special correspondent of the National Tribune, writing from the Chicago packing-houses, if anything, draws it very mild:

" 'They were "koshering" cattle the morning I was there. Don't look in the dictionary—that is my own word. The word 'kosher' applies to the special method of killing cattle for the Jewish trade, and it is heathenish. The poor beast is yanked up by one leg and held there, bellowing madly, while the attendant puts a cruel pronged hood in the animal's mouth and twists its head back, holding it for several minutes until the rabbi who is looking and the 'cutthroat' is ready for business. The beast is then yanked up till his head is free from the floor, and the sharp knife is drawn across its throat.'

"Again, you now and then remind your readers that the Jew is healthier, stronger and not so prone to disease as the Anglo-Saxon. It is altogether owing to the environment. That the Jew will live and thrive in locations where others die off like sheep, I admit. In the slums of London where sixty years ago or more, I unhappily lived for a short time, and where most of my brothers and sisters died (we were forced from our country home by the rapacity of our 'noble' landlord), the Jew was in his element, and grew fat on the surrounding filth and vitiated atmosphere. In the '40's a change of fortune enabled my father to come to America and take up a backoods farm. In a year or two, in the free air, his remaining children grew as superior physically to the London slum Jew as was the Jew our superior back there.

"Since then I have been a soldier, and have mined and prospected in almost all parts of the world, and I have never yet seen the Jew who could hold up his end with his Aryan neighbor. It is only in the dark alleys amid filth and noisome smells that the Jew shows his superior endurance. I am speaking of them as a race.

"Many years of observation has taught me that the one who will stand more hardships in any clime, be it arctic or torrid, and the physical and mental superior of any class on earth is the American whose ancestors in whole or part, came to these shores in colonial days. Give such a man a good country-bred English foundation, add a liberal mixture of Scotch, Irish, Teutonic, French or Scandinavian blood, and you have a man or woman as near perfect as can be made, and the coming rulers of the world. Let them live outdoors as much as possible, follow the dietary system as outlined in your department, and there is no telling what wonders they, as time rolls on, will be able to accomplish."

The fact that the Jew is able to thrive under conditions that would be deadly to a Caucasian go to confirm what the editor has said in regard to the remarkable vitality of the Jewish race. In some respects, doubtless, this is a case of the survival of the fittest, as in the case of the Chinese, those less able to endure in the struggle for existence having been weeded out.

It is a well attested fact that the Jews are free from many diseases that afflict the races among whom they dwell. For instance, it is said that a case of cancer was never known among orthodox Jews. This is doubtless due to compliance with the hygienic laws of Moses. As the younger generation of Jews begin to cease to follow those laws, we may expect that they will acquire diseases that afflict the Gentiles.

Fatty Foods.

THE DIETETIC AND HYGIENIC GAZETT, of New York, recently had an article in regard to the much neglected subject of the food value of fats and oils. So far, the article is all right, but a publication devoted to dietetics and hygiene should surely know better than to confine its remarks about fat to the fat of swine, and other animals, when there is available pure vegetable oils, in the shape of olive oil, also ripe olives and nuts and—somewhat less desirable—the oil of cottonseed, peanuts, sunflower, and other products of the soil.

Intelligence should, however, be used in consuming oils and fats, as otherwise they are likely to disagree with digestive organs that are not very robust. A dispatch from Redlands recently noted that an order for olive oil had been received from a physician of King Edward, of England, Sir Thomas Barlow. It is said that, when a reigning beauty asked Sir Thomas what she should take for her complexion, he replied:

"Take olive oil. Live on it, live in it, live with it eat it, drink it, dress your food with it and don't do without it—lubricate your system."

This is both extravagant and misleading. As mentioned several times of late, in this department, oil should not be consumed "straight." In this shape it is a "free fat," in which form, as shown by investigations made by Prof. Pawlow of St. Petersburg, it interferes with the formation of hydrochloric acid, and so retards digestion. Possibly, in the case of those who are troubled with hyperpepsia—an excess of hydrochloric acid—it may be permissible, but this condition may be better helped in other ways.

The best way to take oil is in the shape of nuts, which are very rich in oil, or ripe olives. The peanut is not a nut, but a legume, like peas and beans, and is less desirable than the true nut. The yolk of eggs is over 30 per cent. fat—notwithstanding Miss Sophie Leppel of London insists that the egg contains no fat. In addition to these sources of oil, pure olive oil may be beaten up thoroughly with tomato juice, and eaten with salad or, as previously suggested, may be made into a mayonnaise dressing. Nuts may also be made into a cream or a butter.

Oil is always strongly recommended for the tuberculous, which is good, but be it remembered that tuberculous patients almost always have a weak digestion. In fact, the disease begins with poor digestion. Therefore, it is exceedingly foolish to attempt to force immense amounts of fat into their stomachs. Such a course will inevitably result in malnutrition, disgust and relapse. Reference was made in this department, recently, to an extraordinary statement in a hygienic publication, in which two pounds of olive oil daily was recommended, as a substitute for four pounds of butter, in the case of consumptives. Commenting upon such an amazing statement as this is altogether superfluous.

While on this subject a few words may appropriately be said in regard to substitutes for olive oil, which is too expensive for general use in cooking by persons of moderate means, although they may be able to afford it for their mayonnaise salad dressing. The principal substitute used to take the place of oil in this country is cottonseed oil, derived from a substance that was formerly thrown away as worthless. This is extensively used in the South, where it can be purchased for about 30 cents a gallon, or about one-tenth of what olive oil costs here. It is largely used to adulterate the cheaper grades of olive oil. The chief drawback to this oil is that it contains a gummy substance, which renders it somewhat indigestible. A leading olive grower of Southern California, now deceased, also called the attention of the editor to the asserted fact that cottonseed meal tends to produce abortion in cows. Whereupon, the editor suggested that it would be well not to let the fact become generally known, or there would arise an immense demand for the oil in this country.

Among other oils used is nut oil, made from the peanut. This is extensively used by the Chinese, and in Europe is manufactured from peanuts raised in Algeria. Oil is also manufactured, on a large scale, from Russian sunflower seed.

There are several substitutes for lard on the market, under various more or less fanciful names. One of these, widely advertised, and put up by one of the leading packing houses of the country, is composed of cottonseed oil and bee fat. This is better than hog fat, but will not satisfy vegetarians. Another substitute is known as "Ko-Nut." This, the Philadelphia manufacturers assure the editor, contains no animal fat, being entirely composed of cocoanut oil, sterilized, and free from fatty acids. They also claim that it analyzes the nearest to dairy butter of any known product. The editor liked this product, but the members of his family objected to the very slight trace of cocoanut flavor which it retains.

Another substitute for lard and olive oil is known as "Short-O." It is cottonseed oil thoroughly refined, being of a clear white color, and colorless. It is claimed that for cooking purposes refined cottonseed oil is better than olive oil, because it will stand a much higher temperature without burning. While this oil is refined the gummy substance above referred to is not entirely extracted. Many efforts have been made to accomplish this, but so far none of them has proved successful. If any one could succeed in cheaply degumming cottonseed oil he could make a large fortune, as it could then be used in the arts, as a substitute for linseed oil.

Sunday Sleep.

A BROOKLYN physician denounces the habit of sleeping late on Sunday mornings, by those who are accustomed to rise early throughout the week. He also denounces extra eating on Sunday, with the consequent "headache, stupidity and billousness on the following Monday." As to eating, he is quite right. As to the sleeping, he is all wrong. For many people, Sunday is the only chance they have to get a good "bellyful" of sleep. They should not fail to seize the opportunity. It will do them far more good than listening to a sermon, or a trip to the beach. The very best way for a person who is nervous, tired and run down to spend a Sunday morning is to lie in bed until about noon—always, of course, in a well-ventilated room. As to eating, take only at the most two very light meals—one is better. As a rule, on Sunday, people work much less and eat much more than on other days. This fully accounts for the heavy feeling that usually follows the day of rest.

Cut down the Sunday grub, but don't, on any account, cut down the Sunday sleep.

Self Explanatory Letter From a Trained Nurse

Bozeman, Montana, Sept. 17, [illegible]

Sunbrights California Food Co., Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen—I take quite a pleasure in writing you a few lines. You will find enclosed a picture of a little tot whose mother died at its birth. Both grandmothers were very much interested in this child. It had all the attention that a little one could have, but they could not find any food that would agree with it and the child got weaker and weaker. I saw the baby and asked what they were doing for it. They said they had tried different foods and doctors, but all had failed so far. I told them when they got through with all the doctors and their foods that I would send for your food; that it had saved a child for me and I knew it would save theirs. Three days later they asked me to send for a sample of your food. I wrote you and received the food in due time. When I called at the house with the food one of the grandmothers said with tears in her eyes, "I am afraid you have come too late; the child will never live to take the food." I told her that as long as there was life there was hope, and for her to try it. You can see by the picture what the food has done for this baby. We have a druggist handling your food now in this town. Grandmothers think your food is a perfect baby food. The doctors think your food is good, but they are from Missouri. Yours truly,

The Island of Santorin.

Strange Peculiarities of Most Southerly of Greek Isles.

From Westminster Gazette.

STEVENSON, with a few sentences so vivid that they sear the memory, pictures in one of his essays the strange spectacle of a community dwelling upon verge of a volcano—eating, drinking, and making marrying and giving in marriage, yet never sure that at any moment destruction, red and terrible, burst forth from beneath their feet and "leap sky-in the moonlight."

Such, in a sense, is the condition of the islanders of most southerly of all the Greek islands which the Aegean Sea. Of "towns" there are no fewer than fifteen, but two or three only can be reckoned as more than the tiniest of hamlets.

Architecturally, the island towns are curious, and nothing more—quaint labyrinths of misshapen cottages, thickly walled and whitewashed, adapted most ingeniously to the odd and seemingly perilous sites which many of them occupy. Here and there are well-built houses, the town being intersected by narrow "streets," roughly-paved, and allowing just sufficient space for two laden mules to pass. Roads there are none, vehicles being unknown. Communication between place and place is by means of narrow mule tracks, now of rough lava stones, now of thick and yielding volcanic dust, which wind tortuously between dykes of loosely-piled boulders.

Thera is the "capital," pertly seated on the very edge of the western cliff, and reached from the tiny harbor below by a paved, zigzag mule track, of exhausting length and steepness. Spread out in struggling wise, for some distance along the heights, the town presents to the sea quite an extensive appearance, to which added effect is given by the imposing and ambitious churches. The religious division of the community is sharp and remarkable. Though the majority of the people are adherents of the Greek Church, the Roman Catholics (largely recruited from Italians and other foreigners settled on the island in connection with the wine industry) are numerous, and the northern end of Thera is commonly referred to as the "Catholic town." The French Sisters of Charity have a school there, the Lazarist monks another; while there are also some Dominicans.

Vineyards cover most of the soil available for cultivation, the island producing a wine called Vino Santo, which was at one time largely exported (to Russia principally,) but has of late decreased in value. The vines flourish amazingly, and a curious custom obtains of plaiting them into basket-work close to the soil, and thus avoiding the destructive effects of wind. Many of the vines have the appearance of huge birds' nests, inside and outside of which the bunches of fruit are seen clustered. At vintage time, frequently, the heat is so intense that the grapes have to be gathered at night. Pumice stone is another native product exported. Large quantities may always be seen floating in the harbor, and the cliffs are in great part composed of the crumbling material.

Santorin, isle of enchantment enchantingly named! Is it doomed, one wonders, some day to share a fate akin to that of the two villages—unknown, forgotten—which were swallowed up long ages since, but revealed by a sudden opening of the mountain during the last eruption? The volcano, they say, is dead—or, at least, dying. Yet the water of the channels between the Kaymeni Islands, sulphurous as well as salt, boils ominously, and there are gaping holes, crusted round with yellow brimstone, from which issues the hot breath of the slumbering monster within. There are places, too, on the desolate burnt slopes, where the bare-footed boatman who guides one to the summit hops nimbly aside, even his tough soles being unable to bear the heat of the ground.

Leaning over the stern of the steamer as she churns her way northward from Thera, the traveler may more clearly discern the outline of the huge crater than from any part of its rim. In the middle lie the clustered islets, black and sullen, which form the peak, and as one watches them under the moon's magic spell one half expects them to yawn, and from out their lurid depths to see red ruin "leap sky-high in the moonlight."

Momentarily one expects it: momentarily it may happen. Who knows?

A. E. JOHNSON.

A RUSSIAN ARTILLERY OFFICER.

The Russian field marshal, Paskievitch, records the following incident: On one occasion he had ordered a well-sustained shell fire to be opened on a certain point which obstructed him in his operations, and impatiently awaited the result. Seeing that his orders were not obeyed, Paskievitch set spurs to his horse, and galloped toward the eminence on which the unlucky battery was stationed.

"Who is the fool in command here?" he asked.

"I am," answered an officer, stepping up to the general.

"Well, captain, how is it your shells have not got to work yet?"

"Because they are bad, and won't explode, General."

"All bosh, I tell you, sir; you don't catch me with such silly stuff. This very evening you shall be tried by court-martial."

The captain then took a shell out of the heap, lighted the fuse, and, holding the smoking projectile in his hand, he saluted his superior officer, saying: "See for yourself!" Paskievitch, without wincing, stood with folded arms awaiting to see whether the shell would burst or the fuse go out. When the match had gone out, the captain threw the shell on the ground, and the general, muttering to himself, "He is right," rushed off to the scene of action to take some other measures. The same evening, however, he sent the captain the Cross of St. Vladimir.—[London Weekly Telegraph.

CANNED VOICE FOR POSTERITY.

"It has become a common thing," said the talking-machine man, "for elderly people to come here, have records made, and take these records off with them to the safe deposit vaults, to be given to their children after death.

"It is pathetic to hear a man of middle age saying into a phonograph the speech that he wants his children to remember him by. Sometimes he has the speech all written out, and reads it off. Sometimes he has a few notes, a few headings, on a card, and elaborates his speech from these. The speeches, as a rule, are little moral lectures, advice on how to live. They are always beautiful, they are so simple and sincere."

The Road to Fame.

Some of the Beginnings of Great Careers in Art.

From London Tit-Bits.

FEW things are more interesting in the lives of great artists than the stories of how they drifted into the profession which they adorn.

As a boy, W. P. Frith, the great Academician, had no marked leanings toward art; in fact, when his father suggested that he should "go to London and learn to be a real artist," he answered, "I don't much care about it. I'd much rather be an auctioneer." "I remember perfectly," he says, "the deed which determined my future calling. One evening I asked for a pen and paper to copy the engraving of a dog. My motive, I freely confess, was merely to get an additional hour before going to bed; but my parents were so delighted with the sketch that not only was I presented with sixpence, but from that moment and on such evidence I was regarded as the genius of the family, and my schoolmasters were informed that all other learning must be considered secondary to this great gift."

In contrast to Mr. Frith, Marcus Stone, R. A., declares that he had the impulse to be a painter almost from the first moment of his life. His father was an artist of fame, and Mr. Stone began his own brilliant career, at the mature age of four, by covering a white mantelpiece with drawings. So precocious was the budding Academician that his first picture was seen on the Academy walls when the artist was a boy of 17.

Sir Lawrence Alma-Tadema was another infant prodigy whose first efforts in art were made at the age of 4; but it was only when his father realized that his very life depended on being allowed to follow his natural bent that the boy was allowed to substitute art for the study of the law, for which his father had designed him.

Leslie Ward, too, had a long struggle against parental opposition to an art career. "Perceiving my strong leaning toward art," he says, "my father opposed it as much as he could, and sent me to Sydney Smirke, R. A., to study architecture; this being, to his thinking, a more lucrative branch of the profession, and a less precarious one than that of a painter. The artistic side of my work interested me greatly, but bricks and mortar always seemed to go against the grain." And it was only after a long struggle that his father gave way and allowed him to enter as a student at the Royal Academy.

Sir Edward Burne-Jones had no thought whatever of an art career; in fact, he was destined for the church, until, as an Oxford undergraduate, he came under the influence of William Morris and Rossetti, and was induced to leave the University and take up the study of painting.

Holman Hunt was for many years an auctioneer's clerk before a happy sketch of an apple woman drawn in his spare office moments decided him to abandon the pen for the palette; while Ford Madox-Brown, more fortunate, was sent to Bruges at 14 to study art under Gregorius, and had a picture in the Academy before he was 20.

The late Sidney Cooper's first training in art was as apprentice to a coach painter; Sir Wyke Bayliss found his way to fame through an architect's office; Luke Fildes, R. A., worked for twenty years as a newspaper illustrator before he even sought admission to the Academy Schools; and E. J. Gregory drew on wood for the Graphic and other papers for many a year before he even dreamt of ever being a Royal Academician. Edwin A. Abbey won a world-wide reputation as an illustrator of books and magazines before he touched brush and palette in earnest; and David Murray, R. A., prefaced his distinguished career as a painter by eleven years of drudgery at an office desk.

Henry Woods, R. A., had nearly reached his thirtieth birthday before he painted his first picture, although for many years he had been an excellent illustrator of books; and, in striking contrast, Walter Crane was only a boy in knickerbockers when he spent every spare hour in "stalking cattle and sheep in the fields, whenever he could get a shot at them with pencil or brush." His first patron was a milkman, who was so delighted with the boy-artist's sketch of his pony that he rewarded him with a glass of milk and a free pass into his yard, "which was full of cocks and hens, cows and calves," a perfect paradise for the budding and ambitious artist. Mr. Crane was but 16 when his first Academy picture was exhibited.

But surely no man ever found his way to art fame by such a strange route as Tom Browne, R. I. "At the tender age of 11," he says, "I left school and took over the important and arduous post of errand boy to a firm of milliners. It was my business to carry round hats and bonnets to purchasers." Later, he was attached to a lithographic firm as a designer, "undertaking odd jobs after business hours, such as designing labels for cigar boxes," and he was quite delirious with joy when the editor of a comic paper accepted a number of his drawings, "for which he proposed to pay me thirty shillings!—six months of my lithographic pay. NESTS WEIGHING FIVE TONS.

The largest birds' nests are to be found in Australia. The Australian jungle fowl build for nests great mounds, 15 feet in height and 125 or 150 feet in circumference. Grass, leaves, and other vegetable matter are used in the construction of the nests, which easily weigh a ton.

The Australian brush turkeys, working in colonies, build pyramidal nests even larger. One of these nests, on being removed, filled seven carts, and its total weight was five tons.
